

ROOSEVELT ENJOYED IT

The Discourteous Interruptions Never Bothered Him at All

Victor, Col., Sept. 27.—For just sixty minutes Victor yesterday gave Theodore Roosevelt, governor of New York, one of the exciting experiences of his life.

When he got safely aboard his private car he remarked to the reporters: "Santiago and San Juan hill were not in it. I have no kick, however. All I can say is that I had a bully good time."

The car containing Governor Roosevelt, arrived in Victor at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon.

The guests were hurried to the armory hall, several blocks away, where here was a great jam. Senator Wolcott stepped to the stage and in his breezy way informed the gathering that the party only had a few minutes.

"Hurrah for Bryan!" chirruped a little boy in the front seat.

"That's so," remarked Mr. Wolcott smiling good naturedly at the youngster, whereupon the rising voter repeated his vociferation.

"My little boy, don't they teach you any manners where you go to school?" asked the senator. Mr. Wolcott proceeded to introduce Governor Roosevelt. There was plenty of cheering, but above it all was heard a voice calling for three cheers for Bryan. The outburst that followed this was spontaneous and for twenty minutes cheers for Bryan filled the hall. Some one on the stage called for cheers for McKinley and then there was more noise followed by more cheers for Bryan.

"Why don't you Democrats cheer for Aguinaldo as well as Bryan," yelled Senator Wolcott, now thoroughly aroused.

As Mr. Roosevelt arose to his feet there were tumultuous cheers. It was several minutes before the din subsided and the men on the platform began to fancy they had easy sailing for the rest of the meeting.

"Fellow Americans, Fellow Citizens of Colorado," began Mr. Roosevelt, "I appeal to you for the sake of your material prosperity, for the sake of continuance of the prosperity we have had for four years, for the sake of the honor of the flag, to act with judgment in this great national emergency."

There were more cheers for Roosevelt.

"I appeal to you to let well enough alone," said the governor. "For the past four years haven't the pledges of the Republican party been kept? Why, then, make a change? Has not the country proceeded by leaps and bounds toward a prosperous condition, and hasn't Colorado kept pace with the upward tendency?"

A voice in the audience: "How about trusts?"

"Yes, I will tell you about trusts. The biggest trust in the country, the ice trust, is run by Democrats, and the man who sat in the committee that framed the Kansas City platform had his pockets bulging out with certificates of stock in that trust. (Applause). Likewise that other distinguished Democrat, Richard Croker, he is in that trust."

A voice: "And Van Wyck?"

Roosevelt: "Yes, and Mr. Van Wyck. If you were to get a list of the stockholders you would think you were reading the proceedings of a Tammany hall meeting. I am willing to answer any other questions you may ask."

A voice: "How about international bimetalism?" Then suddenly there were cries of "16 to 1."

"I'll bet you 16 to 1 that you won't elect your man," shouted Senator Wolcott, as he sprang to the front of the platform. Mr. Wolcott was received with jeers. There were more cries for Bryan.

"Do you want to be written up the world over that you are a people afraid of public discussion, that you are discourteous to the governor of a sister state who honors your town by visiting it?" shouted Senator Wolcott pale with anger.

While Mr. Wolcott was speaking every man on the platform was on his feet and Governor Roosevelt stood calmly in front awaiting for quiet to be restored. Finally he resumed and in replying to the question in regard to bimetalism, said that if the people condemned Senator Wolcott for the failure of the international commission they would also have to condemn Mr. Stevenson, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, who was also on the commission.

"Now, fellow citizens," resumed Mr. Roosevelt, "let me return to the material prosperity in which you are so deeply interested." Along this line he managed to make himself heard for five minutes when he was finally compelled to stop.

"Don't forget Aguinaldo," yelled Senator Wolcott. General Hale started his remarks with the statement that he had voted for Bryan four years ago, that he was just as good a bimetalist now as then, but that he intended to vote for McKinley. There were more shouters of derision and General Hale was unable to proceed.

Mr. Goudy essayed to speak, and did say that, like General Hale, he was a bimetalist four years ago. "No you weren't," yelled the crowd. "When I am governor of this state," continued Mr. Goudy, "I will run its affairs honestly and will see that justice is accorded the wage earners." He tried to go on but the confusion was so great that the meeting stopped. On the way to the train an effort was made to form a line, preceded by a brass band. Still surrounded and protected by his friends Governor Roosevelt refused to go across lots to his car.

"I'll take the middle of the street," said the governor. He did, and the crowd took all the sides of it. The hooting and yelling continued and a number of men wanted to stop the governor for an argument.

