SCOTT LEAVITT REVIEWS WORK

Montana Director of Federal Employment Compiles Records of His Office for Past Five Months.

Great Falls, Jan. 16.—With the close of the year 1918, the United States employment service completed the fifth month of its existence in Montana. Figures compiled at the office of Federal Director Scott Leavitt show a healthy growth of the service during that period, and, further, a growing confidence in the service both from the laboring men and women and from the employer.

Organized for the purpose of assisting munitions manufacturers and other big employers engaged in war work and to prevent loss of time between jobs for employees, the service was extended until now all classes of labor are served, from the person seeking help for an hour to the professional man and woman technically trained to fill positions of trust. In the state of Montana, the service reached a high point of efficiency right at the time when it was of the most value to the farmer harvesting the grain crops.

That was a time when labor was far more scarce than at any time in the history of the country. Thousands of men had been called to the nation's armed forces, while thousands of others had been shipped to the country's seaboard for work in the shipyards.

During the five months covered in the report compiled at the office of the federal director of employment for Montana, the 14 offices in the state were called upon to fill a total of 9,070 positions for women and 34,051 positions for men. But during that period the demand exceeded the supply, for at no time did the number of persons referred to these positions equal the number of positions. However, things are different now, and when the January report is compiled it will show that the number of applications will far exceed the number of requests.

The report shows that in August the service received 711 requests for female help, registered 577 and referred 423. This number was increased more than 2000 per cent between that month and December, when requests were made for 3,028 women, but only 1,613 registered, of which 1,418 were referred, and 1,228 were reported placed. The unofficial records of the service show that more than this number were placed, but the employers neglected to return the introduction cards, and these are not included.

In August the number of requests for male help received in the various offices of the state total 9,313. About a third of this number registered and 2,810 were referred, but only 1,614 returned cards reported men placed. However, it is stated that practically all of those referred were placed.

During the month of December a total of 3,607 men were referred and 3,401 "placed" cards were returned to the offices. This number of men were referred upon demands for 4,139 men. This report shows an increase of about 30 per cent in the number of men referred, while the number placed shows an increase of more than 100 per cent. Then, too, it should be borne in mind that December is usually a slack month.

November was the banner month in male help wanted and also referred, the figures showing that there were 6,610 registrations, 7,189 requests for help, and 6,041 reported placed. October shows the largest number of requests for help, the total being 7,492, with only 4,561 reported placed.

The records further show a total of visits paid to the offices of the service on business connected with it, to have been 77,699, of which 11,606 were women and 66,093 were men.

TWO JUGS OF WHISKEY $125

Dickinson, N. D., Jan. 16.—Theodore Deletzke, former junk buyer in this city, and erstwhile constable at Belfield, is in the toils of the law on a charge of importing booze into "bone dry" territory, in the shape of two suitcases which it is said contained four gallons of whiskey, 14 smaller bottles of "red eye," and a bottle of wine.

It is said that Deletzke had been bragging about how he sold two gallons of booze at retail Christmas day for $125. Officer McDonough got wind of Deletzke's alleged exploits, and laid for him upon the man's return from Wibaux on No. 4 Tuesday morning. The alleged booze purveyor wasn't taking any undue chances, however, and hopped off on the side of the train farthest from the depot. McDonough was on the job, however, and nabbed him with the goods.

Deletzke became famous a year ago when he was convicted on the charges of stealing a goose from Simon Guon and later beating him up, drawing a sentence of 90 days.

MINERS' DANCE A HUGE SUCCESS

The dance given by the Metal Mine Workers' union at Fallmont hall last evening proved to be the largest attended affair of its kind of the season. From both a social and financial standpoint it was a huge success.

MILL TRUST STARTS WILD PROFITEERING

Removal of Regulations Is Signal for Jumps in Prices Throughout the Country on Feeds and Flour.

St. Paul, Minn., Jan. 16.—Millers of Minnesota, the "breadbasket of the world," doubled the price of bran and middlings and slightly advanced the price of flour, immediately after the interference with the profits effected by federal regulation of the food commission was removed. That there is no economic justification for the advance is stated by F. W. Peck, associate in farm management at the college of agriculture of the University of Minnesota. Stock feeders, hardest hit by the arbitrary advance exacted by the milling combine, declare that the only reason for the advance was that the millers found that they had the power to get the higher prices—and they exercised their power, which had been denied them during the period of actual war.

The day before the federal regulation was lifted bran was quoted at $27.73 and middlings sold for $29.73. When the federal regulation of prices was removed the price of bran shot to $41 a ton, with middlings selling at $46. A couple of days later the price of bran went up another notch, to $43 a ton. Flour, milled according to war standards, advanced 30 cents a barrel.

In the meantime the millers get the advantage of buying wheat from the farmer at the government-regulated price. There has been no variation from the government-controlled wheat price paid to the farmers. There has been no advance of any other cost of production of flour and the by-products of wheat. Milling costs, as well as the cost of the wheat, remain the same.

For some time there has been a growing feeling that the millers as well as the other interests of the country have been merely waiting for government control to be lifted before they took arbitrary control of prices of food and feed again, and advanced the prices wherever they chose. This instance seems to be a substantiation of that fear. These persons predict continued advance in the price of foodstuffs. They cite that under the speculative system of marketing wheat, under pre-war conditions, gamblers were able to put down the price of grain when they bought it from the farmer and then shoot up the price when they had control of it, thus inflating the cost of all foodstuffs. They predict that although this system is temporarily removed, the combine will greatly advance the price of finished wheat products in order to secure recompense and revenge for profits lost during the period of government regulation, and also for profits lost under the present fixed wheat price.

The official of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers in charge of this group of pickets selected six men for arrest, and they marched away smiling to the police patrol. Most of the other arrests were made by excited policemen, who were censured by Magistrate Marsh later in Jefferson Market court after the magistrate had discharged all 19 pickets.

"You have no right to interfere with strike pickets who are peacefully and legally performing picketing in front of the factories which are on strike," the magistrate declared. "From the evidence, it has been shown these people were peacefully picketing, and that is perfectly proper."

co-operation of a union official and a police captain. The police captain contended mass picketing was illegal. The union official contradicted him.

"I don't want to fight with you about it," said this remarkable police officer. "I will arrest six men and make a test case for the court to decide."

With the arrival of veteran police officers, who knew the leaders of the strike, the attacks on the pickets were lessened. Nineteen pickets were arrested for refusing to go away from the factories when the police charged their lines. Six of this number were arrested through
