THE DOOM AND THE BABY.
A Warning For Enthusiastic Democrats—Habits of the Party Growing The First Year.
Pittsburgh Dispatch, Rep.
Having now somewhat recovered from their astonishment at the dimensions of their victory, Democratic leaders everywhere are hastening to express their sense of the great responsibility placed upon them, and to declare what the party will do when it gets control of both branches of Congress, and above all what great things are set down for 1881. All this recalls a little incident in the life of our first parents.
When Cain was born, he was a genuine surprise to Adam and his estimable wife. They had never had such a thing in the house before, and had no experienced aunts to tell them what to do with it. But Cain was a pushing child, and quite capable of raising himself if occasion demanded. One of the first things he taught his proud and happy father was that a healthy infant required a vast amount of carrying. No matter how much hay was down and a rain was coming up, when little Cainy decided to take a ride on pa's shoulder there was nothing to do but to take him up. He contrived to keep Adam trotting about pretty much all the time.
Now, of course, they had weighed the child when it was born. Green as they were, they knew enough to do that. They had not the approved appliances for ascertaining which are in common use now, even by the dog's meat man, but by taking his little Cain in one hand and a stone of about equal weight in the other, and estimating the weight of the stone, Adam figured out that the baby weighed about 10 pounds, 8 ounces. He probably exaggerated a few ounces. There is no authentic record of a time when young fathers told the strict truth about the weight of their first-born, and it is safe to say that Adam was no better than his descendants in this regard.
The child grew and prospered and kept his father up at night for a month. Adam had noticed that the baby was more of a load than he used to be, and at the end of the month he weighed him again. Twenty-one pounds now. Father Adam sought out a smooth place on the barn door and a soft stone as large as he could find, and by he called Eva: "This thing evidently doubles its weight once a month. In a month more it will weigh 42 pounds. In two months it will weigh 84 pounds. I've figured it out as far as I have room on this door, and here's what it comes to: In two years our trailing will weigh 551, 921, 636 pounds, and in the name of heaven, Eva, how am I going to carry all this?"
Eva's answer is not of public interest, and it is improper to pry into the private life of a worthy couple, both of whom are now dead, except so far as it is necessary to point the moral. We all know how needless was Adam's alarm. The child didn't continue to grow at that rate, and before the two year's expired it was capable of caring for itself.
Time lightens all burdens, and a boom doesn't keep on the way it begins any more than a baby.

COMPLETELY HEMMED IN.
Why Massachusetts Men Did Not Move as
Two of the many Massachusetts people to whom the thought of Ben Butler as governor of the state has been a nightmare of the largest calibre, are a young married couple living in a town a few miles below Springfield. They talked it over, shudderingly, the day before election. The husband said that, although Butler's election was confidently predicted, he could never believe that the grand old party would ever allow the grand old commonwealth to be blighted with the desolating ignominy of such an event. He had too much faith in the wisdom and mercy of an overruling Providence to credit the idea for an instant. But if the worst did happen he could no longer breathe the tainted air of his native state. "If Butler should be elected," said he to his wife, "we will pack right up to morrow and move into another state. No more Massachusetts for me!"
It was late when he woke in the morning after election day. His wife had been up some time and of her he inquired about the preparations for breakfast. "I'll be ready," she replied, "but not with the breakfast. I am packing up and getting ready to move because you said we must get out of the state to day, sure." "Gimme that paper," said the head of the family. His wife handed over the Springfield Republican and "But a deadly foe surveyed it for some minutes sadly and silently. "I guess," he observed mournfully to his partner as he threw the paper aside, "that as you can't pack those things and get breakfast. I don't care much about living in Massachusetts much longer, but what can't you see over that paper again and tell me what state there is left for me to go to. Perhaps you can find one but I can't. They've all gone the same way."
That family has not moved.