A free fight resulted. Lyman White of Cripple Creek, who was one of Roosevelt's escorts, struck a young man in uniform, supposing him to be an assailant. Other blows were exchanged and for a few minutes there were several prostrate forms rolling in the mud.

In the meantime Governor Roosevelt was being hurried to his car, and in a few minutes the train started, the crowd jeering and hooting until it was out of sight.

Governor Roosevelt was not injured. One man struck him a blow in the chest. His only comment was stated as a jocular one to the effect that "he had had a bully good time."

Governor Roosevelt said of the incident at Victor: "If Bryan were in New York and were he treated as I was in Victor today, I would call out the entire power of the state to protect him."

Chicago, Sept. 27.—Speaking of the Victor affair Chairman Payne of the Republican committee said he thought it had no significance. Chairman Jones of the Democratic committee would not believe it at first and then inclined to the belief that a member of Roosevelt's party was to blame for the trouble. Mr. Bryan said that he regretted the affair and such actions injured the cause.

A TROLLEY WRECK

Car Jumped the Track and Several People Were Injured

Wichita, Kansas Sept. 30.—A car on the Fairmount college line of the Wichita street railway ran off the bridge over Chisholm creek here this afternoon and turned side up in three and a half feet of water. There were about thirty people on the car, and nearly every one of them was hurt, some seriously, others receiving only slight injuries.

Charles Doyle, a boy of 13, had a leg broken; Frank Reibstein had four ribs broken and several cuts on his side and arm. Mr. Mercer and wife, of Liberty, Ind., bruised about the face and shoulders. Miss Josephine Ferguson had her face badly cut. There were eight children on the car, but they were saved from drowning by the men, who clambered over the car railing and poked them out of the water. The wreck was caused by the heavy rains of the last four or five days which softened the ground and made the bridge supports unsubstantial. The street railway authorities had inspected the bridge, but there had been no washing away of dirt and the bridge appeared to be solid. Cars had run over it all day. Probably none of the injured ones will die.

GRIZZLED VETERAN TALK

Otis and Wheeler and Sickles Say, "Hold Them Philippines."

New York, Sept. 27.—Major General Elwell S. Otis, U. S. A., was entertained at dinner tonight at Delmonico's by Lafayette Post No. 140, G. A. R. General J. Fred Pierson presiding. General Otis was introduced and was received with cheers. The chief points of his address are as follows: "The war with Spain, wise or not, fortunate or unfortunate, was demanded by the country. The war in its legitimate course of prosecution, led us to Manila bay, resulted in the destruction of the Spanish fleet and the capture of the city of Manila. Spain ceded all her property in the islands under a sacred international compact. It has been charged that she had lost through revolution her right to cede this territory. She held it firmly, before the United States throttled her, and while the latter held her helpless, certain Tagalos of Luzon took advantage of the situation to reanimate a defunct rebellion and capture the small Luzon garrison which she, because of conditions imposed by the United States, was powerless to reinforce. If she lost any portion of her sovereignty she lost it while under duress and in the power of the United States and while negotiations were pending to transfer to the latter. Surely, revolution can scarcely carry with it property rights of such a character."

General Otis charged Aguinaldo with treachery and with wanting to destroy the American army while pretending to be its friend and declared that the United States must hold the Philippines. He said that the idea of now withdrawing the American troops and giving the islands independence was preposterous as it would be followed by anarchy and a carnival of blood.

General Otis closed by saying: "I repeat that I am a good Filipino and advocate the doctrine of the Philippine people. I reassert that I know nothing of politics but sincerely believe from my knowledge of the benevolent sentiments of the people of the United States that whatever its future complexion the policy of the government toward those islands cannot radically change. We are there—whether by the direction of providence or the machinations of Satan, it seems hard for many to determine—but we are there and we must make the best of it for all concerned."

General Joe Wheeler then spoke to the toast of "Our Country." He said: "Great and glorious and grand as our country is it is yet a marvelous contradiction. We are not a military people. We are a peace loving people, and yet we are the most martial, and when necessary, the most warlike of all people on earth. We take our greatest pride in our triumphs of peace, but we startle the world by our prowess, our heroism and our victories in war. We seek to avoid entanglements with other nations, but today every nation on the face of the globe before it makes a diplomatic move telegraphs to its ministers in Washington and learns the views, wishes and demands of the American people."

General Sickles spoke to the toast, "Our Flag." He said in part: "No man living and no number of men living are authorized to snuff our flag; that far mayst thou go and no further." The flag consecrates its defenders. That means that whoever conspires or combines to injure it or kill its defenders is a traitor. (Applause.) We had them in 1864 and in 1900 there are the same copperheads again. Some people say that flag means conquest. If it means conquest why did we not keep Mexico. We are the defenders, not the purloiners, of republics, as we showed in the cases of Venezuela and Brazil."

