

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, MARCH 17, 1918.

Copyright, 1918, by the Sun Printing and Publishing Association.

Here is the Kaiser again, at the salute and wearing three iron crosses outside, while the Crown Prince has only one showing. The picture, taken on the western front, is the most recent of the pair.

Photo from Central News.

Two of the first Americans wounded in France, Charles Geigner of Chicago, Ill., at the left, and E. Darland of Petersburg, Ill., at the right. The latter, an engineer, fought at Cambrai. Both look cheerful despite the loss of limbs.

Copyright, Wyndham Press Service, from International Film.

Southampton honoring the heroic survivors of the ill-fated Tuscania. Some of the thousand odd American soldiers are shown marching through crowded streets to a complimentary theatrical performance. The behavior of these men when the ship was torpedoed reflected the highest credit upon them and their countrymen alike. They came through the test with flying colors.

Photo from International Film Service.