I. W. W. RECEIVED

There never had been any doubt in their minds as to what the verdict would be. As they were led out of the courtroom they sang "Solidarity Forever!"

The next morning, Jan. 17, the 43 "silent defendants" were brought in for sentence. The three who had refused to join in their decision to put up no defense were absent. "Have any of the defendants anything to say before I pass sentence?" asked Judge Frank H. Rudkin.

They had, indeed. Their pledge of silence, "in contempt of court," was to last only until they had been convicted. Their tongues were now loosed. Eleven of them spoke, occupying the entire morning, during which time the 43 stood shoulder to shoulder before the court and delivered probably as scathing an arraignment of capitalist justice as has ever been voiced by workmen.

Through every speech rang the spirit of unflinching defiance which the men had consistently shown during their 15 months' imprisonment and the organization in which they sounded the infuriating note customary under such circumstances. "Perjurers" was their scornful characterization of the witnesses for the prosecution and their denunciation of the methods used by the prosecution was so merciless that finally United States District Attorney Robert Duncan pleaded: "May it please your honor, I assure you that not one witness put on the stand perjured himself."

"The defendants will proceed with what they have to say," was the judge's reply.

Two Convicted Not in I. W. W. Mortimer Downing, one of the spokesmen, pointed out that two of the convicted men, W. H. Faust and Felix Cedeno, were not even members of the organization in which they were accused of having conspired; that official records showed that defendant O'Connell was in the hospital at the time when one of the government witnesses swore that he had set fire to the building, and that he himself already had been "railroaded" to jail at the time when the government detectives swore that he was out on the picket line in connection with the Wheatland hop-pickers' strike in 1913.

The evident embarrassment of the government officials at these charges was increased when Downing bitterly arraigned the authorities for forcing a sick man, Frederick Esmond, now believed to be dying of heart disease, complicated with consumption, to sleep on the jail floor without bedding for over two months, along with the other defendants, five of whom died of influenza or pneumonia.

"Every employer claims the right to set the hours and wages and conditions under which his men shall work," said Downing. "Well, I will tell you what we mean by direct action and action on the job. We mean that the worker is going to tell the boss when and where and for how much and under what conditions he will work. The I. W. W. have taught this, and will continue to teach it, until the workers gradually become stronger and stronger and finally take over the industries."

Says Prosecutor Broke Laws. "I am glad I am a member of the I. W. W., whom the district attorney calls the scum of the earth," said James Price, another defendant. "At least, I have kept my word and stood by my principles. The district attorney swore to uphold the laws of the land, but he has violated every principle of the constitution. When he is charged with suborning, he has the I. W. W. backed clean off the boards."

In a short, fiery speech of defiance, James Mulrooney told the judge why he had become an I. W. W. after witnessing in Butte, Mont., in the summer of 1917, the lynching of a sick man, Frank Little, a member of the executive committee of the organization. He also witnessed the Spectator mine disaster, when 167 workers were killed.

"I uphold every principle of the I. W. W.," was his closing challenge. "I am not much of a speaker," said Frank Elliot, "as I come from the ranks of labor, but I want to express my supreme contempt for the whole gang." Frederick Esmond, referred to above, made an impassioned address in which he tore to shreds the testimony of the government detectives and stool pigeons, denouncing the whole trial as a disgrace to the country.

One short sentence was the speech of Roy P. Connor. "I have nothing but contempt for a court where perjury is considered patriotic."

Godfrey Ebel told how he had been arrested without a warrant and when he refused to give perjured testimony against his fellow workers, put in solitary confinement, not even being allowed anything to read, and when his release was ordered by Judge Dooling of San Francisco, rearrested and thrown into jail along with the others. Will Hood, another of the convicted men, declared that "Dublin Bob" Connellan was imprisoned at the very time when the prosecution's witness, Bollhorn, had testified to having seen him near a building which he was accused of having fired. Hood's denunciation of Bollhorn and of the methods used by the government to secure a conviction was so vigorous that the judge finally brought him to a halt.

