Has Been Given Inducement to Do So, Says
Formal Statement.

LADY JELICOE LEAVES

Dunsany Starts Home Expressing Gratitude—Other Notables on Adriatic.

With Viscount Grey of Falloden, special British Ambassador to the United States; Lady Jellicoe, Lord Dunsany, and a host of other persons prominent in politics, finance and literature among her passengers, the White Star liner Adriatic sailed at 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon for Cherbourg and Southampton. Sickness in cooling the ship resulted in postponing her departure for nearly three hours.

Viscount Grey was advised by telephone of the delay in the sailing hours and prolonged his stay at the Whitehall residence accordingly, so that he did not reach the pier until after 4. He appeared to be in better health than on his arrival in this country a few months ago and in spite of the bright sunlight was without the dark glasses which he wore on his arrival. That his physical condition was greatly improved was confirmed by Sir William Tyrrell, his secretary, who said the Ambassador had undoubtedly benefited by his stay here.

Though he consented to be photographed, Lord Grey's only communication to the public was made in the form of a written statement, as follows:

"I am going home on leave of absence because for special reasons my presence at home is desirable at the present moment.

"I have no public statement to make about public affairs, but I should like to say that the time I have spent in the United States has not only been very interesting, but I have been shown so much kindness and personal good will that I have been given strong inducement to return, and I shall look forward to continuing acquaintance with the many good friends I have met here."

Sir William Tyrrell, who gave up important duties in London to accept the comparatively minor post of secretary to the Ambassador, said that both he and Viscount Grey were counting on returning shortly to renew the friendships and acquaintances which they had made during their stay.

Lord Dunsany, the Irish poet and playwright, who has been in the United States for three months lecturing and supervising the production of several of his plays, also voiced his gratitude for the reception which he had received in this country and expressed his determination to return.

"I am grateful," he said, "not alone for the personal favors which I have received during my stay but also for the reception and recognition which my fancies have had." He remarked that nearly every contemporary Englishman of letters received his first recognition in the States.

Lord Dunsany is returning for the shooting and hunting season, and hopes to resume the life of outdoor sports, varied by occasional lapses into poetry, of which he was deprived by the war. "Though I found inspiration under war conditions," he said, "especially during heavy artillery activity, I found myself turning to poetry, and I recall especially one night in Fleetstreet Woods, when I wrote under the very flash of the guns."

Admiral Viscount Jellicoe went to the pier with Lady Jellicoe and remained on board the liner until just before she sailed. After waiting in line for a considerable time for her passports to be examined Lady Jellicoe said that she concluded from the formalities which she underwent in Ottawa before starting for this country that it was a difficult place to get to, but she was inclined to think that it was even more difficult to get out of.

Capt. and Mrs. M. H. Share, R. N., accompanied Lady Jellicoe. Capt. Share is the Admiral's secretary, and it was originally planned to have the whole party continue with the Admiral on his cruise to South Africa, but Lady Jellicoe's ill health made it advisable for her to return to England.

Others sailing on the liner were N. Dean Jay of J. P. Morgan & Co., Mrs. Elsie Dyer, Jr., of Providence, R. I.; Sir Edgar Jones and Lady Jones, Sir Alexander MacKenzie, James A. Milne, Assistant Secretary of State William Phillips, Major Cranford Stuart, D. S. O.; Lady Evelyn Ward and Arthur C. Train.

Strikes Affect 45 Clothing Plants.

The labor troubles in the cloak and suit trade spread to half a dozen more shops yesterday, bringing the total number of plants affected by strikes to forty-five. It was stated from the offices of the Cloak, Suit and Shirt Manufacturers' Association, 230 Fifth avenue, "The employers' side of the controversy will be submitted to Gov. Alfred E. Smith in Albany on Monday by a representative of the association."

FAKE WHISKEY HEAD SEIZED IN CATSKILLS

"Russo the Red" Accused of Making the Drink Which Caused 100 Deaths.

HE MAY BE EXTRADITED

Bay State Prosecutor Here in Effort to Obtain Proof of "Kill 'Em Quick" Liquor.

"Russo the Red," whose actual name has not been learned by revenue agents or civil authorities, was chased to a hiding place in the Catskill Mountains yesterday and brought under heavy guard to New York city Police Headquarters. According to Joseph P. Mulqueen, Jr., Assistant United States Attorney, he is the man responsible for the wholesale murder of the "whiskey" poison, which has caused 100 or more deaths here and in bordering New England States.

The process by which the prisoner was connected with the wholesale deaths from "Christmas boots" and traced to his house in the mountains has not yet been made public. All that is known is that the trail was picked up almost from the start of the investigation, that he was traced to a Brooklyn address, found to have left for other parts and then tracked to his retreat. The arrest was made by one of the best detectives of Col. Porter's squad of revenue men, Harold Dobbs, accompanied by Detective Batto of the Italian squad at Police Headquarters, and other police officers.

Mr. Mulqueen asserted that "Russo the Red" sold a quantity of poisonous liquor, which may be twenty-one or as many as fifty barrels, containing wood alcohol, receiving from his eager liquor dealing accomplices about $23,000.

"We have been after this man all the time," Mr. Mulqueen said. "Our information is that he planned the making and sale of all the poison whiskey that went into the Connecticut Valley. He did the mixing and distributing. He supplied Salsbery and Salsbery sold it to Romanelli."

The prisoner soon after he was brought to Manhattan was taken to the Federal building, where he was interrogated by Mr. Mulqueen and Charles H. Wright, District Attorney of Berkshire county, Massachusetts. No announcement was made after the conference beyond Mr. Mulqueen's general statement, but District Attorney Wright said if the evidence now gathering materialized "Russo the Red" would be extradited to Massachusetts and charged with the wholesale murder of the "whiskey" poison. Mr. Wright said he had seventeen other cases pending for prosecution, but he thought he would put "Russo the Red" first on the list.

The death total was increased yesterday with the report of another victim in Manhattan. Otto Wedmeyer, employed in a restaurant in Hoboken, was stricken blind and died last night in a rooming house in 124 East Twenty-eighth street. During the day two men were taken to Manhattan hospitals suffering from the effects of poison. They were Andrew Hudson, 70, of 691 Greenwich street, a longshoreman, and John Jarrett of 210 West Forty-ninth street, a clerk.

Hudson fell unconscious on the sidewalk near 105 Eighth avenue, and it was said was succumbing to failure of sight when he was removed to the New York Hospital. Jarrett was picked up from the sidewalk in Third avenue near Forty-second street and taken to Bellevue Hospital.

MURDER CHARGE FOR WOOD ALCOHOL SALE

Bay State to Ask Indictments
With Death Penalty.

BOSTON, Jan. 3.—Sixteen men held in connection with deaths from poison whiskey are to be charged with first degree murder, for which the penalty is death. So said a statement by Col. Alford P. Foote, head of the State Department of Public Safety.

Three other men, including the alleged leader of the "death drink" manufacturers, who is now held in New York, are wanted by the Massachusetts authorities. They, too, will be indicted for murder if they come into the custody of the Massachusetts police, Col. Foote said.

The prosecuting authorities in counties where the "whiskey" was sold are now preparing their case against the men held in connection with the traffic.
