North Carolina Repudiating Her Debt-The Governor's Message.

The message of the Governor, which was sent in recently, shows the debt of North Carolina to be thirty-four million eight hundred thousand dollars. The people are unable to pay the interest on this sum. The Governor recommends the sale of the railroad interests of the State to prevent repudiation, but at the same time says that no financial policy should be determined until the facts connected with the debt is ascertained, in order that some conclusion may be reached as to the disposition of the liabilities of the State.

After the message was received a resolution was offered in the House, and referred, reciting that as the debt was created by strangers under the bayonets, who voted the money to railroads, and otherwise embezzled the funds of the State, a provision should therefore be made for repudiating the entire State debt.

This radical Tammanyism in North Carolina sets Tammanyism in New York in the shade. New York city is not bankrupted by the Tammany stealings and driven to repudiation, though plundering there was large; not so in North Carolina; radical mismanagement there has bankrupted the commonwealth, and all the southern states, by radical carpet-bag rule, are now in the same bad and worse than beggarly condition. Here is something for Brown to write a chapter on.

The Bellefonte Republican has been grumbling about the tariff for the last two years like a fidgety old granny, and scolding at the democrats for interfering with the property of the laboring classes. We should like to ask granny Brown—a question we put to him two years ago and which he promised to answer "next week," but which he has neglected to answer up to this time—whether the radicals did not have complete power, for the last ten years, to pass any kind of tariff they pleased, and that if there is any injustice done the laboring classes on account of the tariff, whether the blame does not lie with his own party? How on earth are the democrats to blame? We can conceive the possibility of Brown swallowing sixteen apple-dumplings, but how on earth he thinks he can make his readers swallow such silly stuff as he puts out about the tariff, we confess we cannot comprehend.

The present tariff is a burden upon the middle classes, and a direct robbery of the poor to enrich a few monopolists, and the change that the Bellefonte Republican advocates is to increase these burdens of the poor and squeeze out of them what little is left them under the present tariff; and although these radicals have had unlimited power for the last ten years, not a section has been incorporated by them into our tariff laws, but what is a direct robbery of the laboring and consuming classes for the benefit of a few hungry monopolists, whose millions have been unjustly wrung from the farmer and mechanic and laboring man, by a tariff that brings no revenue to the public treasury but only fills the coffers of the monopolists.

Alexis—well, may some reader of the REPORTER say, what is the meaning of Alexis. You need not run for Webster Unabridged, because you will not find it there, but we can tell you sooner—Alexis, is a Russian grandduke, son of the present Czar, who last week arrived in New York, with some other Russian dignitaries, to visit the United States. The Gothamites had been looking for Alexis for two weeks, expecting his arrival every day—but unfavorable winds detained the Russian fleet which bore the Prince. New York, however, kept herself in readiness to give him a grand reception, and finally Alexis did arrive. All New York turned out to dress up on the 21st inst., in fine, and Gotham had a grand holiday. Alexis is said to be a tall, finely built, well proportioned young man, and altogether a gentleman. His reception at New York was a magnificent one, the military were out and a great demonstration was had in the city, civic and military, and the grand-duke was greatly pleased with the welcome that was extended to him. All the vessels in the harbor were gaily dressed, and the American and Russian colors were as numerous almost as the flakes of the recent snow storm; Alexis thought New York a great city, and thinks Broadway the finest street he ever saw. The prince was welcomed to America by Gen. Dix, in a short speech, to which the grand-duke Alexis replied as follows:

Gen. Grant thought the country can unite for his overthrow. Weakened Republicans need not fear the result, as the Senate of the United States will be Republican during the next Presidential term.

Would citizens of the Empire State feel alarmed if represented in the electoral college by such men as Sanford E. Church, Horace Greeley, Horatio Seymour, or General Hamilton Ward?

Would Missions be disgraced by such men as Dr. Brown or ex-Senator Henderson?

Would New England suffer from the judgment of such men as Governor Claflin, John Quincy Adams, J. Lathrop Motley or James C. English?

Could Ohio be mismanaged by Northern Ohio men, as represented by W. E. Groesbeck or General J. B. Cox? Such a ticket would sweep both South and North as clean as the "Reformers" swept the Tammany Ring in the last election.

The electors chosen could meet in general convention and nominate a President; then assemble in the capitals of their respective States, and cast their votes for the nominees of such a convention. Thus would the spirit of the Constitution, as laid down by the fathers be vindicated, and the Presidential chair be occupied by a scholar, a gentleman, a statesman and an honest man, which we all know is not the fact to-day.

ELIZABETH CADY STANTON.

How it is to be put through. The Washington organ of Grant says that it will require not less than ten thousand regular troops, judiciously distributed through the Southern States, to insure a free and fair election in those States in 1872; and that it may be necessary for Congress to increase the army.

This is but one of numerous indications that Grant means to force his reelection by placing the South under a military rule should he receive the Republican nomination. Such a method of insuring a free and fair election certainly deserves the credit of originality.
