THREE SUICIDES.
[The MS. of the following poem was handed to me by the author who claimed that it had taken a prize offered by Le Semeur, a Paris newspaper, for the best English poem of eighteen lines. He also claimed that Henry Labouchere declared the second stanza to be the best six lines ever written in English. The signature attached to the poem was, "Caldwell, the Ethnologist."—Eds.]
Cheerful tints of a dying day,
Bathed the hills with a flood of gold;
The forest wore coronation hues,
Like the robe of a prince of old.
My child heart sang a glistening lay
As I watched the tints of that dying day.
Gorgeous tints of a dying day!
Clouds of purple and green and gold
Flecked the glowing sky of the west
And crimson-dyed the heavy fold.
My heart was brave and strong and gay
As I watched the tints of that dying day.
Sombre tints of a dying day!
Leadon hues and gloomiest brown
Hang like a coffin's heavy pall
Over dreary vale and mountain crown,
And slowly fades all hope away
As I watch the tints of this dying day.

Editorial Notes.
The democrats are demanding that no more ratifications be issued to the mugwump contingent.
The best headline furnished by the Ohio election was this from the Chicago Times: "Roady? Hardly."
JUDGE FORAKER, having made his own calling and election sure, is now assisting the republicans in New York.
It is getting to be a well recognized fact, that the merchants who sow the most advertisements, gather the best crop of business.

The Topeka Capital has enlarged to seven columns, with everything "solid" except editorial. The Capital deserves the solid basis upon which it stands.
We can imagine we see Father Baker "smile and smile" when he reads Albert Griffin's ecstatic utterances over the "fortunate accession of the Commonwealth to the prohibition ranks."

GEN. THOMBS, probably on his death bed, denies that he ever said he would one day call the roll of his slaves on Bunker Hill.—Ex.
One thing is certain, he never did.
KANSAS CITY expects to possess a panorama of the battle of Missionary Ridge and Lookout Mountain, like the famous panoramas, the battle of Gettysburg and the siege of Paris.
AFTER thirteen years of ownership and editorship of the Chautauque Times, Mr. A. L. Rivers says "Good Bye" in the last issue and climbs down from the tripod. He gives no intimation of his future actions.
THE Neosho Falls Post has finally learned that there was a reunion at Topeka a month or so ago, and its last issue contains a column account of it. As a chronicler of ancient history the Post is entitled to the bakery.

In a Louisville divorce suit, tried last week, one of the complaints of the wife was that her husband cut all the dry goods advertisements out of the morning papers, leaving nothing but the ordinary matter for her to read.
THAT people are attracted to Sam Jones' meeting by something more than idle curiosity is shown by the fact that after his last sermon at St. Joseph the audience subscribed $38,000 for the erection of a Y. M. C. A. building.

TOPEKA papers say that Jake Stoller, of the Wellington Press, blew out the gas on retiring at the Wind-or-hotel the other night, and was nearly suffocated before the clerk found out what was the matter. Who signed the old man's application?

It is amusing to notice the subjects chosen by some of the great democrats to dabble for leaders since the news from Ohio. The Kansas City Times, for instance, has been giving us long disquisitions on "Priory and the Stage," "Frocks and Dramatic Art," "What shall Young People Read?" etc., etc.
MRS. MURDOCK has got caught with a "relic." It is a copy of the Ulster County Gazette of July 4, 1800. That paper was reproduced by a fac simile copy prior to 1850 and thousands of them printed. We have had at least a dozen copies sent to us as the "only original."—Commonwealth.

THE REGISTER is also the proud possessor of one of said "originals."
Why is it that intruding by railroad you are seldom made to feel uncomfortable or disagreeable by drunken men except in prohibition states? Here in Kansas drunken men stagger through the cars noisy and blasphemous, as I have not seen elsewhere in traveling through eight states. Yet Gov. St. John goes east to make reformation! Why is it?
A LYONS MAN IN KANSAS.
—Lyons (N. Y.) Republican.
It isn't. The man from Lyons has told a lie on Kansas.
THE people of Carbonate must certainly be long suffering and full of mercy, or they would put a quietus on the Antistone and Paralyser. For the past six months it has contained nothing to speak of but filthy and disgusting abuse of nearly everybody in Oage county. And yet this paper, that no decent man ought to take into his family, is better patronized than are plenty of other papers that are clean and respectable. Human nature is a queer compound.

ALLEN THORNDIKE RICE, editor and proprietor of the North American Review, announces that he has concluded an agreement with General Beauregard by which he will write a series of four articles on "The Shiloh Campaign," "The Defense of Charleston," "The Dury Bluffs Campaign" and "The Defense of Petersburg." These articles will appear in the North American Review in the course of 1886. The Shiloh article, which is likely to produce a lively controversy, will appear in the January number.

