

Wives of Some Men
Now in the Public Eye

A recent portrait of Mrs. Enrico Caruso, wife of the famous tenor. She attends all of the operas in which her husband sings.

Mrs. Beith is the wife of Major Ian Hay Beith, who besides being a soldier of note has done some very excellent writing.
Photo by Bachrach.

At right—Mrs. Hunter Liggett, wife of Lieut.-Gen. Liggett, second in command to Gen. Pershing, who recently returned to this country with a remarkable war record.
Photo by Bachrach.

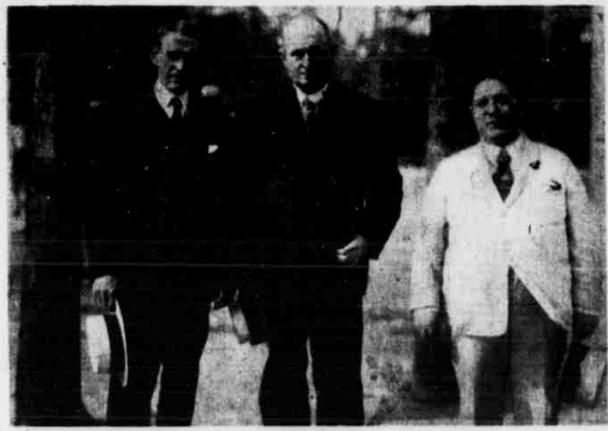

Mrs. A. C. Read, wife of Lieutenant-Commander Read, who successfully flew the seaplane NC-4 to Europe from this country.
Photo by Bachrach.

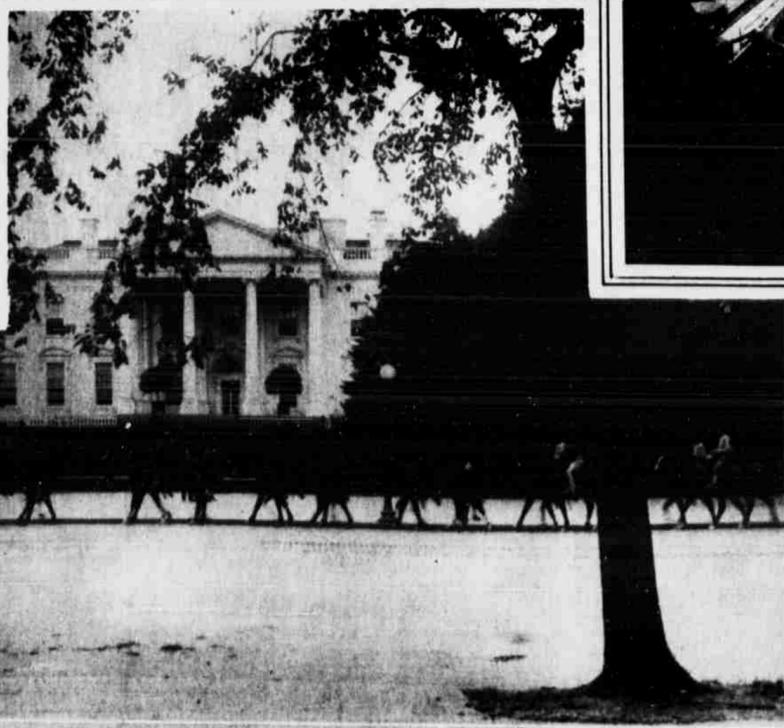

Mrs. William A. Bishop, wife of Lieut.-Col. William A. Bishop, Canada's premier ace, and one of the greatest, if not the greatest, fliers developed during the war.
Photo by Bachrach.

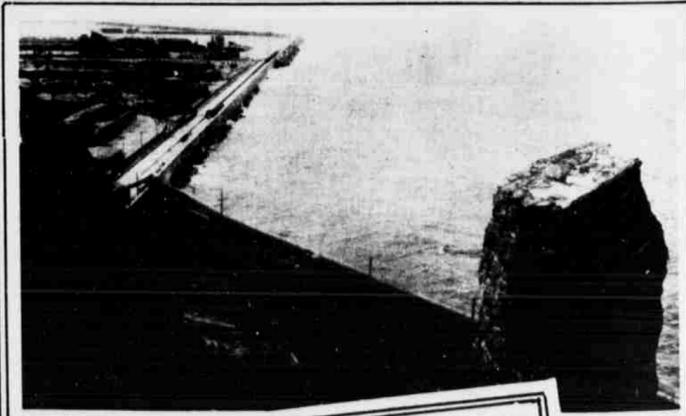

At left—Mrs. William N. Hensley, Jr., wife of Col. Hensley, U. S. A., who went along as an observer on the return trip of the R-34 to England.
Photo by Bachrach.

Three Democratic candidates for the gubernatorial nomination in New Jersey who put forth their claims in a recent public meeting. From left to right they are Edward I. Edwards, James R. Nugent and Frank H. McDermit.

At right—An unusual scene in front of the usually placid White House. A troop of cavalry patrolling the streets of Washington during the recent race riots.
Copyright, Underwood & Underwood.

First photograph since the war ended of Heligoland, the German naval fortress which is to be dismantled under the peace treaty. The view is of the mole and the harbor.

Charles Terry Ross is the only child of the Rev. and Mrs. William Neely Ross of New York.