"We didn't come here expecting justice," said Phil McLaughlin. "We want all you will give us. We'll do the same to you when our turn comes."

The reading of the sentences was greeted with scornful laughter by the 43 workmen, more than half of whom, with a smile of contempt on their lips, heard themselves condemned to 10 years in prison. They were led back to jail singing: "Hold the fort, for we are coming. Union men, be strong. Julius Weinberg, who had turned state's evidence, was then led forward to make his plea. "I know these men, your honor," he read from his written plea for mercy, "and know the harm that would come to you and me and the United States if they should achieve their aims."

The judge let him off with two

SHIPYARDS STRIKE

Central Labor council, have been in session was to the effect that a general strike in support of the 25,000 striking shipyard workers will be called on Thursday morning, Feb. 6, at 10 o'clock.

The strike date recommended will be subject to final action by the central labor council at its meeting Wednesday night.

The Seattle Typographical union voted to join in the strike and the longshoremen's union decided to disregard the orders of its international officers prohibiting the Seattle union from taking part in the strike, as it voted to do last week. The street car men's union polled a majority strike vote and telegraphed international officers for approval.

Great Falls, Feb. 3.—The Great Northern district federation of Great Falls voted to strike in support of the machinists at a mass meeting of the federation at Carpenters' hall yesterday. The strike is effective Tuesday if no settlement is reached today. They are striking to uphold general order No. 27, issued by the United States director of railways. Organizations involved are the machinists, blacksmiths, boiler makers, sheet metal workers, carmen and machinists' helpers.

Seattle, Feb. 3.—At a meeting representing local unions held here yesterday a motion unanimously prevailed to call a general strike in support of the metal trades workers. The strike is to be called Thursday, Feb. 6, at 10 a. m. The cooks and waiters will care for the public and strikers in places run by strikers only and in designated places.

As a protest against the alleged employing of non-union electricians on a Postal line being built into Butte from Oredon along the right of way of the Oregon Short Line, electricians of Butte threaten to strike against the two local telegraph companies.

Efforts to avert the strike are being made by government officials, who expect word from Washington today or tomorrow. According to local union men, an agreement prevents them from striking against the Postal alone to protest against the non-union workers. Electricians in the employ of the Western Union will join Postal employees if the strike is called. Whether the telephone company would be affected is not certain at present.

Under Foreman J. H. Johnson the Postal has a force of men engaged in constructing a telegraph line along the road of the Butte-Salt Lake branch of the Short Line to connect with the trunk lines running from San Francisco to the east. It is electricians working on this line which the local unions are protesting against.

It is thought likely that the difficulty can be overcome without any strike, and some action on the part of the department of labor is expected within a day or two. Until word has been received from Washington, Butte electricians seem to be willing to await government action before precipitating a strike.

BOLSHEVIKI

from three sides and greatly outnumbered, the defenders held on there until yesterday, when a flanking column of the enemy, with guns, proceeded northward over a winter road and began an attack on the village of Gora, on the line of communication northward between Tarnosevo and Srdmakrenga.

The little detachment of British and Russians at Gora held out until the American forces completely its evacuation. The two forces then joined, retreating northward in good order.

Paris, Feb. 2.—In reply to the suggestion that the American troops might be withdrawn from northern Russia, in the Archangel sector, if the Princess Island conference were not held, M. Jichon said today that the conference had not yet considered what steps would be taken in event of failure.

The news from the Archangel section was not sufficiently definite as yet to justify any conclusion. Undoubtedly, he added, the bolshevik had stronger forces there now than they had before, so it had been considered safer to bring the allied troops closer together.

WORKERS' COUNCIL

will have to suffice. Trusting the workers will soon awake to the fact that there must be something radically wrong with a system that will feed and support vast numbers of men in prison while the soldier, after endangering his life in war, is left without a chance to earn his bread.

Yours for a change, C. H. MacKINNON.

the activities of the council since the recent revolt and particularly in the last week there is little doubt, however, that the congress will afford the Spartacans, independent socialists and other radicals an opportunity to insist on the retention of the soviet system alone if possible, but in any event, as a government department having equal right with any eventual parliament or other government body.

