THE PRESIDENCY.

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE.

WHO SHALL HE BE?

The Drift of Local Sentiment.

Since the nominations of Garfield and Arthur and with the approach of the time for holding the Democratic national convention, interest quickens in the probable action of that body, and all parties manifest a lively concern therein. Messrs. B. J. McGrann and W. U. Hensel are the delegates from Lancaster county to the Cincinnati convention, and in order to test the sense of their constituents the following circular was sent out last week to all the Democratic county committeemen and to some 400 other representative Democrats in all parts of the county:

LANCASTER, Pa., June 10, 1880.
Dear Sir—The Republican party has now placed its candidates in the field—James A. Garfield, of Ohio, for president, and Chester A. Arthur, of New York, for vice president. The Democratic national convention will meet in Cincinnati on June 22.

Mr. B. J. McGrann and myself, delegates from this district, will go there, as we declared before and after our election, unpledged to any special candidate, uncommitted to any particular interest, to vote for and to aid the nomination of the man who at that time seems to combine all the qualifications of a Democratic president, with the qualities which render his election most certain.

At the same time we are anxious to ascertain as fully as possible the views of our immediate constituents touching the question of the Democratic candidates, and we will be glad to hear from you, as a representative Democrat, what is your own and the prevailing Democratic opinion in your district, as to what should or should not be done at Cincinnati in the nomination of a candidate or the adoption of a platform of principles. If you will write frankly, expressing your own and your Democratic neighbors' choice on the presidency, you will facilitate us in our desire to ascertain and represent the average preference of our constituents, and to act for the general good of the whole party.

We ought to have your reply on or before Wednesday, June 16.

Yours truly,
W. U. HENSEL.

In addition to the replies sought and received to this circular, representatives of the INTELLIGENCER have diligently interviewed personally many prominent Democrats of this city and other parts of the county, with whom they have come in contact during the past week, and brief abstracts of the answers received from all these various inquiries are embodied in the following reports.

No attempt is made to tabulate the answers, for several reasons: They are valuable chiefly as the individual views of representative Democrats, though many of equal weight with those included in this list have failed thus far to respond, and others whose opinions are of as much value were unavoidably and unintentionally omitted in making the inquiries.

Moreover, a large number interviewed decline to express any decided preference, further than "for the best man to win." Some who express a decided choice object to having it put into cold type. In many instances persons are indifferent as between three or four candidates of equally good standing in their eyes; and though Seymour is the favorite with the largest number, a general idea is that he may positively decline to prevail, notwithstanding which many have failed to furnish their second choice in case Mr. Seymour's name is not allowed to be presented.

Mr. Bayard has many friends who urge him as a clean, brave, independent Democrat, in the vigor of life, of good social parts, a scholar, an orator and a statesman, of wide public sympathies and great courage of conviction; and is urged as being able to command more Republican votes than any other possible nominee. It is urged against him that he too readily consented to the electoral commission bill, that Mr. Tilden would not give him a cordial support on that account, that he is too stiffly "hard money" to be acceptable to the Western Democrats, and that in the Senate he is not quite enough of a party man, standing so straight sometimes that he inclines towards the Republicans. A few Democrats object to taking a candidate from a state south of Mason and Dixon's line.

It is only fair to say that the general opposition to Mr. Tilden is based in nearly all cases on a distrust of his availability, a fear that "he cannot carry New York," an almost universal sympathy is manifested for him, and a fierce desire to avenge the electoral wrong. There are some objections to him for his alleged failure to seek himself in 1877, and some because of the income tax and cipher dispatch scandals.

Hancock is especially popular with the soldiers; it is urged that his equally good military and civil record would make him an invincible candidate and that he can beat Garfield in Pennsylvania; the objections made to him are that the country wants a statesman of experience not a soldier, and that his connection with the Mrs. Surratt execution would lose him many votes.

Thurman is regarded with much admiration; and so is Hendricks, as well-deserving Democrats, and the nomination of either for first place would be heartily ratified here. Doubts are expressed as to whether either of them would be the strongest candidate "to carry New York," and a general desire is manifested that one or the other of them should sacrifice his personal feelings to the party good and strengthen a ticket with an Eastern man at the top of it.