General Brooks spoke to the toast: "The Army," and Rear Admiral Barker responded for the "Navy." Past Commander-in-Chief Albert D. Shaw spoke for the Grand Army of the Republic.

An impecunious but thrifty choir at Emporia sent to a medicine company for hymn books which they advertised free. A Glacier in the Alleghenies.

At one time glaciers were known to have extended to the Arctic ocean and to have covered much of the United States to the Ohio river. Traces of the action of these glaciers may still be found in what is known as glacial drift or stones, and big bowlders that were brought down on these rivers of ice. There is said to be the remains of one in a high valley of North Mountain, near Wilkesbarre, Pa. It begins just where the forest ends. A sort of soil of sand and decayed forest leaves covers it for a few inches in depth below which there is water for several feet and then solid ice to the earth bottom of the valley. In a few years at most the ice will have melted and the water run away to the sea and then the bed of this spur of a glacier may be traced by the geologist, before ever it be made the sleeping place of bird or flower, or harbor an acorn in a soil that for perhaps a million years has not awakened to the kiss of the sun.—Little Chronicle.

Cochman Obeys Orders.

From Downs there is reported an instance of "carrying a message to Garcia," which did not result so satisfactorily as it might. G. W. Young telegraphed his coachman at Downs to "meet me to-night with team at Salem." Salem being a small town a few miles away. But when the coachman received the message it read: "Meet me to-night with team at Salina," a big town 96 miles away. The coachman asked the telegraph operator to have the message repeated, and it came "Salina" again, whereupon he started for that place and reached it by night, though he ruined both horses in the finest team of Osborne county.—Kansas City Journal.

A Domestic Incumbence.

Mrs. Ella W. Peattie is as happily gifted in disposition as in literary talents. Not many persons are able to turn the official visitation of the census taker into a delight, but this is what Mrs. Peattie did. Mr. Peattie, who was attempting to sleep in an adjoining room, heard the intelligent census taker ask: "Do you own your house?"

This was answered in the affirmative, and then came the question: "Is there any incumbence on it?"

Without a moment's hesitation Mrs. Peattie answered: "None—excepting my husband!"—Philadelphia Saturday Evening Post.

Clear Waters of Alaska.

About one-half of southern Alaska is water. The inlets and bays are so numerous as to be one of the wonders of the world. Both the salt water and fresh water are remarkably clear. Fish and other marine animals may be seen to the depth of 20 and 30 feet beneath the surface of the water. There are no sandy beaches and no tide flats. The timber comes down to the water's edge. The waters are so cold that fish, as well as shellfish, are good throughout the year.—N. Y. Herald.

A French explorer has discovered on the west coast of Africa what he regards as the vainest people on earth. The Difference in Crowds.

The REGISTER reporter attended the Long meeting at Iola and also at Chanute and was forcibly struck by the difference in Iola and Chanute during a campaign.

At Iola where the Republicans have an overwhelming majority it takes a yoke of oxen to get them to turn out to the number of 200 and this number wouldn't go three blocks from the square to a speaking. And there wouldn't be half a dozen ladies in the crowd, no processions, no whoops, no yells.

At Chanute, a smaller place, on Saturday night things were popping. One party was whooping it up for the Webster Davis meeting and had the Chanute band, a torch light procession, fireworks, and Indian yells. The Republicans had a torch light procession, fireworks, the Fredonia band and yells. And the latter took a crowd twice the number that could get in the hall, seven blocks from town to Floral hall at the fair grounds to hear Long, and a third of the crowd were ladies.

And that crowd heard Long make the same speech he made here but the crowd didn't catch half the points or didn't enthuse worth a cent. At the Iola meeting the crowd anticipated the speaker's thrusts and he had to wait time and again for the laughter and applause to die away. For instance when he referred to Jerry Simpson as "formerly congressman from the 7th district, and now one of my constituents," The Iola crowd laughed so he had to wait for quiet. At Chanute, indoors where every body could hear him, not a sound greeted this sally.

Everybody was disappointed that the joint debate could not be arranged, but Mr. Davis's Chanute friends would not stand for it. Mr. Long referred to Mr. Davis in his opening remarks. He said Davis was a better orator than he, was not afraid of him physically but simply did not want to stand before a crowd and have the questions asked which he knew Long would ask. Mr. Long asked the questions, largely taken from Davis's former speeches, and the crowd sympathized with the gentleman's absence. Mr. Davis might have evaded the terrible embarrassment of those questions but none in the crowd could nor could see how he could.

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surface.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circular free.