The resolution demanding the summoning of the congress was adopted at meetings of the Berlin soldiers' council by a vote of 148 to 47, after many speakers had attacked the government both in connection with War Minister Reinhardt's recent order regarding the relations between the councils and officers.

The resolutions declared that this order "is calculated to reduce the councils to a position of impotence and insignificance," an opinion which the Berlin council had strikingly illustrated this week when it sent a demand to the members of the cabinet to appear before it and defend their recent course, and particularly their attitude during bolshevik week.

The government, in a written reply, declined to appear before a local council, which was quite unauthorized to exercise control of the national government.

An order issued by Colonel Reinhardt, Prussian minister of war, has aroused open revolt on the part of soldiers' councils in the German armies. The council of the ninth army has declared that it will not obey the order and has been informed that the government will find means to enforce it.

The order of Colonel Reinhardt concerns a lessening of the authority of the soldiers' councils.

The first open revolt came from the soldiers' council of the ninth army corps, which sent delegates to Gustav Noske, military commander of Berlin, demanding the order be rescinded. Herr Noske refused, whereupon the delegation informed him that the order would not be obeyed.

The council at Luebeck, to whom a colonel was sent by the government to discuss the matter ordered the colonel to leave the city within 24 hours.

On the day after the publication of the order 200 soldiers from the garrison at Allenstein paraded with a placard inscribed: "Down with officers." Officers were stopped in the streets and their shoulder straps torn off.

The soldiers council at Coburg issued a warning against enlistment in the forces designed to protect the eastern frontier. The workmen's council at Steele, Rhenish Prussia, forbids the recruiting of volunteers for any troops. The council of the Nineteenth army corps at Dresden has issued a similar order.

The council at Arnswalde, Brandenburg, forcibly deposed the president of the civil district.

In northern Berlin, a Spartacans stronghold, forged military orders to report to the colors are being sent to hundreds of men of military age. The government has formally declared these orders to be forgeries and that there is no intention of conscripting anybody.

Dodgers are being distributed in Berlin by the "red soldiers' union," which is a Spartacans military organization, calling on the proletariat to arm and consolidate.

ANGLERS ISSUE A YEAR BOOK

Anaconda, Feb. 3. "Why and What For" the year book just issued by the Anaconda Anglers' club, states that through the efforts of the club during 1918 there were over 2,000,000 fry distributed in the streams and lakes in the vicinity of Anaconda, consisting of native rainbow, eastern brook trout and grayling.

The cost of planting the fish was $127.

The report of the treasurer shows the club in excellent financial condition. The fee for membership is the nominal sum of $1 a year. The benefits a member derives are the privileges of the clubhouse at Stewart Mill Creek Springs and the satisfaction of knowing that he is a member of one of the most active anglers' clubs in the country.

The Anglers' club disbursements for 1918 amounted to $323.59. The club had on hand in the Daily Bank Jan. 1, 1919, a total of $192.20.

MINER KILLED AT BLACK ROCK

Henry Cassidy, 32, was killed by a fall of ground at the Black Rock mine yesterday morning at 9:30 o'clock. The accident happened on the 1,900 foot level and his partner, whose name could not be learned last night, was slightly injured. Cassidy had been in Butte eight years, and is survived by his wife and a daughter, and two brothers, James and Joseph of this city. The body is at Dunstons & Bross's undertaking rooms, from where the funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. High mass will be celebrated at Sacred Heart church and interment will be made in the Catholic cemetery.

TWO CHARGED STREET WALKING

Kate Johns and Mamie Barry were arrested last night by Chief of Police Jere Murphy, charged with street walking. Frank Beaudoin was arrested by Officer Leydon charged with drunkenness and James Becken was taken into custody by Detective Wesson charged with disturbance. Henry Borgman is held at the city hall pending an investigation as to his sanity. Officer Rodda found him wandering about, acting in a suspicious manner.
