GREENVILLE, OHIO, THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1916

Gettysburg.

We passed Lincoln's birthday last Saturday without any demonstration other than a debate in the intermediate department on the question "Which was entitled to the greater honor, Lincoln or Washington?"

Today is St. Valentine's Day, and is usually celebrated by a fair exchange of some missive to indicate love or sentiments of esteem for each other. It is believed that upon this day birds will choose their mates, or pair for a season at least as lovers, and in imitation of this bird rule lovers sometimes engage in the same exercise, and strange enough to say, such exchange of missives ripens into marriages. It is an excellent recourse to the bashful youth, but this ought not to apply now as this is leap year and the lady is privileged to do what the swain will not do for lack of sand.

So far as known we have no program indicated for the celebration of Washington's birthday anniversary on the 22nd. We deem it right and proper that the lives of these great men should be duly celebrated and their unselfish works for the elevation of downtrodden humanity should receive due recognition from posterity who enjoy the fruit of their labor.

Henry G. Bang, who bought the Rohr property, moved into it today from the north side of our township. He will take a place here in an additional business among us.

Rev. J. O. Carr went to Olena, from whence he came to this place, to preach the funeral of a former parishioner.

P. B. Moul and wife spent yesterday at Richmond, Ind., with friends. In his absence, Ed Swinger, assistant superintendent of our M. E. Sunday school, conducted the exercises and well sustained his former reputation.

It was announced that the revival exercises of the Presbyterian church would be continued this week. The success so far seems to justify this action. A very large attendance is present at every meeting and great interest abounds among the people. Last Saturday night nine persons accepted Christ, and at the close of yesterday morning's meeting seven more followed, and at the close of last night's meeting seventeen more signified their purpose to forsake the devious way and take the way of the lowly Nazarene.

Solomon Stoltz of our village and Magdalene Hershey, relict of Emanuel Hershey, of this vicinity, are both seriously ill, due to infirmities of age.

Mrs. J. D. Coblenz is a visitor at Columbus with relatives. Feb. 14. XOB

Learn a Trade.
This may seem somewhat colorless, but, according to statistics, the best way to stay out of the penitentiary is to learn a trade. It does not make so much difference what trade the boy learns; any trade learned and followed will have a tendency to keep the boy and later the man out of the penitentiary, if statistics are a criterion.

A student of sociology who has been making a study of prison populations finds that there are very few men with trades in the penal institutions of this country. For example, where there were 177 persons confined in a prison, there was not a single carpenter, bricklayer, plasterer, tailor, printer, painter, or member of the other skilled crafts, to be found. In another state, out of all the prisoners in the penitentiaries, 77 per cent of them had not trades or regular calling.

One can easily believe the correctness of these statements. It is obvious that men having a trade or a regular occupation do not commit crimes to the extent that people do who are without training in any useful line of work or endeavor. To acquire or learn a trade means four and five years of hard work, and hard work and crime do not go hand in hand; it is the fellow who wants to get along without working who causes the most of the trouble in this world. —Bricklayer and Plasterer.

Resolutions.

I will study the language of gentleness and refuse to use words that bite and tones that crush.

I will practice patience at home lest my temper break through unexpectedly and disgrace me.

I will remember that my neighbors have trouble enough without loading mine on them.

I will excuse other's faults and failures as often and as fully as I expect others to be lenient with mine.

I will be a friend under trying tests and wear everywhere a good-will face unchilled by aloofness.

I will love boys and girls so old age will not find me stiff and soured.

I will gladden my nature by smiling out loud on every fair occasion and by outlook optimistically.

I will pray frequently, think good things, believe men, and do a full day's work without fear or favor. —Farm and Fireside.

Liven Up Your Torpid Liver.

To keep your liver active use Dr. King's New Life Pills. They insure good digestion, relieve constipation, and tone up the whole system—keep your eye clear and your skin fresh and healthy looking. Only 25c at your druggist. —Adv

Pedestrians Rights.

D. P. Kingsley strikes a most significant note when he calls the attention of the Safety First Federation of America to the ever-increasing aggressiveness of street traffic toward pedestrians in every town and city of the land large enough to furnish excuse or room for such condition. The pedestrian must look out sharply for himself. If he does not he is likely to get bumped, and might hard at that. Autoists, teamsters, motorcycleists, in fact, pilots of all sorts of vehicles, seem to be obsessed with the idea that the public streets are primarily for their exclusive use and that any man or woman presuming to exercise the privilege of walking abroad is engaging in a perilous enterprise. Such consideration as is shown for the person on foot comes, however, more from motormen than from any other class of drivers. —Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Who Am I?

