

PHILADELPHIA, November 8, 1834.

Dear Friends.—After a hard day's work in running about this busy metropolis, resting much and meeting with many pleasant incidents—interspersed with just enough disappointments to keep me in remembrance—"it man's lot here below"—I now seal myself to tell you, and through you, your readers, where to stop when they visit this Quaker city, as well as to give you such other information as may be new or agreeable.

The Mount Vernon House, kept by your old friend and neighbor, Maj. L. L. BIRKETT, in company with Capt. JOHN BLAIR, is situated on North Second Street, at a very central point of business, and has been re-fitted and re-furnished from garret to cellar, and is now one of the most conveniently arranged hotels in this city so justly celebrated for the extent and magnificence of its public houses. I cannot forbear urging our citizens to stop at this house when they visit the city, as I am confident that it surpasses many other houses in every way.

Besides this, the proprietors are both the cleverest kind of fellows, and take especial pains to render their guests as comfortable as possible.

Object because it is too far from Market st. But they should know that the dinner at this house are of the most extensive character, and that in order to do justice to them, a smart walk is absolutely necessary to sharpen the appetite.

The dinner is not the only extensive table in that establishment; but the suppers and breakfasts will both be found to far surpass the empty boards of fashionable houses generally. Such caterers to the public taste deserve encouragement.

The ringdene in the money market is severely tell among the business men of this city just now.

To-day has severely tried the standing of many houses, as much of the business of last spring—the payments of eight months credit—falls due. No serious failures have as yet been reported, and our merchants all begin to breathe free and easy.

This stringency is greatly to be deplored by the friends of the Tyrone, Clearfield and Erie Railroad, and may retard its commencement. But it will not be abandoned. Those who have taken an interest in the project in this city, are men of the right stamp, and will not be scared at trifles.

They will not abandon the undertaking, and as soon as the stockholders of the Pennsylvania Rail Road, discover its true merits—which they are just now beginning to learn—it will be speedily completed.

Yours &c., TRAVELLER.

For the Republican.

MESSES BARROWS.—Allow me to speak of an evil in our borough, which seems to be growing, and in its consequences may prove more serious than those who are concerned in it think of.

I have frequently seen raised from my bed by such screams, certain that somebody's dwelling was on fire. Now suppose that we become accustomed to such noise, and the aid and efforts of every citizen should be necessary to save our town from a general conflagration, it may be impossible to rally them in time.

Young men should reflect upon this, and if they do, I am sure they will see the propriety of abandoning it.

Besides they will see that they are setting a bad example to the younger, by doing just what the good sons would condemn in their fathers.

The lawless ones ofays, who practice it, should be looked after by their parents, and restrained from such helter-skelter movements, especially about the time the stage arrives in the evening. Passengers must think many times that we have "Indians in town."

I do not desire to abridge the rights of youngsters or restrain them from amusements and recreation, but respectfully suggest the propriety of being a little more orderly.

TERRIBLE SHIPWRECK.

NEW YORK, Oct. 28.

By a letter received in this city, dated Aspinwall, Sept. 16, we learn the full particulars of the loss of the brig Adela, of Philadelphia, with all hands, except one on board.

It is said story.

The brig Alvaro, Capt. O'Brien sailed from New York on the 13th ult., bound to Aspinwall. When in lat. 26 deg, 12 min, North, Captain O'Brien discovered a wreck about four miles distant, and thinking he saw some person on the wreck waving his hat, he immediately bore down toward it. The wind at the time being very light and variable, and the night coming on, he thought he heard three distinct knocks as if a person was striking something hollow. He instantly took a large piece of rope (it being quite dark at the time,) and struck three times on the bulwarks of his own vessel, and listening could hear the same noise that he heard before. At 8 o'clock that night he came close to the wreck and hauled, and was answered by a feeble voice asking to come on board.

He immediately lowered his boat, and took from the wreck George Touro, an Italian by birth, whose family reside in Philadelphia. The poor fellow had crawled to the cabin and got an empty barrel, and with a belaying pin was striking on its head, which made the sounds. Capt. O'Brien had heard Touro state that on the 22d of August the brig Adela, Capt. Lewis, sailed from Philadelphia with a cargo for St. Kitts, having on board nine persons, including a young man as passenger, that on the 3d of September they encountered a terrific hurricane, which lasted eighteen hours; that both masts were carried away close to the deck, with yards, sails, rigging, and everything attached; that the brig being then unmanageable, fell off into the trough of the sea, which carried away jibboom and bowsprit, washing overboard the mate, passenger and three of the crew, with house galley, water casks and bulwarks. The second mate was dashed against the rail with such force, that several of his ribs were broken. He lingered in great agony until the morning of the 8th, when death put an end to his sufferings. The survivors were then without water.

On the evening of the same day the Captain died of thirst, only two men were left, namely, the cook, and George Touro. On the 15th the cook died. On the 16th Touro caught a little water from a shower. He had plenty to eat, but was without water during twelve days. When the poor fellow reached the deck of the Alvaro, he was too weak to stand. It being dark, Capt. O'Brien did not think it prudent to lay by the wreck, there being every prospect of a storm. Capt. O'Brien took the poor shipwrecked sailor in his cabin, and furnished him with clothes, and treated him with the greatest care and attention, doing all in his power to make him comfortable.

Capt. O'Brien belongs to Thomaston, Maine, and is one of the many noble and humane ship-masters of whom the State of Maine may well be proud. His untiring attention and kindness to the poor scummen entitle him to the thanks of the community. He sails for New York direct in the brig Alvaro, on the 18th, and with him goes the "shipwrecked sailor," improved in health and cheerful in spirits.

The Law of Newspapers.

1. Publishers who do not give express notice to the contrary, are considered as wishing to continue their subscription.

2. If subscribers order the discontinuance of their newspaper, the publisher may continue to send them until all arrears are paid.

3. If subscribers neglect or refuse to take their newspapers from the office, in which they are directed, they are held responsible until they have settled their bills and ordered them discontinued.

4. If subscribers remove to other places without informing the publishers, and the newspapers are sent to the former direction, they are held responsible.

5. The Courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers from the office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is evidence of fraud.
