

REFUGEES FROM NO MAN'S LAND SENT BACK TO FRANCE BY GERMANY

Made homeless by the Hun. Peasants passing into Switzerland from Germany after being torn from their homesteads in the occupied regions of northern France. They are on their way to southern France, but hope soon to be home. The Swiss are most hospitable. Note the soldier with a baby.

Photo, Paul Thompson.

Most pitiful of all the exiled French are the babies. Their condition early led to the establishment of a nursery near the German frontier where kindly Red Cross nurses bathe the little ones and equip them with warm, clean clothes.

Photo, Paul Thompson.

Fighting amid snow in midsummer in the great Italian advance. Alpini on outpost duty in the Austrian Alps with barricade of sandbags to guard against rifle fire.

Photos, Paul Thompson.

Above — Moving genius of the Italian army, Gen. Cadorna, with Gen. Sassoni.

Photo, Central News.

At Right—Signalling to British trawlers from searchlight station on an English headland that U-boats have been sighted.

Photo, Central News.

Girl scouts in camp on De Lancey Nicoll's estate near Ossining learning to can peaches. In addition to studying food conservation they have military drills. Sometimes they play, but it's mostly hard work.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.