HEAVILY TINNED MILK PAILS

All Crevices and Seams Should Be Flushed Full and Smoothed With Solder—Use No Wood.

The best milking pail is the one so constructed that it will reduce to a minimum the amount of dirt falling into the milk during the process of milking. The small top pail may have some objections, but its advantages are so evident that it is rapidly being adopted by most of our prominent dairymen.

All milk utensils should be heavily tinned and as free from seams as it is possible to get them. All crevices and seams should be flushed full and smooth with solder. If pails and cans of this kind cannot be purchased, take them to a local tinner and have him fill up all crevices with solder. Wooden pans readily absorb milk particles, making it almost impossible to keep them sweet and clean. For this reason they should have no place in the dairy.

To thoroughly clean milk utensils they should be rinsed with cold water to remove all particles of milk. Then they should be scrubbed with a brush in warm water, after which they should be steamed or at least rinsed in boiling water. No wiping cloth should be used. Sunlight is one of the best disinfectants and when possible all utensils should be given the benefit of good sunlight and pure air.

GOOD LIGHT FOR DAIRY BARN

Considering Results Secured From Putting in Windows, Expense is Small—Provide Fresh Air.

It has been learned by the experience of expert dairymen all over the country that every cow should have four square feet of light and that the windows should be arranged to allow an even distribution of light throughout the barn. Considering the results, the expense of putting in windows is small. The increase in cost in a dairy barn 30 or 40 feet long is from $20 to $25. The system of ventilation commonly used consists of two sets of flues. The inlets or fresh air flues should be near the roof and not more than ten feet apart. The greater the number the more effective the ventilation, since they enable the fresh air to displace the foul air more rapidly. The outlets should be placed to provide the quickest escape for the foul air.

DAIRY NOTES

A good milch cow never becomes rolling fat.

Raise and keep all heifer calves from the best cows.

It ought to hurt any man's conscience to sell dirty milk.

Milk suffers contamination more quickly than any other food.

Treat the cows kindly and they will repay you in dollars and cents.

The man with plenty of alfalfa is not worrying about bran at $25 a ton.

Dairymen build up the soil for the reason that it takes little of its substance.

The owner of a good milk cow cannot afford to sell her at twice beef prices.

One way to be sure of a good dairy herd is to raise it yourself and know what you've got.

None of the new fangled churns have yet put the old-fashioned barrel churn on the shelf.

The sire is more than half the herd. Be sure that the sire heading your herd will transmit dairy characteristics.

THE FARMERS' INSTITUTE.

The Great Bend Farmers' Institute will hold its annual meeting on Friday and Saturday, December 19 and 20, 1913.

Mr. A. S. Neale and Miss Florence Smeal, from the Agricultural College are expected to be present.

There was such a revival in many institutes in Kansas last year that an unusually interesting and profitable season is expected. In many institutes local speakers of much power are being developed. These men know the problems of their own community and are a splendid help to the practical and forceful men and women sent out by the Kansas Agricultural College. Everyone interested in better farming, closer co-operation and better homes, both in the country and in town, is cordially invited to be present and take part.

All are asked to bring exhibits of orchard, garden and farm products, and are urged to come for the first session and stay until the last.