Sign in Rock Island Arsenal.

I am more powerful than the combined armies of the world.

I am more deadly than bullets, and I have wrecked more homes than the mightiest of siege guns.

I steal in the United States alone over $300,000,000 every year.

I spare no one, and find my victims among the rich and poor alike; the young and the old; the strong and the weak; widows and orphans know me.

I massacre thousands upon thousands of wage earners in a year.

I lurk in unseen places, and do most of my work silently. You are warned against me, but you heed not.

I am relentless. I am everywhere; in the home, on the street, in the factory, at railroad crossings and on the sea.

I bring sickness, degradation and death, and yet few seek to avoid me.

I destroy, crush and maim; I give nothing, but take all.

I am your worst enemy.
I AM CARELESSNESS.

Demagogues are Losing Their Hold.

Twenty years ago the business man was invited to participate actively in politics, and there was an insistent demand that the captains of industry assume the duties of public office and give to the country a business administration of state affairs. The response to the invitation was somewhat general but the result, due in a measure to conditions over which the business man had slight control, were not altogether fortunate. Large sums of money were used in political campaigns, and at last the cry went up that men and legislation were influenced by purely mercenary considerations. A reaction set in and the business man was practically driven from participation in public affairs, his name was anathematized, his property interests were subjected to exactions amounting to almost confiscation, and upon his shoulder were laid the intolerance of the demagogue and the extravagance of a horde of office seekers that multiplied like the plagues of Egypt.

Fortunately we are passing through a second reaction. We are on our way, we trust, to safer and saner conditions. Today there is a growing disposition on the part of the public generally to recognize the legitimate rights of the business man to a large and influential participation in public affairs. His welfare is necessary to the welfare of labor and the state, and if he will meet both on the basis of the greatest good for all, he will be welcomed today as never before. The state needs his counsel and his help, and those temporarily in places of trust and power cannot do better than recognize that fact. —Hon. F. B. Willis, Governor of Ohio.

Forgiveness is the most necessary and proper work of every man; for, though, when I do not a just thing, or a charitable, or a wise, another man may do it for me, yet no man can forgive my enemy but myself. —Lord Herbert.

That the movement to protect the birds of the United States is stronger than it has ever been is the statement of T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary of the National Association of Audubon Societies, in his annual official report. Mr. Pearson, who is in active charge of the association work, reveals in his report that in the last twelve months progress has been made in the bird protecting laws in six states. A backward step or two, through the removal of bird protecting restrictions, are noted, but the friends of the birds are said to have made marked progress all over the United States. Indication of increasing interest in bird protection is shown, he says, by the establishment of bird clubs in widely scattered communities. He regards this as a "manifestation of the new and widespread interest in inducing birds to come about the home, which has recently developed." Nearly 8,000 local bird classes have been organized during the past year with a membership of more than 150,000 persons. A gift to the association of $20,000 from "a friend of the birds," who will not allow his name to be published, is announced by the secretary.

It is reasonable to suppose that the Monroe doctrine will need to be rewritten somewhat and emphasized when the European war is over. America is being well advertised at present and if peace reigns here, with its usual adjunct of prosperity, while other countries are exhausting themselves, envy, not to say greed, eyes will be cast westward. The doctrine is usually interpreted as applying to interference by European monarchies with republics already established here. But monarchies have possessions here which may become republics or may fall as prizes to monarchies which we prefer should not succeed the present owners—as, for instance, England and Holland. Mexico and the countries south are deeply interested in our development into a mighty world power. They may or may not remain trusted and complacent as the case now stands. A pan-American alliance in defense of the doctrine restated and up to date might add to its force before the world and at the same time make it no more aggressive than it is now popularly supposed to be.

Mr. Choate should know what he is talking about when he says that the United States is the most hated nation in the world. He served as ambassador to England, where the pulse of the world is taken. Nevertheless the smile which the Europeans put on while bordering our cash looks just like the kind that won't come off.

'Tis said that kings and emperors and lesser potentates are on the firing line, but not one has yet struck an attitude and shouted: "A horse, a horse! My kingdom for a horse!"
