The Army's big center was such in evidence this afternoon and led Ashmead a merry chase. Johnston, a new man, played a great game at forward. He registered five of the Army's field goals.

The London Letter

Special Correspondence to The Sun.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The return of British tennis experts from France and an accompanying influx of American players has revived interest in that ancient game. Mr. Pearing of Boston, former American champion, played at the Queens Club the other day and made quite a showing. There is a disposition to reopen the world's championship controversy, although a number of people know that the title holder of America is the rightful title holder. London would like to see Walter Kinsella, a professional, meet Jay Gould in New York, and the winner to come here to play the best in England.

The present position of the championship of the world appears so far as can be gathered to be as follows: G. F. Covey, the professional, is Major the Hon. R. S. Lytton, at Cratford Park, in March, 1914, played Jay Gould in a thirteen set match at Philadelphia. Covey being the holder. Mr. Gould was decidedly the better player. He has recently been announced as a number of people know that the title holder of America is the rightful title holder. London would like to see Walter Kinsella, a professional, meet Jay Gould in New York, and the winner to come here to play the best in England.

Ernest Barry, holder of the world's sculling championship, who was wounded while fighting with the British forces in France and was invalided home, will be able to defend his title in London. The Australian champion has agreed to again meet Barry and the match now is in the making.

Another Barry Heard From. When Barry spoke at the famous champion sculler William Harvey was being in Budapest. He was made prisoner and was not allowed to return to England until the signing of the armistice. He arrived in London recently. He is staying with his brother Barry, who is now on leave. William Barry was the holder of the world's sculling championship of England in 1907, but was defeated by Mortlake. He has been a member of the British team in the world's sculling championship in 1907, but was defeated by Mortlake. He has been a member of the British team in the world's sculling championship in 1907, but was defeated by Mortlake.

Arthur Gould, the famous English and Welsh international rugby footballer, died with dramatic suddenness this month. Arthur Gould was born at Newport fifty-four years ago, and was without any doubt one of the greatest rugby footballers of all time. He learned the game in his own town, and very early he had acquired a reputation as a centre three-quarter. He obtained his Welsh "cap" in 1885 and in 1891 he was selected to play for the national team. He played for England on six occasions, which figure constituted a record for some years. Gould was captain of the Newport team during its period of glory, while he also played the "triple crown" in 1890.

Gould's proficiency was not confined to rugby football, though it was in this branch of sport that he made his name. He frequently played cricket for Monmouthshire and was an expert at hockey and billiards.
