

D IN THE TRENCHES CANS ABROAD

Above—A soldier awakes his tired out bunkie after the noon rest to continue the march.

The ceaseless roar of our guns is becoming like the sound of a heavy surf. Here are American batteries in action with the smoke still arising from the last charge.

Above—Our military chiefs in France. At right: Gen. Pershing, at left Gen. Tasker H. Bliss, American representative at the Inter-allied War Council.

At Right—Speeding up the arrival of the mail from home. There are always lots of volunteers for this work.

At Left—High above our quarters in Lorraine fly ceaselessly the watchful guardians of the air, the eyes of our army.
Copyright Western Newspaper Union.

A halt on the march to the front. The men of the 166th Infantry, Rainbow Division, resting in the snow during the journey from a French seaport to training quarters in Lorraine.

