

These American fighting men are on their way to the trenches. They have just disembarked from a train near the Alsace front and are forming their lines preparatory to starting the march to the trenches. They will be trained with veteran French soldiers for a while.

Copyright, International Film.

Pershing's men on leave at Aix-les-Bains, the American soldiers' recreation city in France, all dressed up for a big masquerade ball in the dancing hall of the Casino.

Copyright, International Film.

A detail of Pershing's men on the Lorraine front is shown here making a way through barbed wire for a raid on the German trenches.

Copyright, International Film.

Off for the front again after a few days leave at Aix-les-Bains. Infantrymen at the station waiting for a train.

Copyright, International Film.

The checker room in the Casino at Aix with some of our men watching a couple of spirited games. All branches of the army are represented in this gathering. Both players and spectators have seen active service and can be classed as veterans.

Copyright, International Film.