

ACTORS' STRIKE NEAR END, BOTH SIDES INTIMATE

Frank Gilmore Tells Lexington Audience Peace Is Near on Rialto.

COHAN ALSO OPTIMISTIC Representatives of Labor Federation See Rift—Mann Cracks a Joke.

With both sides predicting a speedy return to the actors' strike yesterday, wisecracks along Broadway declared that the ice was breaking and navigation along the Rialto would soon be reopened.

The first definite indication to this effect came at a big mass meeting of the Actors' Equity Association at the Lexington Theatre, when rank Gilmore, the executive secretary, asserted that the end was coming sooner than any one expected—which started the betting that the strike was nearly finished.

Following intimations to the same effect from representatives of the Actors' Federation, George M. Cohan declared a similar statement last night at a crowded gathering of the Actors' Fidelity League at the Hotel Biltmore, which was notable among other things for the outbreak of a demand by Louis Mann, the vice-president, that one of these men be arrested for a remark slighting the Judiciary, which was perpetrated by Mr. Mann since the strike began.

Plan to Keep Curtain Up. While the hubbub was beginning to overtop here Mr. Cohan left to attend a conference at which he said plans would be laid to "keep the curtain up" a phrase used by Mr. Cohan in a speech that carried the house by storm. Among the productions which it was planned to reopen to "keep the curtain up" was "The Challenge," which Arch Selwyn declared would come out of cover at the Selwyn again on Saturday next with a cast of players and stage hands composed of "people who had been loyal."

The other plays among the five which Broadway had reason to believe would surge back to life were "East is West" and "Friendly Enemies," reported on Monday as ready to go on. "The White Scandals of 1919," said to be planned for Saturday, and the "Ziegfeld Follies," reported to be ready for a second opening night on either Saturday or Sunday. The full original cast of "Ziegfeld, Jr." and the original corps of loveliness, the only possible way for these productions to go on would be with the original Broadway cast, which was likely to add further excitement to the great White Way once the union workers grew busy.

The Producers Managers Association held an important conference last night, announcing that they would issue a statement about midnight.

A report was going the rounds that at the last meeting the managers voted 25 to 6 in favor of recognizing the Equity, but Arthur Hopkins, who has taken pains to see that the public gets the proper publicity from the managers during the strike, said the producers had not so far made known a changed front.

Playwrights in Action. The playwrights, banded together as the dramatic committee of the Authors League of America, at a meeting yesterday formulated plans to add to the managerial worries further in the hot weather. They appointed a committee consisting of Eugene O'Neill, August Thomas, Eugene Buck, Rupert Hughes and Owen Davis, to present to the managers assurances from Charles F. Mursell and Joseph E. Wideman, the hands and muscles of the strike, that they would not hold out for a closed shop as part of the settlement with the Equity.

actors, and similar guarantees from leaders of the Equity. The dramatists said they would ask the managers to resume productions of the playwrights' brain children on the basis of a contract that if the producers refused this ultimatum—for that would be its virtual character—the play writers threatened to obtain control of the plays under a writ of mandamus and to make the production themselves. They said they had heavy financial backing for independent undertakings. They also drew up a standard contract for the managers and have hurled at their devoted heads. This calls for the retention by the actors of the motion picture, foreign and stock rights to their work, which has usually gone to the producer in the past.

The statement of Frank Gilmore before the Actors' Equity Association, which was made at the Equity at the Lexington meeting presided over by Francis Wilson, the president, which almost made audible the cooing of the dove of peace, was as follows:

"We have something which we are not yet ready to divulge, but to the best of my knowledge and belief our waiting will be long. Because we are a combination of circumstances, we end will come sooner than many of you expect." Mr. Gilmore declared afterward to reveal the basis for this assertion, but only to the A. F. L. backed up his prediction.

Asks Profit Sharing. Another speaker at the meeting was Walter Hampden, who received an immense roar of approval when he said, "Let us recognize the manager and they are ready to recognize us." He demanded the abolition of the manager and the substitution for him of the actors, who would share the profits on a profit sharing basis. Other orators who made the hit of their careers were Lillian Russell, Richard Bennett, who has done practically as well as acting, and who lived up with the Equity; Hazel Dawn, Henry E. Dixey and Lillian Albertson, whose husband, Abe Levy, is a serious actor; and George M. Cohan, owner of the Etting Theatre, but who declared that "my family, in spite of its interests, is 100 per cent. Equity."

At the first meeting of the Fidelity League, Mr. Cohan, after declaring that Samuel Gompers told him last week that "he has never stood up behind contract breakers," made a statement as to the aims of the aims of the organization, in which he said that "from to-night on the Actors' Fidelity League seeks no new membership," and that the recognition of the manager position to-night that we were before. Within forty-eight hours, he asserted, "there will be a little sunshine around this town so far as actors are concerned."

Mr. Mann in the usual speech, having first suggested that representatives be sent to Congress to ask that body to pass a law which would prevent future strikes by actors, referred feelingly to the hindrances placed in the way of Beattie McCoy Davis during her appearances lately in the "Greenwich Village" and "The White Scandals of 1919," which Arch Selwyn declared would come out of cover at the Selwyn again on Saturday next with a cast of players and stage hands composed of "people who had been loyal."

The other plays among the five which Broadway had reason to believe would surge back to life were "East is West" and "Friendly Enemies," reported on Monday as ready to go on. "The White Scandals of 1919," said to be planned for Saturday, and the "Ziegfeld Follies," reported to be ready for a second opening night on either Saturday or Sunday.
