DEATH AND DISASTER.

THE RECORD OF A DAY'S CALAMITIES.

Accident and Crime—Fires and Epi-

The large rag and junk warehouse of Horner Brothers in Baltimore, was burned last night. The damage is estimated at $15,000 on the $50,000 of the building, which is partially covered by insurance.

Mrs. Lydia Coleman, colored, and her thirteen-year-old daughter, employed in Huber's hotel, New York, were found in their room unconscious yesterday from the effects of escaping gas. The daughter may recover, but the mother will die.

At Sioux Falls, Dakota, Thomas Egan, the wife-murderer, upon being sentenced yesterday to be hanged June 13, coolly supplemented the sentence with the mocking reply: "Amen, I guess I can stand it."

Pennsylvania Knights Templar. The twenty-seventh annual convocation of the Knights Templar of the state was inaugurated in Pittsburgh yesterday afternoon by a grand parade and review.

There was a large fire at Willows, Cal., yesterday morning. The loss is estimated at $175,000. Nearly the entire business portion of the town, including the hotels, was consumed.

There were a number of explosions of steam engines and boilers at the Philadelphia Exposition, but no serious injury or loss of life is reported.

In Quincy, Ill., Dr. Hoffman, editor of the Germanic, was shot down by Gus and Casper Helhake and Dr. T. R. Spear. He is still alive but in a doubtful condition.

The three men were taken to the police court and a continuance granted for ten days, but being fined $100,000 each for the Helhakes and $20,000 for Spear. The assault was, as far as can be learned, entirely unprovoked.

An article in the Germanic is supposed to have led to the shooting. There is a very general feeling of indignation against the perpetrators of the crime, and talk upon the streets is very unfavorable towards them, although they have heretofore stood high in the community.

THE HOSTILE APACHES.

Their Number Being Daily Augmented—Mexican Troops in Pursuit.

A prospector from Soledad Pass reports a number of hostile Apaches roaming through mountains, evidently awaiting an opportunity to make their way back to the reservation. They are also a number of renegades in the Guadalupe mountains, and they have attacked several ranches and driven the stock into the mountains.

Two herdsmen have been killed, and ranchmen have become alarmed and are organizing for defense. It is reported that the band is being daily augmented by renegades from Arizona, New Mexico and from across the line and their strength is more formidable than at any other time since the outbreak.

It is reported that about seventy-five hostile Indians passed the Mexican border on Saturday last, pursued by Mexican troops. Fifteen Indians were seen yesterday making apparently for the Huachuca mountains, with Mexicans following in companies of infantry and Indian scouts left Huachuca last evening in pursuit of one of the bands.

FIRE, FLOOD AND STORM.

Horrible Crime of a Heartless Murder—Fragrant Occurrences.

At Lancaster Landing, Illinois, a few days ago, Milton Clifford strangled his wife's newly-born twins and then buried them in their cradle. He left his wife about in a critical condition for several hours and reported to a neighbor who had been dead before he returned. He then fled.

Large forest fires are reported in Clara and Rosecommon counties, Michigan. No rain has fallen in that section for several weeks.

The Upper Delaware and its tributaries are reported to be greatly swollen by the recent rains.

During recent northerly gales Lake Michigan rose two feet higher at its southern end than it has been known to rise in the last twenty years.

Owen Owens, aged 17, and Thomas Owens, aged 36, were drowned yesterday, near New York City, by the upsetting of a boat.

Money for Soldiers' Orphans. Attorney General Palmer has reversed the opinion delivered from the attorney general's office a few months since that the soldiers' orphans' schools were not entitled to the use of about $55,000 of an unexpended balance of a previous appropriation. The attorney general has made a thorough examination of the accounts in possession of the estimate, and is satisfied that the surplus above the amount expended can be legally applied to these institutions.

The result of this opinion will be the admission into the several schools of the state of about three hundred and sixty orphans who have passed the examination. Last month the soldiers' orphan committee of the Grand Army of the Republic met for the purpose of devising means looking to the admission of these orphans, but the meeting proved very unsatisfactory. Superintendent Higbee was urged to admit the applicants, but in view of the opinion that the surplus of appropriations could not be used by the schools, and in the absence of available funds, he declined to grant the request.

A Ruined Girl's Remorse. Bertha Bickhardt, aged nineteen years, a pretty German girl and the daughter of a hard working people in Baltimore, left her home to go on an excursion down the bay. Night came and she did not return. Her parents were naturally alarmed and could not account for her absence. Next afternoon about one o'clock she returned, but refused to say where she had spent the night. Her parents upbraided her, threatening her with punishment, and she left the room and went up stairs. In a few minutes the sound of a pistol shot was heard in the yard attached to the house. They rushed out and found her lying dead in an outdoor house with a pistol by her side and a bullet hole through her temple. She had gone to her father's room, taken his pistol from a drawer, and deliberately ended her life.

COOPER'S PROPOSITION.

THE INDEPENDENTS AVERSE TO TESTING THEIR STRENGTH.

Chairman McKee Gives His Opinion of the "Cameron Ticket" Chiefly and Narrates Some Unwritten History.

Chairman Cooper's proposition for a caucus between the Regular and Garfield Republicans for the purpose of counting noses is not received kindly in the Independent camp. "The plan is an absurd one," remarked Representative McKee, the head of the Independent committee, yesterday. "We have no machinery for the holding of any ticket extraordinary election, and even if the scheme were possible or practicable, there is no authority for it, and nobody would be bound by the result."

