

your most humble and obedient servant,
A. PAGEOT.

No. 13.—Mr. Forsyth to M. Pageot.
DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
Washington, Jan. 2, 1836.
M. ALPHONSE PAGEOT, &c.

Sir: I have the honor to acknowledge your note of this day's date in which you announce that you have the order of your Government, given in consequence of the recall of Mr. Barton, to lay aside the character of Charge d'Affaires of the Kingdom of France near the Government of the United States. The protection of the Federal Government is due, and will of course, be extended to you, during the time necessary for your preparations to return to France.

I am, sir, with great consideration your obedient servant.
JOHN FORSYTH.

Carrollton:

FRIDAY, JANUARY 29, 1836.

Special Election.—The Associate Judges, of this county, have ordered an election to be held, on Thursday, the 11th of February next, to elect a Coroner, to fill the vacancy occasioned by the death of Mr. Hanna, the late Coroner.

Steam Mill.—Our enterprising townsman, Isaac Atkinson, Esq., has recently put his oil and flouring mills into operation, by steam power. We understand that the proprietor intends shortly to connect with these mills extensive carding, fulling, and other manufacturing establishments. We hail the introduction of Steam power in our place, as the commencement of a new era of prosperity; and we trust that this enterprise will meet with a most liberal patronage.

Special Message.—The Message of the President, in relation to the present posture of affairs between the U. States and France, with the accompanying documents, will be found in this week's paper. We forbear to offer any opinion of our own, touching the propriety of the measure recommended by the President. Our readers must judge for themselves.—We go for "Our country, right or wrong."

Legislative.—The general mass of Legislative matter, which we have received, is of little interest. The Bill for the relief of Simpson McFadden & others, has become a law. The vote in the House, on the final passage of the Bill, stood—Ayes 49, Nays 20.—A bill has been introduced, as our readers may recollect, to enable the Auditor of this county, to make deeds for certain lands (now in this county,) sold for taxes, in the adjoining counties. This bill, if it becomes a law, will remove a difficulty, of which there has been much complaint.

For the Carroll Free Press.
NEXT GOVERNOR.
Messrs. Pearce & Christy:
Permit us, through your paper, to suggest the nomination of General Joseph Vance as a suitable Candidate for the gubernatorial chair of Ohio. General Vance has been so long and so well known to the people of this state, that all attempts to set forth his claims and qualifications must be unnecessary. No man in Ohio would make a better Governor.
90,000 DEMOCRATS.

THE OBSERVER, No. 2.

Messrs. Editors:

I come now to address those, who from the important station they fill in society, should of all others, be prepared to fulfil the duties of that station; and here let us pause to consider the important nature of the duties devolving on parents. In the first dawnings of infant intellect, is to be seen the unbounded influence obtained for parental experience; it is most consistent—most completely in accordance with nature that it should be so;—that the yielding inexperienced mind of youth should rely without reserve on those whom the tender ties of nature would lead to seek their welfare in every act towards them. And that it is might be read in the history of almost every one, in a greater or less degree. Yes, though time may roll, though the gentle youth be transformed to the firmness of manly dignity, and be removed from the domestic circle, by rolling seas or lofty mountains; still—still, the indelible impress of early instruction, may be seen on the character, and in some degree influencing the destinies of the individual.

How very important then, that those instructions should be such as make for their best interest. But is this the case? Do parents generally feel the importance of their duties? surely it cannot be. If every parent felt that he had it in his power, almost to fix the destiny of his child, it would lead to untiring diligence in his efforts to lead them in the path of virtue: How then, shall those parents answer for their conduct, to their God, their country, and their children: who neglect to enforce the due restraints upon their inexperienced charges; permit them to choose the company of the profligate, and associate with those, whose very touch is pollution. But if these are found thus culpable; what shall be the fate, what curses of curses, shall rest on the head of the guilty parent, whose sordid conscience will permit him to use the horrid oath in presence of his child; or indulging his beastly appetite, with almost the certainty that his example will lead them, loathed, dishonored, and a misery to themselves, to fill a drunkard's grave.