AMONG the resolutions adopted at the close of the late meeting of the Synod of Kansas at Topeka, was the following sensible, timely and truthful statement of the status of the liquor question in this state:
We desire to correct the impression that exists in many sections of the country that "prohibition in Kansas is a failure and the people are tired of it," and all such expressions which tend to mislead the popular mind. With the exception of some of our cities bordering upon the Missouri line and a few other points located in Kansas is a failure and the people are tired of it," and all such expressions which tend to mislead the popular mind. With the exception of some of our cities bordering upon the Missouri line and a few other points located in Kansas is a failure and the people are tired of it," and all such expressions which tend to mislead the popular mind. With the exception of some of our cities bordering upon the Missouri line and a few other points located in Kansas is a failure and the people are tired of it," and all such expressions which tend to mislead the popular mind.

As to the merits of the manner in which it is told there will be a great difference of opinion. The style is an uncommon one and will hardly strike all readers favorably. The construction of sentences is out of the usual line and the choice of words is often peculiar. For instance, the talk of an assembly is described as "reminiscent, furious, stygian, avenging." Of a marshal's posse who were badly frightened, it is said that "the road to Fort Scott smoked with the recollection of their return." And so dozens of examples might be pointed out, of words that are not used by the common run of people, and of sentences that are not constructed after the accepted models. While these peculiarities add piquancy to the story, it is questionable whether they do not tend somewhat to confuse the average reader, while in some places they leave an unpleasant suggestion of flippancy.

No one has ever yet succeeded in writing a history of Kansas that pleased the friends of both Gov. Robinson and Gen. Lane, and probably no one ever will. Certainly Prof. Spring has not met such success. He has no words of praise for Jim Lane, and he has no words of censure for Gov. Robinson. One is a shy, unscrupulous, unprincipled demagogue; the other is a far-seeing, high-minded, unselfish patriot. It is not wondered at that the friends of Lane should object to such an antithesis. As to what extent the characterization is correct, we do not pretend to judge. We do know, however, that in the popular mind Jim Lane played a much more important and patriotic part in the early struggles than is assigned to him in this book.
But aside from the matter of style and the treatment of the Robinson-Lane controversy, there remains little to be criticized. The book is as entertaining as a novel. When one begins it is loth to lay it down until it is finished. And the work has not been hastily done. Every page shows the most pains taking research and shows that the writer has availed himself of every possible source of information. In short, it is such a book as we should expect from the cultivated and scholarly author, and one which no one who wishes to be posted in Kansas history and Kansas literature should be without. The publishers have wisely issued it at the low price of $1.25, and it ought to reach a large sale. W. F. Brownell, Lawrence, is general agent for Kansas.

PROF. SPRING'S "KANSAS"
"Kansas; the Prelude to the War for the Union." By Leverett W. Spring, Professor in English Literature in the University of Kansas. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.
Such is the title of a neat volume of some 350 pages which we have recently received and which we have read with a great deal of pleasure. The book is one of the "American Commonwealth" series which is being issued under the editorship of Horace Scudder, and limits itself to the story of Territorial Kansas. The foundation for an intelligent understanding of the conflicting forces at work during the troublous era treated of, is laid by a clear statement of the famous compromise measures of 1854, and the Congressional discussions over the Kansas-

Nebraska bill. With the triumph of the "Squatter Sovereign" idea came the struggle between the north and the south as to to which should possess Kansas. The activity of New England in sending free-soil settlers to the new Territory, the organization of Emigrant Aid Societies and the opposition and dangers encountered by the would-be "sovereigns," is told with very satisfactory details. The temper of Missouri too, the condition of things along the border and the efforts made by the south to check-mate the moves of the north are all brought into view and painted in strong colors. The neighborly conduct of Missourians in coming over by thousands and voting at the Territorial elections; their readiness to cross the border at all times and take a hand in whatever was going on; the election of the "bogus" Legislature and the peculiar statutes enacted by it; the skirmishes and collisions that were constantly occurring between the opposing parties, amounting sometimes to pitched battles, as at Black Jack; the appearance of old John Brown on the scene; the attempts and failures of one governor after another to restore order; the efforts of the anti-slavery leaders to hold their party together and to win by diplomacy what they could not gain by force or laws; their many discouragements, their dangers, their final success, which all the world knows—these make up the story that is told by the little book before us.

As to the merits of the manner in which it is told there will be a great difference of opinion. The style is an uncommon one and will hardly strike all readers favorably. The construction of sentences is out of the usual line and the choice of words is often peculiar. For instance, the talk of an assembly is described as "reminiscent, furious, stygian, avenging." THIS IDEA OF GOING WEST to Colorado or New Mexico, for pure air to relieve consumption, is all a mistake. Any reasonable man would use Dr. Rosanko's Cough and Lung Syrup for consumption in all its first stages. "ASIATIC CHOLERA"
Is the most dangerous and destructive of all contagious diseases; in fact, diarrhoea, cholera morbus and stomach disorders are greatly modified forms of this disease. For sale by Goodhue & Evans.
