FAIRBANKS SCORES IN NEWEST FILM

"The Man From Painted Post" Makes Hit—Maxine Elliott in Debut.

It is almost useless to review the feature picture at the Rialto Theatre this week. As soon as most film fans read that it is Douglas Fairbanks in "The Man From Painted Post" they will probably drop the paper and rush off to see it for themselves. However, for the benefit of those who like to be told that a picture is good before they make up their own minds about it, it is stated that most persons would do well to watch. This is a brisk tale of the early days of the West. Fairbanks has lately taken to shooting full of holes. He brims over in the part of Fanny Jim Sherman, whose business—would do well to watch. HUGH WARD STILLS MIRTH OF 'PRIARS'

He Makes Them Show Intense Loyalty to America at War. URGES CONSTANT GIVING Premier Holman of Australia Also Turns Funmakers to Serious Thinking.

The Friars gathered in the great hall of the monastery, 110 West Forty-eighth street, last night to pay homage to H. J. (Hughy) Ward, a Friar who went to Australia years ago as an actor and returned as head of the greatest theatrical syndicate in the antipodes and known to America as the half owner of the Boston Red Sox. The Friars came, as of yore, to hide their love of a manly character under banter and jest, to conceal their sworn fealty by pranks at the expense of the man they complimented. They stayed to cheer the Allies.

It was the first time that the club had ever honored a member from a foreign clime. And it was probably the first time that the Friars, famed as the jolly men of stargeland, were ever swept from their programme of fun and, forgetting their profession of laughter, they joined in a demonstration that almost shook the cloistered walls as the men leaped to their feet and cheered again and again for the cause of the Allies and the noble part Australia has played.

Beginning of His Stage Career. "Our guest entered the theatrical field by holding horses in front of the Crescent Theatre in Chestnut street, Philadelphia," he said. "After three nights he opened a lively stable. I don't know where he got the horses. "He comes from a family that is theatrical. His grandmother is Fannie Ward. He became an actor, and in the Denver Post of November 5, 1885, there appeared this note: 'Hugh Ward played King Lear at the Palace Theatre last night. He played the king as if he expected some one was going to play the ace next.' "He went to Australia. As has been said, 'Why go 11,000 miles and then arrive at Jersey City?'" people of Australia. We look to Great Britain as our mother country, as the head of our family, if I may say so, but we look to your land as our big hunky brother—our great big brother Sam, whose achievements we hope to equal and whose entrance into our fight we know means victory." As he closed his audience leaped to their feet and cheered again and again and the Premier was forced to stand and bow his acknowledgments. "When the room hushed after the outburst it was thought that the fun would resume. Ward was known as a good fellow who likes to get more sport than to return banter for banter, joke for joke. He was the next speaker, and the audience eagerly awaited his sallies.

Raymond Hitchcock, inspired by Wolf's statement that Ward left America an actor and returned a useful citizen, told of his own experiences as a useful citizen when he sold shoes in the Philadelphia department store. Hitchcock's voice, which is much on the order of a curlycomb at work on a telegraph pole, seemed to have a most disturbing effect upon the Hon. William A. Holman, the Premier of Australia, who is a staunch admirer of Ward and who sat last night at the speakers' table. Raymond was more or less flustered by the fact that he was to appear in the next half hour at the Ritz-Carlton at a society war relief affair, and although he would not admit it, appearances indicated that his hair had been especially banged for the occasion.

Premier Holman Speaks. After a pleasing tribute to Mr. Ward by Fred Niblo, Premier Holman was introduced. Premier Holman, a type of British colonial made somewhat familiar to Americans since the entry of America in the war, showed beneath his smile that all has not been easy sailing for the men of Australia in the past three years. With crisp sentences he told of the work of Mr. Ward and his theatrical friends in raising $5,000,000 for war relief in Australia. He praised Ward as a man and as a lover of the best that the stage can give the public. But he could not refrain from expressing the thought of the part America is to play in giving the decisive thrust which is to end the war.

In closing his message he said: "There has never been any thought but a most warm friendship and admiration for your great Union upon the part of the people of Australia. We look to Great Britain as our mother country, as the head of our family, if I may say so, but we look to your land as our big hunky brother—our great big brother Sam, whose achievements we hope to equal and whose entrance into our fight we know means victory."

ACCUSED OF ROBBING FATHER.

Rich Man's Son, Victim of Drink. Sent to Jail. Samuel Bunn, 44 years old and a brilliant civil engineer, appeared in the Jamaica police court yesterday ragged, collarless and unshaven, to answer the charge of stealing a gold watch from his father, Walter H. Bunn, a wealthy lawyer of Richmond Hill. The father was formerly Public Works Commissioner for Queens and is a member of the firm of Bunn & Collins of Jamaica. Detective Harry Marks told the court that drink had led to the downfall of the engineer and that his father had complained that he broke into the house and stole a watch that had been the property of his dead mother. The watch was a present. Bunn was sent to jail in default of bond to appear to-day for examination.

The Mexican Problem

By C. W. Barron Author of "THE AUDACIOUS WAR"

In 1914 Mr. Barron went to Europe soon after the breaking out of the war to find its cause and probable duration. His book "The Audacious War" was the first to clearly see both the Hohenzollern ambitions and the world peace that must ultimately result from their defeat.

When the Allies' fuel oil base in Mexico seemed endangered Mr. Barron went to Tampico to investigate the oil situation. He found a larger problem and devoted himself to a study of the question of what would redeem Mexico. The result is his book "The Mexican Problem."

Don't miss the strong poem, the clear foreword and the illuminating introduction of Dr. Talcott Williams. From these you will learn history and the causes of all wars as you never found them set forth elsewhere.

Extracts from a Few of Many Facts and Principles Taken from the Book that are Worth Remembering

"The Mexican Problem is to my thinking worth its weight in gold—of all recent books the best by many degrees."

"Since reading Mr. Barron's book I am conscious of a larger sympathy with the people in Mexico, and of a conviction that they are more worthy of saving, of redemption, than I had supposed. One cannot help feeling glad to know that there is so much more of real good in them than previously supposed."

"The book conveys to the reader a knowledge of Mexico and the needs of its people in a way not heretofore adopted by any others attempting to give information on the subject."

"In fact, the whole book is a compendium of terse, trenchant and sententious wisdom on the Mexican Problem."

Programme is Informal. The entertainment which followed in the ballroom had been arranged by Miss Grace La Rue of Raymond Hitchcock's company and it was informal in character. The artists in ordinary street dress appeared in the ballroom, around which were placed small tables, where the audience took their coffee after the dinner. The decorations of the ballroom which had been arranged for the dinner to the Japanese Commission were still in place, making an effective background for the audience. Between the various turns and acts the Miramba Band played. Everything was in light vein and the programme introduced Duke Cross comedy songs, Amparita Farrar in Spanish songs, Clifton Crawford, Rock and White, Grace Vanderbilt and George Moore, who did one of their old vaudeville turns, a war burlesque, Raymond Hitchcock, who came in late after giving other charity performances; Leon Errol of the "Hinky-Koo" company, and the Dolly casters. Jean Sawyer and her dancing partner, George Harcourt, gave an exhibition of the modern dances; Montgomery and Perry were heard in songs and ballads, and Joseph Lotora, barytone, sang.