'Tis a melancholy truth to all who wish well for the future interests of our country, to know that these things are so: for surely, "their country's hope," in such hands shall dwindle and die. O! did these parents ever read the history of Washington, and do they know the anxious care, exercised by his honored father, to lead the first steps of his infant mind in the paths of truth? his bright career they cannot avoid knowing; but if they had filled his place: had Washington been led astray from his infancy; his name might have sunk to oblivion, and human nature deprived of one of its brightest ornaments. Let me then, entreat each and every one who has the charge of youth, as they love their country, as they love their children, and as they feel their awful responsibility, to think seriously and act so that in the end their skirts at least shall be clear of these matters.

KERSHAW.

FOX HUNT.

At a meeting of a number of the citizens of Fox and Jefferson townships, held for the purpose of making arrangements for a fox hunt, the following resolutions were passed:

First—Resolved, that the first corner be at the N. E. corner of John Keans farm, thence south four miles to Simeon Drake's house, thence four miles east to the N. E. corner of No. 16, in Jefferson county, thence north four miles to the N. E. corner of Nicholas Dunbar's farm, thence four miles West to the place of beginning.

Second—Resolved, that there be 16 martials to command the lines.

Third—Resolved, that there be no guns carried by any persons forming in the lines.

Fourth—Resolved, that there be no dogs permitted to run loose, until the signal is given by firing off a gun after the lines is formed at the centre.

Fifth—Resolved, that the second line be formed one half mile from the centre, which will be marked with straw on the saplings, and on stakes, there to stand until the signal is given by the horns, then slow march to the third line, which will be marked the same way—then the lines will come to order and cease blowing the horns and stand until the signal is given to let the dogs loose, which will be by firing off a gun in the centre, and on until orders is given to close in to the centre where the Foxes will be exhibited.

Sixth—Resolved, that the lines be formed at 10 o'clock, on Saturday, the 13th day of February next, and march at the signal of the horns, the signal to be given by Robert R. George, martial, at the N. W. corner, and go even way round the lines. The centre is to the right of the salt work road, that leads from Robert George's, (Esq.) to Springfield, in a piece of woods, where the roads crosses to go to Benjamin Cohn's mill.

MARTIALS.

West Line.—Robert R. George, James M'Loughlin, jr. Isaac Lewton, John B. Moody.

North Line.—David Watt, Clement Pionicks, James Morrow, James Huston.

South Line.—Abel Wiggins, John Miller, Samuel Danlap, A. dunn Merriek.

East Line.—Alexander Moody, Thomas Allman, Preston Allman, William Pugh.

(BY REQUEST.)

From the Protestant Vindicator,
We are indebted to the Baltimore Literary and Religious Magazine for the following luminous article. It was written in July, 1835, and consequently ought to be perused with that recollection. The reference to Pennsylvania has become matter of history. During the collision prior to the election, the questions concerning Romanism were wisely discussed; and so far was the influence of Popery combined with the choice of a Governor, that the opponents of one of the candidates endeavored to alienate his friends, by representing him as a Papist. He was therefore called upon distinctly to avow whether he was a Romanist or not. Mr. Ritner, in reply to the call, indignantly repelled the degrading imputation; & avowed that he was opposed to the Roman system and hierarchy, as altogether anti-Christian and anti-republican.

The anticipations of the Baltimore Magazine are indubitably correct—ere long the Popish controversy "must enter largely into" our most important elections. The Protestants of Pennsylvania have set a noble example, and established a legitimate precedent. Every candidate for public office should be required publicly to declare his renunciation of Popery, prior even to his nomination. Every citizen who votes for any Papist for any office of trust, honor, or emolument, in the United States, is guilty of a treacherous abandonment of our most valuable immunities to a foreign despot; and is chargeable with virtual subornation of perjury, as bribing a man to take a false oath for the purpose of obtaining official authority—for every Papist, without exception, who takes the oath of allegiance or the oath of office under the federal constitution, or the constitutions of either of the States in this republic, is notoriously guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury. It is of no consequence to which political party he belongs, or what may be his dignity; whether he belong to the foxes or to the jackalls or to the hyenas; whether he be a city scavenger, or a licensed mail robber, or a perfidious legislator; if he is a vassal of Pope Gregory XVI. and believes in the validity of a Jesuit's absolution, and a prelatial indulgence, and a Papal dispensation, he cannot be a sound and consistent American citizen.

