

Margerie Poir, James Gleason, Beatrice Noyes and Sue MacManamy in one of the scenes from "The Five Million," which started up recently at the Lyric Theatre.

Photo by White.

Martha Pierre is dressed in habiliments not commonly associated with the musical stage, but she, too, is in the Follies.

Photo, Alfred Cheney Johnston.

Pearl Eaton is likewise a member of the Ziegfeld troupe, but is far above Miss Irving and Miss Pierre—in one sense, that is. She is in the show on the roof over the so-called ground show in the New Amsterdam Theatre, where the others perform.

Photo, Alfred Cheney Johnston.

Looking at the above, one would be inclined to say that the title of "Oh, What a Girl!" was well chosen. It is the Shuberts' latest musical show.

Photo by White.

For the initiated only about one guess would be needed on the question of the show Margaret Irving was in. "The Follies" would be the natural answer, and that would be right, for Miss Irving is with the Ziegfeld galaxy.

Photo, Alfred Cheney Johnston.

Continuing on the subject of "Oh, What a Girl!" here is another specimen who proves that there is something in a name. Nancy Fair is her cognomen, and she certainly is.

Photo, Campbell Studio.