

HAYMAN AND PLAYS SAIL FOR ENGLAND

Bumper Crop Next Season of Frohman Productions His Mission. STEWART FILM ON R-34 William Harris, Jr., Returns to Report London Success of "Abraham Lincoln."

Shipping news about the seagoing theatrical profession continues brisk. Here's Air Hayman, general manager for Charles Frohman, Inc., having been seized with the wanderlust by reading of the departure of stage folk, now that the ban on contraband has been lifted, up and sails for Europe yesterday on Friend England's boat, the Mauretania.

This is Mr. Hayman's first transatlantic trip since the death of Charles Frohman on the Lusitania, in May, 1915, as Mr. Hayman's duties in carrying on the business in Charles Frohman's name has kept him in close attendance on his desk at the Empire Theatre. With him went a life size ambition to break the soil for a bumper crop of Frohman productions next season.

On the special Olympic boat train from Halifax there arrived yesterday morning, too early for New Yorkers to turn out to celebrate the event. Miss Guida, the famous Italian sprinter, who came here under contract to F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest to reduce the time records for staging new dances in a second act of "Chu Chin Chow," starting August 4.

The Wins Dash on Shipboard. One of the most noted past performances of this young woman, who is still in her early twenties, was winning the Captain's cup for the 300 yard open championship of the Olympic on the way over, tearing over the finish line ten yards to the good without missing a step or needing an orchestra. Miss Guida trained for this event by taking charge of the dances at the Majesty Theatre in London for the past four years.

Another note that all the ship news reporters fed down was the announcement yesterday that the R-34 started back to England with the first arrival of motion picture film, consisting of selections by Anita Stewart on the celluloid. The single reel was carried by Lieut. John D. Shott, chief engineer of the blimp, for delivery to Sir William Murray, director of the British film industry, who is reported to have gallantly sacrificed a life preserver to his own equipment for the privilege of lashing Miss Stewart to the rigging.

William Harris, Jr., was smuggled into the city from England yesterday wearing a brand new smile which hinged on London success of "Abraham Lincoln," his latest theatrical effort. When Mr. Harris bought the American rights for John Drinkwater's play, which he was doubtful whether Lincoln would be the success on the stage that he was in the Presidency, but in London he found he had been upheld by a great majority. When the play is produced here, Mr. Harris indicated, the cast would be 100 per cent American.

Harris Brings Back Play. He announced that his cargo also contained "The Lost Leader," by Lennox Hewley, which is being produced in the arena of Parnell, has drawn London crowds who apparently did not let Home Rule interfere with their enjoyment of the theatre. Mr. Harris did not let himself as to whether he would produce this play before Eamon De Valera returns to Ireland. His first production of American plays, he said, would be "The House of Commons," the comedy by Samuel Shipman and Percival Wilde, which was tried out in Washington and which will be put on the hands of a trainer at the theatre immediately. "East Is West," by Fay Bainter, will continue to rage unchecked at the Astor Theatre indefinitely.

Scholarship in "Breakfast in Bed." The new farce by Willard Mack and Hilliard Booth, which is said to be based on a theme popular with actresses. The play will make its first surprise attack on Stamford on August 8. Florence Moore will star in it, and Will Denning, Dorothy Mortimer, Leon Gordon, Thomas Meade, Julius J. Reilly and Harry Hanson will follow in her wake.

A new play by Martin Brown entitled "Penny" is being watched like a hawk by the Garrick Theatre, Detroit. The leading roles have for godparents Jessie Bonstelle and Paul Gordon—no relation to the famous Kluge—by the way, tells the Kilborn Gordon, by the way, tells the Noted New York Physician, 89 Years Old, Succumbs After Fainting Spell. ONCE A POOR IMMIGRANT 'Nestor of American Medicine' Loved and Honored by Doctors and Laymen.

BOLTON LANSING, Lake George, July 11.—Dr. Abraham Jacobi, noted New York physician, died at his summer home here at 11 o'clock last night. Dr. Jacobi had been in his usual good health until three days ago. He complained yesterday of fatigue and about 4 o'clock suffered a fainting spell, after which he passed into a comatose state and died in that condition until the end. Dr. Jacobi was in his ninetieth year.

With the aged physician when he died were his daughter, Mrs. George McAneny of New York, and Mrs. Francis Huber and Willy Meyer. Funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock to-morrow at the home of the deceased, 123 East Forty-seventh street, where he lived with his daughter, Mrs. George McAneny, wife of the former President of the Manhattan Club.

Known throughout professional circles as "The Grand Old Man of Medicine," Dr. Jacobi seldom gave a thought to his own health. Despite this he was still in active practice at an age when most men feel justified in seeking retirement. If not indeed compelled by age, he would have continued to practice until he was 100 years old.

Called the Savior of Babies. When Dr. Jacobi was about to be inaugurated as president of the American Medical Association in 1912 he was presented by the retiring executive, the late Dr. John B. Murphy, as the Nestor of American medicine. At a dinner given in his honor at the Waldorf-Astoria, Dr. Jacobi was introduced by Nathan Straus as "the Father Abraham of the twentieth century—the savior of babies."

Known as Humanitarian. As has been hinted, each recurring birthday anniversary for many years had been celebrated with a dinner given by other leading physicians. On these occasions he was the recipient of watches, canes or other tokens of affection from his fellow practitioners and "assistants." At his eighty-sixth birthday dinner Dr. Jacobi said:

It means more to be honored for my small contribution to the effectiveness of medicine, for the little I have done for institutions founded to relieve the suffering, than to be given the medal of the Legion of Honor or the insignia of the Iron Cross.

Frederick Evans. Frederick Evans, former New York newspaper man, died at Cranford Park Sanatorium, Charlotte, N. C., yesterday. He was stricken in August, 1913, while on a tour of the world.

Engagements Announced. Henry R. Lounsbury, of this city and Bedford, N. Y., announced yesterday the engagement of his daughter, Miss Beatrice Lounsbury, to John Philip Rentz, of New York, and Montreal, N. Y. Mr. Lounsbury, who was introduced to society a few years ago, was a Captain in the Ambulance Corps of New York during the war, and was the youngest woman in the bank in the service. She is fond of outdoor sports, especially golf, and has played in many of the women's tournaments in the vicinity of New York.

Engagements Announced. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Clark Baldwin, of Bolton Landing, and Shallow Brook Farm, Mount Kisco, N. Y., announced yesterday the engagement of their second daughter, Miss Cynthia Bradley Baldwin, to Nathaniel Ruggles London, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hutton London, of 19 East Fifty-third street and Great Neck, L. I. Miss Baldwin was one of last year's debutantes, but on account of the war had no formal introduction to society. Mr. London served during the war as an Ensign in the United States Navy. His brothers, Stephen L. London and Henry L. London, were also in the navy. No date has been set for the wedding.

There is no page of medicine in this world which the name of Dr. Jacobi is not remembered, said a fellow practitioner a few years ago. In 1828, when there was a cholera scare and eleven cases actually developed, there was apprehension lest the country should quarantine here at 11 o'clock last night. Dr. Jacobi had been in his usual good health until three days ago.