It will probably be retorted—that the practice which we recommend is a religious test. We deny the allegation; not only upon the general principle, that religion and Popery are severed by the impassable Gulf; but also that the inquiry does not advert to the fact; whether a man believes that the ding dong of a bell can drive away the devil; or that the mass wafer contains the body of Christ, or that a little salt water will extinguish a conflagration; or that Antony sailed from Italy to Spain on a dolphin's back, and guided the fish with a halter, or that a donkey bowed down in honor of a Papist idolatrous procession—but the question is this, can a man who in body, soul and spirit is the unreserved slave of a Jesuit Monk and his masters, the Dragon and the Beast, be an honest and faithful American citizen? We affirm that his oath is only a puff of wind.

THE MOCKING BIRD.

From Latrobe's Rambles in America.
The sweetest of American, the rival of the nightingale of the Old World, the mocking bird, was in full song, and wooing its mate, and sweeter melody than that which filled the ear during the short southern twilight and beguiled the hours of darkness, was surely never heard under the stars. I have often listened to that song elsewhere, in the deep-woods of the north and west but whether it was in season, or the Union of circumstances and thought which attuned my own temper and mind to the harmony. I think I never heard that melodiously varied song poured forth with such effect as amid the sweet scented dews of Darien. The air was filled with its vibrations hour after hour and every quality, power, clearness and melody seemed united and perfect in the quiet efforts of that sweet throated bird. Their numbers were greater than I had ever witnessed elsewhere. If you be in the straight upon the river bank from your seat under the piazzas of the village, there was no danger of your leaving the melody behind.

There was a secluded dip on the shore full of palmetto, and low bushes, into which you descended by a winding foot path between rocky sandstone banks. A couple of canoes were moored within its shelter and at the foot of the sandstone rock where an aged tree slanted across it a fresh spring swelled out, and ran its short bubbling course to the river. Here it was delicious to linger in the darkness, and listen to the melody in the branches above you. Again, between this point and the village lay an ancient Indian mound, on the verge of a lawn like piece of level award, extending from the steep high bank of the Batanaba some distance towards the forest with groups of live oak sprinkled over it and thickening towards the cottages and rude church on its confines. Here on both evenings of our stay, I marked one of these syrens take its perch on a solitary bush which broke the uniformity of the swell of the mound and sit hour after hour, alternately listening to and answering the notes of a mate, concealed among the thick foliage and hanging moss of a distant tree. I listened to it till I thought I could almost interpret its full varied tale with its unmeted periods. If the intensity of feeling be at all commensurate with the intensity and power of expression, who shall fathom the depth of that which God has implanted in the little fluttering hearts of these his songsters? What can match the thrilling ecstasy of those clear and redundant notes, or express the depth of pathos of which those slow plaintive modulations convey an expression to the heart? There is nothing in nature that speaks to me more plainly of the goodness of God, than the overflowing, heartfelt, and joyous song of a bird. Is this not the voice of praise and is it not the song of utterable gratitude!

Napoleon Bonaparte & John Wesley.
—It is not easy to imagine any thing more comprehensive than the polity, or more perfect than the organization, of the Wesleyan economy. Its discipline and constitution form a stupendous monument of the genius of its author. They show him to have been born to leave an indelible impress of himself on after generations. In this respect, Napoleon Bonaparte is not worthy to be compared to him. The name of Napoleon is indeed imperishable; but it is written on the annals of Europe, not on her institutions.—His gigantic footsteps were on the ocean sand; and the waters have closed upon them and swept away their traces, even as it were the tojish architecture of boyhood. The name of John Wesley lives in the system which he founded. It is written there in characters which are expanding and becoming deeper as that system spreads. He was a mighty religious legislator. The foundations of his polity are broad and deep; and the spirit of eternal discord must become potent indeed before it can rend his superstructure to pieces.—British Critic.

Let us take as much care to live well, as to live long.