There is nothing in the proposition either, which guarantees any remedy for the abuses of which we complain. It is only an expedient of the Stalwarts to bolster up their ticket, and has more the appearance of bluff than anything else. If there is in it a real desire to submit to the people the issues which have been put before them, it has come too late. This is the very thing which Mr. Barker proposed at the Continental conference and put in the form of a motion, seconded by myself. We asked for the postponement of the convention of May 10 to the 30th of August, that the people might be given an opportunity to select their own delegates, which had been denied them in all but fourteen counties. The Stalwart committee asked to be allowed to consult together. On coming again before the convention, Mr. Barker stated that he could not agree to this proposition for the reason that the time was too short and that there was danger of factional lines being formed in the different counties, which might seriously affect the election. Both these objections to apply with equal force to the offer of Chairman Cooper to go before the people now. The only chance now to unite the party," said the Independent chairman with a smile, "is for the convention on reassembling at Harrisburg, June 21, to take now a general endorsement of the one put up at Harrisburg hall."

Speaking of the Continental conference, Mr. McKee told a bit of unchronicled history concerning the feeling within the Independent ranks a few days after this meeting with the shrewd and diplomatic Stalwart general. "The Independent movement," said he, "the Independent movement was dead, Independents throughout the state who read the newspaper accounts of the proceedings at the Continental, didn't know what to make of it. There was a general impression that the Independent strength had been battered and frittered away. Letters came in from all over the state—some of them rather amusing, too. One said: 'Don't get aboard the Stalwart boat. I will not have a half a dozen cabin passengers; but there are 50,000 of us who will have to swim.' Provoked at the turn things had taken, I went down town next day and Mr. Leach and myself prepared the call for the Independent convention."

The Independent canvass will open about the latter part of August, Chairman McKee states, and arrangements are making for vigorous work on the stump. A letter has just been received from a veteran citizen of New York, a member of the executive committee of the Reform League offering his services in the campaign. An original abolitionist, an associate of Greeley, Giddings, Gerrit Smith, Ben Waile, Garrison and the rest, he states that he signed the call for the first convention of the Republican party, edited the first Republican paper in his state, and first placed at the head of his columns the ticket on which the party fought its first campaign. He pledges chairman McKee the sympathy and support of a staunch "League" papers in New York.

CAMERON'S THREAT.

The Senator Thinks the Story is Too Silly to Talk About.

Washington, D.C., this morning. The story of Senator Cameron's threat to oppose the tariff in the Senate unless those who are interested in the tariff come to the rescue of the Cameron ticket is still being actively circulated and commented on. His friends denied the truth of it from the beginning on the ground that it was too absurd and outrageous and altogether unlike the senior senator from Pennsylvania. The senator himself to-day, when asked if he would say anything on the subject, bluntly inquired: "What could I say in such a case? I could answer your own question." He refused distinctly to be quoted or interviewed as he always does with newspaper correspondents, yet talked quite freely about the matter. From this conversation it was plainly gathered that Senator Cameron thought that the story that he had threatened to stultify himself and insult the people he was chosen to represent in the Senate of the United States was too silly to require a denial of any kind. There was no man in Pennsylvania more honest and earnest a tariff man than he. Mr. Cameron feels that his party is identified with the tariff interests as he is identified with it. When men jeopardize the success of the Republican party in Pennsylvania they jeopardize Pennsylvania's tariff interests, that was all there was about it; that was what he told the business men of Philadelphia, and that was the extent of the threat. Mr. Cameron intended going into the campaign in person to assist in electing the Beaver ticket because he favored the tariff. If he wanted to fight the tariff he would have to fight on the other side or strive to divide his party, as some are doing, and break it up. He was not a man to make threats of what he would do under any circumstances.

These are not the senator's words, but they fairly indicate, it is believed, his sentiments expressed to-day. If they fall short in any particular it was in scope and strength.

FIGHTING THE INDEPENDENTS.

Some Swearing Regulars Wanted.

Two weeks ago it was Senator Cameron's intention to "ignore" the Independent movement in Pennsylvania. A little later, after it was known that Thomas M. Marshall would decline the nomination offered him at Harrisburg, the senator decided to "wait and see what they would do." He has now reached his final conclusion and settled upon a policy for the campaign. It is to "damn them all."

The Independents, therefore, all and several, must expect to be sworn at by the senator and his junior bosses from now until the end of the campaign. But if victory is to be won by swearing, why does Senator Cameron wish to put John W. Wamaker on the ticket? He can't swear. Mr. Wamaker is a good Presbyterian. He is the largest shopkeeper in Philadelphia and is proud of the fact, but he is a devout man and even refuses to advertise his wares in the Sunday newspapers. How can he help the Cameron ticket? In a campaign of swearing, moreover, Senator Cameron, the head of the ticket, must be counted out, for he is a "one-legged soldier and a Christian gentleman." It is to be feared, too, that Mr. Rawle, Cameron's candidate for supreme judge, will be unable to "damn" the Independents effectively. Mr. James McManes, who doesn't like him, accuses him of the degrading vice of wearing four pairs of kid gloves a day—illal, yellow, green, and chocolate. It is preposterous to suppose that such a man can swear vigorously.