Pendleton, Jewett and Payne have some local following, but it is generally deemed risky to invite a decisive October contest, with an Ohio man, for a state that is not essential to Democratic success in November.

"Little Mac" has a strong hold on the hearts of the people here, and his nomination would create great enthusiasm; the objections to him are that he was defeated once and that a statesman not a soldier is wanted now.

Field has some warm admirers, who believe that he is stronger in the East than any Eastern man; superior in his candidacy to all the factional rivalries of New York, and would carry California, Oregon, Nevada and Colorado. The objections made to him are his opinion against the Thurman railroad act and the elevation of supreme judges to political positions.

Eaton, that straight-laced Democrat, who alone saw the folly of and refused to sanction the electoral commission, gets a vote or two; Parker, of New Jersey, is pronounced invulnerable as a war Democrat and popular publicist; Potter, of New York; Gaston, of Massachusetts; and the Englishes are regarded as possible dark horses.

Judge Black is held by many as the "noblest Roman of them all," if the politicians could only rise to the high plane of such a nomination. Randall is accounted the possible heir of Tilden's strength and he is a favorite "dark horse," a general idea prevailing here that "he could easily carry Pennsylvania over Garfield."

The claims of the various candidates are urged in Lancaster county by their admirers without any bitterness of feeling and the objections are only such as prevail against their nominations. Any possible selection is sure to be heartily ratified in Lancaster. To nearly every opinion these words are added, in effect: "But any of the likely candidates will suit me. Any good Democrat who can carry New York will do. We want a candidate who can be elected." It is only fair to say that a general expression of confidence in the good judgment and loyal Democracy of the district delegates has been received from their constituents, whose preference are hereto appended:

Fred. Yeager: Hancock or Seymour.
Jac. Metzger: Seymour or Bayard.
E. S. Layden: Hancock.
W. C. Buchanan: Bayard.
Neal F. Dunkavay: Hancock, on a broad and liberal platform.

Seventeenth Ward.
T. Masterson: Black and Seymour being out of the question, give us either Bayard, Hancock or Payne; but don't squabble.
J. T. Richards: Bayard.
F. P. D. Miller: McClellan and Hendricks, or Hancock and Morrison; anti-Tilden.
John Klinesmith: Seymour and Hendricks.
Geo. L. Lyle, Thomas Swingler, John Carlin and Joseph Rhoads: Bayard; anti-Tilden.
W. H. Grier: Seymour.
George Young: Seymour, or a dark horse.
Rathvon & Star: Seymour, Bayard or Field.
S. P. Molerwell: Seymour.
F. C. Snyder: Seymour and Randall; Bayard or Hancock.
H. S. Grabill: Seymour or Bayard and Hendricks.
George Briner: Personal preference is Tilden, who stands about third in popular favor; Seymour is the favorite, with Hancock second; Randall, Bayard, Payne, Eaton or any good lifelong Democrat will suit; not David Davis.
H. B. Essick: Hancock the most available candidate, with Hendricks for second choice; Seymour is the best president, as he is the first statesman of the country, but it is doubtful if he could be elected; Seymour's nomination inexpedient in view of his broken health; anti-Tilden.
Frank Long: Hancock or Bayard; hard money and high tariff.
Geo. W. Sener: Field; second choice Bayard.
F. Cristy: Bayard.
F. X. Ziegler: Jere S. Black, Bayard or Payne.
F. Hanauer: The man to win.
Gen. William Patton: Seymour and Hendricks or Thurman.
G. Tille: Seymour.

Geo. W. Schroeder: Seymour.
John Barr: Bayard.
H. M. North: Garfield's nomination very weak; Democrats only need a combination that will carry New York and Indiana without doubt.
Wm. G. Duttonhofer: Hancock or Bayard.

Eighteenth Ward.
Dr. John Martin: Hancock, Bayard or any clean Democrat on the constitution for a platform.

Nineteenth Ward.
J. F. Kern: Bayard; Tilden not popular.

Twentieth Ward.
R. M. Arters: Hancock.
Wm. B. Irwin: Seymour, with Hendricks or Thurman.

Twenty-first Ward.
Geo. W. Steinmetz: Hancock, Judge Black or any good man; anti-Tilden.
D. Hauck: Hancock, Seymour or Bayard anti-Tilden.