SOME HOME FIGURES.
Matrimonial Miseries and Delights.
Mrs. Margaret J. Preston, the well-known southern writer, sister-in-law to the late General "Sonsall" Jackson, is an untiring collector of curiosa. She has in her parlor what is said to be the first alpenstock ever carried by an American to the top of Mont Blanc, and a large picture, entirely composed of woven spider-webs, which at a distance cannot be distinguished from a steel engraving.
John Holmes, of Alabama, has raised eleven children, seven boys and four girls. He has seventy-three grandchildren, forty-three boys and thirty girls. Mr. Holmes is seventy-nine years old, weighs three hundred pounds, and has killed fifteen hundred deer and one bear. The entire family live in the mountains of one town, who lives in Blount. All the other ones belong to the Missionary Baptist church.
Mr. R. R. Bishop, who has just been defeated in the Massachusetts gubernatorial election, lives in a "forest home" at Beacon street, Boston, about eight miles from the state house, and among the picturesque and rustic surroundings of Newton Centre. His large, square mansion bears the aspect of a house built in colonial times, although it is not yet a score of years old. It stands in the middle of a spacious lawn, girt about on every side with a natural forest of oaks, elms, maples and chestnuts.
The Neue Presse, of Vienna, contained recently the following matrimonial advertisement: "My name is Frederick. I am poor and I am old and ugly. If anything surpasses my apidity it is my malignity. Nevertheless I am looking out for a wife. Answer to be addressed to 'Who Will Venture.'" According to the Neue Presse the newspaper clerk's astonishment when the advertisement was handed to him for insertion was only exceeded when on the following day hundreds of replies flowed into the office. It subsequently transpired that the advertisement emanated from a chevalier d'industrie, who is now in jail for swindling. One of the Chinese students formerly at Harford was understood to have been deeply enamored of a girl whom he met in society there, and to have had some expectation of winning her. But he writes back from China that he is involuntarily a husband. He found, on returning home, that his parents had chosen a wife for him. "I tried to break it off," he says, "but without success, as the Chinese consider an engagement of marriage the most sacred contract. If it is once made, it can never be broken. According to the Chinese custom the younger brother cannot marry before the older one. I have two younger brothers who have to wait for me to before they can. Therefore I was urged very strongly by my relatives to marry right away, so I consented. Of course it is not a love affair, but I shall try to do my duty."

Darwinian Genealogy.
The following dialogue occurred in the Faubourg St. Honore, Paris, between a patriarchal gentleman and his grand daughter:
"What makes your hair so white, grandpapa?" inquired the maiden.
"I am very old, my dear, I was in the ark," says grandpapa, humorously, but with a reckless regard for truth which does not prepossess us in the old man's favor.
"Oh!" says the child, regarding her relative with a fresh interest, "are you Noah?"
"No I am not Noah."
"Are you Shem, then?"
"No, I am not Shem."
"Are you Ham?"
"No, I am not Ham."
"You must be Japheth," says mademoiselle, at the end of her historical tether, and growing rather impatient of the difficulty that surrounded her aged relative's identification.
"No, I am not Japheth."
"Then, grandpapa, you're a beast!"

DR. EDWARD EARICKSON, Secretary Baltimore College of Pharmacy, says: "I endorse it as an excellent medicine, a good digestive agent and non-intoxicant in the fullest sense."
DR. RICHARD SAMPSON, one of Baltimore's oldest and most reliable physicians, says: "All who have used it praise its standard virtues, and the well-known character of the house which makes it a sufficient guarantee of its being all that is claimed, for they are men who could not be induced to order anything else but a reliable medicine for public use."

Wanamaker's.
Silk novelties innumerable and indescribable. Everything that ladies or dressmakers have occasion for in matching, decorating, combining. What we are remarkable for, more than for anything else in silks, is variety; or, at least, we are reputed so. You hear it said by everybody: "If you want to match anything, or find a rare silk, even an unexpected one, go to Wanamaker's."
The other peculiarity that everybody expects to find here is less pleasant to speak of; lower prices. We put it second, because there are people who don't credit us with lower prices. Still, we imagine that if one should assert the contrary, almost everybody in Philadelphia would believe it.
Often we speak of other aspects of our trade; aspects less obvious or less recognized. It is well occasionally to give old news.
Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.
Warm skirts for ladies, and leggings for ladies, girls and little girls. The warm skirts are satin, satin-and-cloth, satin-and-felt, satin-and-Italian-cloth, and Italian, all quilted; cloth, flannel and felt quilted; trimmed, not quilted, warm enough without. The leggings are all sorts; one very useful and fairly pretty sort, woven, at two-thirds value, 25 to 65 cents.
West of south entrance to main building.
Furs have to be thought of. We're busy enough as it making. If we advertise at all, we ought to say what will not oppress us with too much making. Perhaps this is. A great many seal coats and fur-lined circulars are ready-made. More sizes are ready-made here than anybody expects; especially the unexpected sizes. Ready-made work we can make in July. Why shouldn't we make all the shapes and sizes ready-made? 1305 Chestnut.
Black satin rhadamæes and satin de Lyons, 25 to 35 cents below our own recent prices, of all grades from $1 to $2; and we guess our prices haven't been very high; have they?
Next-door circle, south entrance to main building.
Wool serge embroidered with silk dots that ought to sell for $1.50—no that isn't the way to put it; it ought to sell according to our theory, for just as little as we can afford; and that is 75 cents.
Look out for such now. It's time for over-buying and all sorts of mistakes to show themselves. We try to keep ready to turn other folk's mistakes to account for ourselves and for you.
