

NEW YORK, SUNDAY, MARCH 16, 1919.
Copyright, 1919, by the Sun Printing and Publishing Association.

THE 27TH
DIVISION
COMES HOME

The Leviathan, bearing 9,000 men of Gen. O'Ryan's fighting New Yorkers, steaming up the river to such an accompaniment of whistles, bells, sirens, horns and human noises as was seldom heard before. The city roared forth a welcome that is still reverberating. Photo by Sun Staff photographer.

The sight of their own Goddess was a welcome one to O'Ryan's men and they couldn't resist waving her a friendly greeting. Every such evidence they were really home again brought caps from their heads and cheers from their lips. Copyright, International Film.

Going through the preliminary stages of being mustered out down at Camp Mills, where the division is now quartered. Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

Major-Gen. John F. O'Ryan, commanding officer of the 27th Division (left), and Brig.-Gen. Cornelius Vanderbilt. Photographed after the Leviathan docked. Photo by Sun Staff photographer.