Gray's Elegy. Extreme elegance and careful composition are more conspicuous in the Elegy than in most other English poems of equal length. The art is not forced upon the reader's attention, but it has doubtless preserved a poem in which it is commonly said that there is no other quality of exceptional greatness. Yet there is a sort of ungraciousness in that remark, inasmuch as it resembles the well-known criticism of the man who, when he first saw Hamlet, acted commented on the large numbers of familiar quotations that it contained; for the Elegy is so well known that it seems thereby somewhat trite and valueless. It seems so, that is to say, until we read it over again, when we cannot fail to enjoy its beauty. It was once successful, and the indications that it called forth were numerous. As a general thing, however, they bear as faint a likeness to the original as it does itself to Gray's Elegiac Epistle to a Friend. It is written, as we are told, and can readily believe, "under a dejection of spirits." Gray's poem has been saved from total obscurity only by the assertion that it inspired Gray to write his Elegy.

Indigestion. The main cause of nervousness is indigestion, and that is caused by weakness of the stomach. No one can have sound nerves and good health without using a medicine to strengthen the stomach, purify the blood, and keep the liver and kidneys active, to carry off all the poisonous and waste matter of the system. See other column.

A Word to Our Readers. When you read of a remedy that will cure a disease, beware of it; but when you read of a pure vegetable compound which claims to cure only certain parts of the body, and furnishes full proof that it does this, you can safely try and will be benefited. This is just what Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure does. It cures all troubles of the lower portion of the body and none others. It will not help the toothache, cannot be consumed, but will put your body in a healthy state where you can enjoy life and appreciate its good things. Try it.

Brandy as a Medicine!

The following article was voluntarily sent to me by Dr. E. Slaymaker, Agent for Reigart's Old Brandy, a prominent practicing physician of this county, who has extensively used the Brandy referred to in his regular practice. It is commended to the attention of those afflicted with Indigestion and Dyspepsia.

BRANDY AS A MEDICINE. This now much abused Alcoholic Stimulant was never intended as a beverage, but to be used as a medicine of great potency in the cure of some of the destructive diseases which sweep away their annual thousands of victims.

With a purely philanthropic motive we present to the favorable notice of invalids—especially those afflicted with Indigestion and Dyspepsia, a specific remedy, which is nothing more or less than Brandy.

The aged, with feeble appetite and more or less debility, will find this simple medicine, when used properly, or all their ills and aches. Be it however strictly understood that we prescribe and use but one article of Brandy, and that is Reigart's Old Brandy.

Reigart's Old Brandy. Sold by our enterprising young friend, H. E. Slaymaker, this Brandy has stood the test for years, and has never failed, as far as our experience extends, and we therefore give the preference over all other Brandy, no matter with how many law-breaking French titles and pretensions it may be surrounded, and as a beverage he used McCreary's Root Beer. He is a Methodist, and then, as now, great at times, and in his own mind, he had declared earnestly against all kinds of strong drink. When advised to try Reigart's Old Brandy, in his case, he looked up with astonishment, in an hour he had the desired effects in the case of some of his near acquaintances, he at last consented to follow our advice. He used the Brandy faithfully and steadily, the first bottle giving him an appetite, and before the second he was able to eat a substantial and stomach capable of digesting anything which he chose to eat. He still keeps it and uses a little occasionally, and since he has his medicine he has been of very little pecuniary benefit to the doctor.—A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.

In cases of Dyspepsia, we can summon numbers of witnesses—one case in particular we cite:—A hard-working farmer had been afflicted with an exhaustive Dyspepsia for a number of years; his stomach would reject almost every kind of food, he had some cruetions constantly—no appetite—in fact, he was obliged to restrict his diet to crackers and stale bread, and as a beverage he used McCreary's Root Beer. He is a Methodist, and then, as now, great at times, and in his own mind, he had declared earnestly against all kinds of strong drink. When advised to try Reigart's Old Brandy, in his case, he looked up with astonishment, in an hour he had the desired effects in the case of some of his near acquaintances, he at last consented to follow our advice. He used the Brandy faithfully and steadily, the first bottle giving him an appetite, and before the second he was able to eat a substantial and stomach capable of digesting anything which he chose to eat. He still keeps it and uses a little occasionally, and since he has his medicine he has been of very little pecuniary benefit to the doctor.—A PRACTISING PHYSICIAN.
