Wonder what Col. Roosevelt, the despiser of nature fakirs, thought of the Emperor of Austria with a two-headed eagle on his coat of arms!

Beef from Australia pays freight and tariff and sells from three to six cents cheaper than American beef in the New York market, and it is said that it is a better quality of beef than that furnished by the beef barons of Chicago.

A curtain riser of the Census has it that Governor Patterson of Tennessee has pardoned 152 murderers, 108 blind tiger operators and 126 carriers of concealed weapons, during his term so far. The Governor ought to have an effective, if not a very desirable, constituency when he runs for re-election.

Twenty years ago practically no cotton was manufactured in the South. Now it is said that fifty per cent of all the cotton manufactured in this country is manufactured south of the Mason and Dixon line. As it is well known, a large part of the raw cotton raised in the world is shipped from the South. Probably within another twenty years the South, while remaining the greatest cotton producing section in the world, will also become the greatest cotton manufacturing center in the world. Then, and not until then, will the South attain its maximum prosperity. Cotton may not be "king", as was the boast fifty years ago, but it is surely the greatest natural monopoly in the world. The cotton grown abroad is inferior to that of the South. That grown in India, Egypt and China is useful in its way, but it is at best but a poor substitute.

As the Panama Canal draws daily nearer and nearer to the time of completion, it is interesting to think of its great influence on the commercial and industrial force of this hemisphere and on the world. Information comes that an increasing number of students from South America are seeking learning in American colleges and universities. This is especially so, it is said, with regard to Peru. It is a fact not known except to exact geographers that San Francisco is nearly three thousand miles west of Lima, the capital of Peru. This city is almost directly south of New York and Washington, and trade will doubtless during the next decade be opened up over all the western coast of South America, not only with the Pacific coast cities of the United States, but also with New Orleans and other cities of the Mississippi Valley, as well as with the great ports of the Atlantic coast. Excessively high tariffs and all restrictions on trade are inconsistent with time and opportunity. There will soon be a migration of technically educated young men southward to penetrate the Andes where mineral wealth in gold, silver, zinc, copper and iron were barely scratched four or five centuries ago by the old Inca civilization.

Political quid nuncs throughout the country cannot be interested in the reported near retirement of two Republican senators who have held office in the United States Senate each for thirty years. They are Senator Aldrich of Rhode Island and Senator Hale of Maine. During the past fifteen or twenty years no two senators have exerted more influence or as much influence as these two men in the great legislative affairs of the country. Senator Aldrich has long been known in Newspaper Row as the "boss" of the Senate, and the title has been more than a mere name. Senator Hale has as long been known as the ruler of the navy. It is fitting that they should resign. They have had their day. As Cicero says, "The times have changed and we must change with them." "New wine should not be placed in old bottles." Actors and beauties seldom know when to retire. They continue to make last appearances, but the younger generation finally forces them off the stage. The younger generation of senators are Beveridge, Cummins, LaFollette, Dolliver, and others. Talk about ancient or mediaeval history! The every day history which well informed people discern in the columns of the daily newspapers is surcharged with meaning far more important and interesting to the man that reads it than any previous era in the history of the world.

The South and Protection.

In a recent journey across the country Congressman McKinlay of California sounded tariff sentiment as occasion offered and makes some remarks on future alignments on the subject. One idea that he impresses is that the support of protection is growing in the South. Many Democrats take for granted that the Southern States will always be the hard and fast supporters of the party and will follow it to the limit in free trade as in other respects. But industrial conditions in the South have been changing. Some of the Southern congressmen are for protection now, and more would take the same position if the Democratic party should ever again have the power to shape national legislation. Louisiana wants its sugar protected; Alabama has large interests in iron and steel; Texas is the leading state in wool; the Carolinas and Georgia are extensive manufacturers of cotton and concerned just now about competition in Japan, and most of the Southern States are large producers of hardwood and pine lumber. Not one in the whole list is without some forms of business whose prosperity rests with a stable policy of reasonable protection. Should the protective policy be seriously threatened Southern sentiment on the subject will then disclose itself.

Missouri can furnish an example of how circumstances may suddenly develop votes for protection in what is considered sure Democratic territory. Four congressional districts in the southern part of this state, supposed to be absolutely safe by Democratic managers, elected Republican members in 1908 on the strength of a distinctly defined question of protection. The question was if zinc ore should continue on the free list and be brought in by railroad to compete with the Missouri ore and standard of wages. A large quantity of the ore, produced by peon labor in Mexico whose pay is 80 cents a day, and whose general condition is that of debt-servitude, had been imported, and the Missouri miners realized that their employment as well as rate of compensation was at stake. As a result there was an overturn in the four districts. Great was the Democratic surprise over the loss of these four members, but the cause is perfectly clear to all who are informed as to the nature and course of the campaign. Zinc ore is duly protected in the new tariff and the Missouri miners can rest easy as to competition with peon labor. The case is typical of what will happen in many Southern districts when the free trade party becomes a positive menace.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

THE PROGRESS.

The Air Nine Miles High.
Samples of air at a height of nearly nine miles have been recently obtained and examined for the presence of the rare gases. The collecting apparatus, carried by a large balloon, is a series of vacuum tubes, each drawn out to a fine point at one end. At the desired height an electro-magnetic device, connected with each tube and operated by a barometer, breaks off the point of the tube, admitting the air. A few minutes later a second contact sends a current through a platinum wire round the broken end, melting the glass and sealing the tube. All the samples obtained show argon and neon, but no helium was found in air above six miles.

The Greek Figures.
Greek figures of men appear taller and more graceful than those of moderns. Modern artists make the upright figure seven and one-half times the length of the head. The Greeks made it eight times, lengthening the shin, and the longer sweep from knee to heel gave the figure increased grace and dignity. The same plan was frequently adopted by Lord Leighton, in whose paintings the same effect is obtained.—New York American.
