

Heavy fighting is breaking out again in Italy as the springtime melts snow and makes operations possible. Italian troops are on the offensive in some sectors and are shown here in action along the Piave, advancing behind a heavy barrage. Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

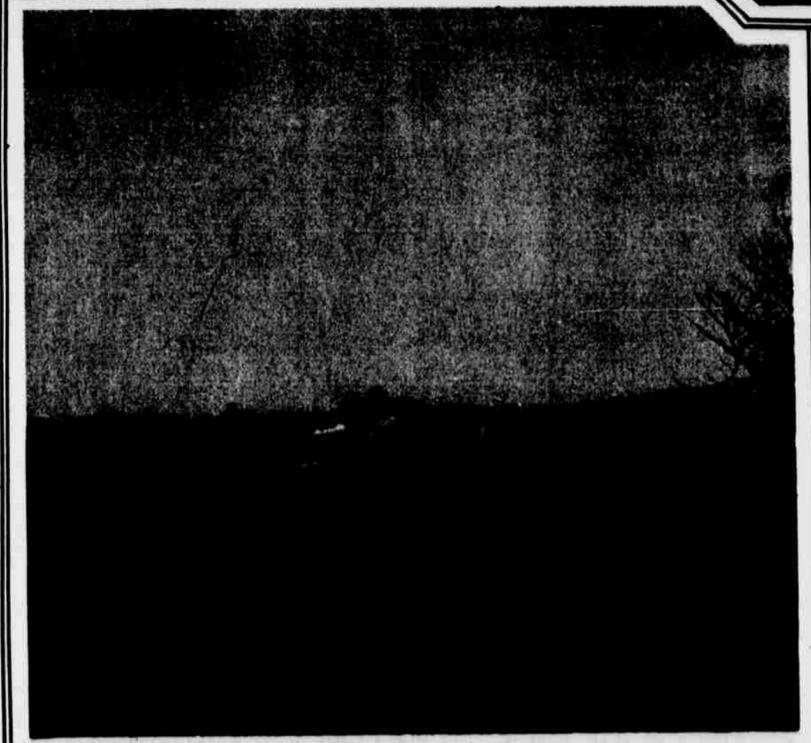

At the left is Capt. Kermit Roosevelt, seated with fellow British officers on the edge of a captured Turkish trench in Palestine.

"First to Fight" is the proud motto of Uncle Sam's marines. By way of demonstrating this in a practical way 800 of them formed this living message—and did it all in just seven minutes—"somewhere in America." Photo from Underwood & Underwood

Seldom has a better photograph been taken of the cloudlike after effects of the explosion of a big shell. Austrian heavy guns are bombarding a road in front of Italian trenches. Photo from Central News.

Big guns just "eat up" shells when they are really in action. The projectiles shown here won't last long when the monster cannon gets warmed up. Photo from Central News.