Twenty-second Ward.
Pierce Leshar: Randall, Hancock, Eaton and Seymour the favorites; anti-Tilden.

Twenty-third Ward.
James M. Walker: Tilden ought to be the candidate if available; Judge Black would be a dark horse of great speed; any good man.
Simson W. Swisher: Bayard is "solid" in Colerain.

Twenty-fourth Ward.
Wm. C. Galbraith: Bayard.
Rev. C. W. Stewart, D. D.: Any sound Democrat and pure man; Tilden not available.

Twenty-fifth Ward.
John L. Fasnacht: Judge Field; satisfied with anybody except Tilden.
John Bachman: Seymour, Bayard, Hancock or Field; no Tilden.

Twenty-sixth Ward.
Geo. W. Wormley: Anybody but Tilden; "Little Mac" would do.

Twenty-seventh Ward.
L. T. Hensel: Randall, Bayard or Seymour.
Thurman: Popular sentiment against Tilden and Hancock boom subsiding.
E. M. Stauffer: Bayard; no Tilden.
Jas. G. McSparran: Bayard, Parker, Eaton, Randall, Payne, Seymour, Tilden, Hancock and McClellan, all would be first class presidents. Seymour and Hendricks would be the strongest nominations; Tilden is not available.
John S. Brown: Seymour or Bayard with Hendricks for second place; anti-Tilden.
Chas. Acheson: Bayard; personal preference, McClellan.
John Hastings: Jeremiah S. Black; Seymour or Bayard.
P. W. Housekeeper: Anybody except Tilden.

Twenty-eighth Ward.
Wm. Grimley: Vote for anybody you d-d please. You'll do it anyhow.
E. C. Diller: Seymour, Bayard, Hancock or Payne; no Tilden.

Twenty-ninth Ward.
J. A. McConnell: For anybody that is available and sound: Tilden is unpopular.

Thirtieth Ward.
Henry Kafroth: Hancock first choice and Tilden most unpopular.

Thirty-first Ward.
Robert Montgomery: Bayard the strongest man; commands the universal confidence of the business interests.
Geo. W. Hensel: Bayard and Thurman would be a grand ticket to elect and a creditable one to be even defeated with. It will carry everything that is doubtful and make the sure states more certain.
G. J. P. Raub: Seymour, Bayard second choice; must carry Stephen J. Field, Faber Sellers; Judge New York J. Field, Ephraim.

Thirty-second Ward.
Thos. A. Steiner: Bayard, Seymour, Payne or Thurman; Tilden's choice, but not Tilden.
Jere. Mohler: Tilden if he could be elected; Bayard or Hancock most popular here.
A. G. Killian: Gen. Geo. B. McClellan, Elizabeth Township.

Thirty-third Ward.
Geo. F. Shultz: Anybody to unite the New York factions: Tilden, Seymour, Bayard, Field, Payne, Jewett or Parker.
Geo. Youtz: The strongest and best man.

Thirty-fourth Ward.
Col. James Lynch: For Tilden if he could carry New York; that being doubtful, Field or McClellan.
Col. H. M. Breneman: Seymour; second choice, Judge Field; anti-Tilden.
S. R. Haakenberger: Seymour, Hancock or Field would do admirably; anti-Tilden.
J. B. Shultz: Henry B. Payne of Ohio and Clarkson N. Potter, of New York, for vice president.
H. T. Shultz: Payne and Potter.
Emmanuel Hoffman: Field; anti-Tilden.
W. B. Schmeintman: Field and Potter—a ticket that can unite the party in New York.

Thirty-fifth Ward.
C. J. Rhodes: Seymour all the time.

Thirty-sixth Ward.
Col. Joel L. Lightner: Bayard; anti-Tilden.
J. B. Martin: Joel Parker or Bayard.
Henry F. Hartman: Hancock; Tilden undesirable.

Thirty-seventh Ward.
J. R. Dietrich: Hancock; some Tilden men here; some for Field.

Thirty-eighth Ward.
Henry Eckert: Prevailing preference for Bayard.
H. L. Eckert: Bayard the favorite. Personal preference Payne and Potter. Let us have P's.
Jacob R. Rutter: Hancock; Seymour if he will accept; Bayard or Field; anti-Tilden.

