

"Poultry, Peace, Prosperity, and Pigeons." If one needs a motto, might be taken as the slogan of the successful exhibition of the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association, which closed yesterday at the Madison Square Garden. There is no need to dilate on the excellence of the show. It is sufficient to say that while some shows held in the same building have surpassed it in the number of the exhibit none has ever held more birds of the very highest quality.

red Houdan, won three of the four miscellaneous classes this time. This, but for the change in color, exactly reproduces the familiar mottled Houdan and is a very striking and handsome bird. color or if one prefers the Red, White and Blue. The old variety in mottled Houdans has an increased following and was well represented both in the regular classes and in the pens. The breed is especially being cultivated on Long Island, which is also true of the Lackey Invaders, and is a general utility fowl which may be relied upon for its due quota of eggs regularly. It finds new friends daily. As to the regular breeds of enduring popularity, such as the Rocks, Wyandottes, Leghorns and Orpingtons, with the Rhode Island Reds, nothing need be said. Old hands and beginners at chicken raising know all their good points. Regarding the Games, what there was a falling off in the number of pit Games, the quality was all there. There is a distinct advance in the number of Cornish Games exhibited. In a general way all this applies to the Bantams also.

Only four of the men in active service to promote the success of the show were present in a managerial way at the opening exhibition in the Garden thirty years ago. The quartet were W. J. Stanton, E. B. Thompson, of Barred Rock fame, D. Lincoln Orr, now in the Government poultry service, and T. A. Havemeyer, president since its inception of the New York Poultry and Pigeon Association.

Mr. Havemeyer was an enthusiast in poultry and pigeon raising from school boy and has been devoted to them ever since as an amateur fancier. As a young man he was one of the best of American polo players and with E. C. Potter, the late Charles S. Bates, and R. Livingston Beeckman, the more information of the Garden to the Country Club of Westchester team in many important tournaments at that time on the home field, Meadowbrook, Cedarhurst, and Newport. He has also flourished and still plays tennis at the New York Racket and Tennis Club. He has put into his connection with the Garden show the principles of fair play and true sportsmanship that have always marked his connection with sport and recreation.

Since the twenty-sixth annual show in 1913 Mr. Havemeyer has had an able assistant in Charles D. Cleveland, a New York lawyer and nephew of the late President Grover Cleveland, who has filled the position of secretary since the retirement of H. V. Crawford. Mr. Cleveland carries on the affairs at the Garden show with great energy and thoroughness, bringing to his legal training a practical knowledge of poultry raising. He has a farm at Easton, N. J., and besides raising White Wyandottes and Columbian Plymouth Rocks he is a specialist in Guernsey cattle. His exhibits of pigeons were most notable in the Garden show, and he has carried each bird until related in a wire holder of his own device that is very ingenious.

MORE GARDENS THAN EVER BEFORE NEEDED THIS YEAR.

There is famine in Europe. In Russia the hunger victims are parading the streets asking to be shot. May such conditions never exist in this country. More gardens are needed this year than ever before. Every family that can should raise as much of its own food as possible. Vegetables, poultry and rabbits for meat.

Resilience, patience and energy should be taken from the garden. Plant onion sets. Replant often for succession and grow all the vegetables possible. This will reduce living expenses greatly. The fresh vegetables from the garden are healthful and so is the exercise in the open air making the garden.

If all who could would force their gardens this year to the limit of production it would release food to be sent to Europe to the hungry hordes there.

LOBELIA COMPACTA

This class forms compact, bushy plants about six inches high and they are covered with bloom throughout the season. They are excellent plants for edgings, ribbon bedding and use in the garden generally, as well as for pot culture. They are annuals, flowering the first season from seed. The seed should be started early in the house, when the plants are wanted for early flowering. The best varieties are sold at ten and fifteen cents a packet.

Crystal Palace Composita has reddish brown foliage, with deep blue flowers. Sapphire has large flowers, for a lobelia, deep blue with purple white center. This variety is excellent for vases, hanging baskets or window boxes, where a drooping effect is desired.

Bedding Queen is the most dwarf and therefore exceptionally good for ribbon bedding. The flowers are violet with white eye. Heterophylla Major grows about six inches high forming bushlike plants, covered with sky blue flowers with white eyes.

be upon us. The snowdrops and crocuses will soon be peeping up above the top of the ground, followed by hyacinths, tulips and daffodils. The season in the garden last year was a long one. The old Pink Lady rose was in bloom almost up to Christmas, the chrysanthemums, galliarthias and other autumn flowers held on later than usual, and now the garden will soon be under way again.

Get whatever tools may be needed for the season. There will be no labor about them later. Get the seeds wanted, order the nursery stock to be shipped at a later date. In other words get things in order so there will be no trouble or delay when it is time to begin planting.

GOOD SEED AND BAD.

There is nothing more common among amateur gardeners than complaints of the mortality of seedlings. I hear complaints of this sort in letters from growers in various parts of the country, and I assume at once, that most planters who have had such bad experience with seedlings are people who hunt around for the cheapest, that is, the lowest price for everything they buy.

Now in seeds especially a low price seldom goes along with the best quality. Skillful seed growing and careful selection and reposing out of variant specimens cost time of skilled men and a good deal of extra labor, while it is easy to collect the refuse of market gardeners at a low figure to meet and, and at the same time they take away what was left unsold the previous season. Whether these are put into other boxes being refilled I cannot say, but have my opinion on the subject. Last summer I found that I had omitted from my early order any okra seed, and had not enough seed of late cabbage. Not wishing to send off a city for two papers of seed, I determined to test the box seed. I got a paper of okra seed marked "Perkins Mammoth." I have been growing this variety for several years. I also got a paper of Drumhead cabbage seed. The colored pictures on these papers were very handsome specimens. Well, I planted the okra and it grew strongly enough, and I got pods, some short, some long, some thick, and some slim, and plants that grew three feet tall while others grew seven feet or more in height, and not a typical pod of Perkins okra in the whole lot.

The cabbage seed also grew finely, but three-fourths of the plants never showed any inclination to set a seed head, though there were a few fine heads. Now to a market grower that would mean a dead loss of the greater part of the crop, while with me, having plenty of good cabbage from seed I bought from a responsible seedman, it meant only more information of how people get cheated in garden seed. My intention in buying the five cent papers was to test them and to prove what I had all along believed concerning this class of seed. I could have gotten from the same store seed papers of the first class seed house at 10 cents a packet, and doubtless those would have shown better results.

Take the cabbage seed alone. A 10 cent paper from a reputable seed house would have given me plants nearly all of which would have headed and given me a profitable crop. The other packet for five cents was the dearest by far, for it made a crop that was nearly worthless. Therefore, what I wish especially to urge is, that the best garden seed always command the highest price, and are far cheaper than any low priced seed on the market. To get the best vegetables and the best crop of them, get the best seed to be had and pay what such seed are worth. Seed production and sale are, more than most merchandise, a matter of confidence. The dealer must have confidence in the integrity and carefulness of the seed grower, and those seed growers are scattered all over the world. Denmark supplies the cauliflower seed for the world. France used to grow all the peach seed, and still grows the
