

Little Pekinese Gives Bull Terrier Close Contest for Premier Position in Canine World as Big Show Closes

CROWN FAULTLESS DOGDOM MONARCH

Bull Terrier Owned by Canadian Adjudged Champion at Westminster Show.

PEKINGESE IS RESERVE Phantom of Ashcroft Placed Second After Disagreement Between the Judges.

Haymarket Faultless, a bull terrier owned and bred by R. H. Elliott of Ottawa, Canada, was crowned king of dogdom yesterday afternoon in Madison Square Garden. He was adjudged the best dog of any breed, age or sex at the forty-second annual show of the Westminster Kennel Club.

Despite the fact that the two judges, Charles Hopton and Vinton Breece, disagreed, and George Thomas, the referee, was called into the ring to break the deadlock, the victory was the most popular yet scored in the history of the show.

Mr. Hopton insisted that the Pekingese was the best dog, but Mr. Breece was of the opinion that the terrier deserved premier honors. Mr. Thomas also favored Faultless, and to Canada went the title.

For the remainder of an hour while the judges were deliberating and examining the dozen noted canines which had previously carried the right to compete for the title in the Garden, fairly shook with saliva of applause.

A Dog Well Named. There have been more enthusiastic demonstrations of approval for such a wild scene occur at a dog show.

Every one of the dozen highly bred and costly competitors carried applause that showed the Pekingese was remarkable. In the opinion of thousands of the fanciers who crowded around the ring Faultless truly was faultless.

They could not pick a flaw in his dog, and the second he entered the arena until Faultless was taken from the building by the referee.

Besides there were hundreds in the crowd who did not want to see a toy which weighs less than four pounds follow over the stage in dogdom.

The victory of Faultless was well earned. The beautiful little Pekingese was not the only notable one who compelled to defeat, for in the dozen which faced the judges in their best condition were two former world champions.

Mr. Hopton's champion dog, the English shepherd stunner, which was monarch in 1912 and 1913. Every dog which went in for the special possessed sufficient quality and points to make him a worthy king.

Not Discouraged by Cheers. Faultless seemed to know that it was a trying moment for his master and he was doing his best to gratify Mr. Elliott's desire to win stellar honors.

Most dogs, but for a high spirited bull terrier to remain demurely in the presence of such a demonstration of approval which has been considered extraordinary.

With the thousands lined up a score deep around the ring cheering their mightiest, the other dogs, which were being sent back to the ring, Faultless looked neither to the right nor to the left and posed with the self-possession of a monarch in the dogdom.

Mr. Hopton declared Faultless was a wonder, but he thought Phantom of Ashcroft deserved more truly to be adjudged the champion of the show. He was in twenty years, he said, both before and after Faultless had been declared king, that he is a bit too full in cheek.

Mr. Hopton declared that Phantom was a wonderful little dog, but that he was not nearly as good as the terrier, in that he was unable to pick a flaw in the champion of the show.

Champion Dog of Westminster Show, Closest Rival and a Disappointed Entry

CHAMPION CONGO WYCOLLAR BOY. Mrs. Roy A. Rainey's wire haired fox terrier, champion of 1917, which was "given the gate" in the Garden yesterday.

PHANTOM OF ASHCROFT. The imported Pekinese owned by Elbridge Gerry Snow, Jr.

Again every bone and muscle was examined, the most expected, their coats ruffled and unruffled. Then Snowflower was given the gate, and only the Pekingese and the bull terrier remained.

The judges started their examination of the two contenders all over again, and every time Faultless was put through a pass or handled by a judge a roar of applause went up from the crowd.

While they were conferring in the center of the ring silence reigned. Suddenly the referee stepped forward, rose far above his head. It was a signal for help from the referee.

The crowd seemed to recognize its meaning and let forth a burst of applause that fairly shook the building.

They believed it meant the defeat of the Pekingese. Mr. Thomas lost no time in getting down to business. He put the two contestants through their paces and examined each minutely.

He lifted Phantom in his arms and inspected him from nose to tail. Then he lifted his finger and pointed toward Faultless. It was a signal of triumph for the bull terrier.

As the verdict was rendered Mr. Snow ran forth and was the first to congratulate Mr. Elliott on the victory.

"Congratulations," he said. "You have a real champion and I'm glad it was such a noble fellow who beat me."

In an instant the Canadian exhibitor was showered with congratulations. It wasn't Mr. Elliott who was lauded. He was not called upon to speak.

BOSTON CURLERS WIN OVER UTICA IN FINAL

Possession of Stockton Cup Decided by Score of 21-19.

It was largely the work of the veteran curlers which known as the "father of curling in Boston," that won the trophy to-day. McGraw was skip of the team.

Utica defeated the Burn Bros club's second team by 17 to 14 in the semi-finals.

One of the outstanding features of the game was the brilliant playing of Gray, Princeton's right guard, who repeatedly smothered the attempts of the Cornell team to score.

Trimbly, right forward for Princeton, was the high scorer. He shot three baskets. Stewart, Cornell's left forward, also played an aggressive game and was responsible for two baskets.

BIG THREE SURE TO COMPETE IN GAMES

Will Take Part in Track and Field Championships, Says Romeyn Berry.

Not only is it certain that the league, college track and field championships will be held this spring, but it is equally sure that Harvard, Yale and Princeton will be strongly represented.