Thirty-ninth Ward.
W. W. Bussler: My first choice is Tilden; second, Field; third, Seymour. The prevailing choice is first, Hancock; second, Seymour. All agree on Judge Black for vice president.

Fortieth Ward.
J. Frank Reed: Randall, first choice; after him Thurman or Payne.

Forty-first Ward.
C. B. Johnston: Bayard for president and a Californian for vice president; division in New York the only objection to Tilden.
R. B. Patterson: Bayard or any other good man; Tilden objected to because hardest to elect.

Forty-second Ward.
Aaron Sourber: Hancock, or any good man; anti-Tilden.

Forty-third Ward.
J. B. Bomberger: First, Seymour; second, Field; third, Judge Black.
Jas. M. Dunlap: Seymour; not Tilden.
Henry Arndt: Seymour.

Forty-fourth Ward.
John S. Mann: Seymour.

Forty-fifth Ward.
John Waller: Bayard. Many "worship" Tilden but fear that he is unavailable. No objection to Randall or Field.
J. L. Brandt: Seymour first; Bayard second choice.
John Crull: Seymour, Bayard, Hancock, McClellan, Hendricks and Field, in the order named; Judge Black would make the government as pure as his own personal record; anti-Tilden.
J. H. Hegener: Seymour, with Hendricks or Thurman for second place; second choice Randall; Bayard popular in Marietta.

Israel Hanlen: Any good man that can win and will take his seat.
Fred Waller: For the strongest man.
J. K. Curran and J. W. Kelly: For the ticket nominated.

A. Collins, James Sanders, Wm. Brown and John Fritz: Tilden if he can be settled without difficulty.

Forty-sixth Ward.
S. C. Stevenson: Hancock most popular, Tilden least so. No Ohio man unless he can surely carry that state. Bayard or Field will do well.

Forty-seventh Ward.
Capt. H. A. Haines: McClellan my own enthusiastic choice. The platform should score the administration for its obstruction of soldiers' pension claims.
J. Luther Hayes: Judge Black my own first choice; Bayard, Field, Hancock and Randall all favorites here, but the prevailing wish is that Seymour would be chosen and accept; anti-Tilden.
Jere. Shaffner: Seymour, Bayard or plucky Field.
John L. Jacobs: First choice, Bayard; any candidate can win.

Forty-eighth Ward.
Fred. Gorth: Hancock and Hendricks, Palmer or Thurman for second place. Seymour and Hendricks would be grand. Hard money.

Forty-ninth Ward.
Prof. J. W. Westlake: The vote of the doubtful states must be considered. If Tilden can beat the New York difficulties he should be the nominee. Hancock could carry Pennsylvania; Bayard and Seymour would be ideal candidates. Field and Randall, or Hancock and Payne would be invincible. No soft money nor evasions of living questions in the platform.
Geo. D. Brown: Hancock or Seymour; anti-Tilden.
Chas. F. Rees: Give us a dark horse like Frank Pierce; anti-Tilden.

Fiftieth Ward.
Joseph Detweiler: Anybody except Tilden.

Fifty-first Ward.
M. Hildebrand: Bayard is the popular choice; Judge Black would be the best dark horse; anti-Tilden.
R. H. Long: Will trust to the wisdom of the convention.

Fifty-second Ward.
H. Shaffner: Seymour, Bayard, Hancock or Hendricks.

Fifty-third Ward.
Wm. L. Dillenbaugh: Hancock; any body except Tilden.

Fifty-fourth Ward.
Henry Wambaugh: Bayard and Hendricks or Field; anti-Tilden, anti-Chinese platform.

Fifty-fifth Ward.
H. N. Shaffner: Hancock.
Isaac Watson: Anybody but Tilden.

Fifty-sixth Ward.
Wm. Walker: McClellan.

Fifty-seventh Ward.
N. Lefever: Bayard or any good man.
Dr. Geo. J. Hoover: Bayard, Seymour, or anybody but Tilden.
A. P. Melvain: Seymour, Bayard or Judge Black.
Daniel E. Rice: Tilden (if he can be elected), Hancock, McClell
