ANOTHER RAID ON I. W. W. PLANNED

Junker Element Is Hot After the Wobblies and the Storm Is Expected Most Any Time Now.

New York, Feb. 8.—Another general raid on the I. W. W. in various parts of the country is expected by members of that organization, according to a statement issued yesterday from its New York headquarters. Private information, it was stated, had been received from inside sources indicating that a second country-wide attempt was about to be made by the United States government to wipe that militant labor organization out of existence.

Various recent events are cited as lending confirmation to this warning. Not only is the correspondence of the organization again being interfered with, it is claimed, but an effort is being made through the press to prepare the public mind so that it will endorse drastic measures against the I. W. W. Hostile articles and editorials have been appearing lately in unusual numbers apparently as part of a carefully planned publicity campaign.

That the authorities feel that they have public opinion safely "educated" against the I. W. W., the organization declares is indicated by the systematic brutality to which their imprisoned members have been subjected, particularly in the Wichita jail, the federal prison at Leavenworth and the deportation "pen" at Ellis Island. The recent conviction of 43 I. W. W.'s in Sacramento, with severe sentences of 10 years, imprisonment for more than half their number, on evidence which impartial spectators declare to have been the flimsiest nature, is cited as further proof of the general feeling that almost anything can be "put over" on the I. W. W. in the present state of the public mind. Continued deportation of foreign-born workers solely on the ground that they belong to the I. W. W. is pointed to as further evidence of the attitude of the government toward the organization.

More recently several "overt acts" have been committed which lend color to the rumor of an impending general attack on the organization. In addition to a thorough-going raid on the I. W. W. headquarters recently opened in Springfield, Mass., and the arrest of members of the Chicago branch in New York City, the Chicago office at 119 Throop street, was likewise raided a few days ago. The official paper of the New York I. W. W., "The Labor Defender," has been declared unavailable and at the recent hearings before the senate committee on propaganda, was mentioned first among the supposedly dangerous revolutionary papers in this country.

Notwithstanding this powerful official opposition, it is claimed that the organization was never in a more flourishing condition in this part of the country. New members have been coming in at an unusual rate, it is stated. The circulation of "The Labor Defender" has doubled within two months and the New York membership has increased so much that it has been found necessary to rent larger quarters at 27 East Fourth street, where meetings are held nightly. The Sunday forum being crowded to the doors.

Three new industrial unions have been formed in New York within the past month, while branches have been established in Newark, N. J., Chicopee Falls and Springfield, Mass., and Hartford, Conn. In one New England city negotiations are under way for 9,000 workers in one establishment to join the I. W. W. in a body.

"The idea of revolutionary industrial unionism," a member of the New York branch said yesterday, "has taken firm root in this country and will never be crushed. Persecution not only gives it publicity but wins the active sympathy and support of radicals everywhere. The example of the industrial movement in Russia and Germany has opened the eyes of the workers of America as to the most effective and immediate way of gaining industrial freedom."

Kid Gleason Isn't Big, and He Was No Great Shakes as a Big League Pitcher, but He Has Reached the Top Rung on the Baseball Ladder.

HAMILTON TELLS HOW THE "KID" DID IT

By H. C. HAMILTON.
(United Press Staff Correspondent.)
(Copyright, 1919, by United Press.)
CHAPTER IV.
Following his departure for St. Louis, Gleason began to slip a little as a pitcher. He had been a faithful work horse, appeared in many, many ball games, had never shirked a job, and pitched his best at all times and attended to his business. The result was that his arm began to go back on him. He says now that he felt before he went to New York from Baltimore his arm going back on him. In 1894 Gleason was sold by St. Louis to the old Baltimore Orioles and from there he went to the New York Giants, where he transferred his efforts from the pitching mound to second base with such success that he immediately became one of the game's greatest players.

This was the occasion of the first comeback for this determined, aggressive Irishman who has refused to allow circumstances to get the best of him. The success of the transformation of this player, already a veteran, of course, tended to make him bolder and even more aggressive. His spirit was even higher than it had been and then began a career that is one of the most picturesque in the annals of sports. It was his first comeback, but psychologists then might have stated with perfect truth that if there was need for a comeback of any kind at any time in this man's life he would prove equal to the task provided it was possible. For there was a time to come in Gleason's life when he was to stage another comeback—a comeback this time that would set all baseball to gossiping and would make him one of the most fortunate men in baseball.

Battles that Gleason may have had at various times on the diamond while he was a pitcher were as nothing compared to what he was now going into. Absolutely fearless, but not a bully by any means, Gleason was kept busy taking his own part at second base, when players like King Kelly and others of that time were want to take their slides into second base with their spikes shining and with the avowed willingness to stage a rough and tumble battle at any time with any one who cared to bat task. He had many flaic settos and so far as has been discovered, he never lost any of them. It was while he was with the Orioles that this side of his nature was most noticeable, for the Orioles were fighters—every one of them. They had to be, for their manager was a fighter, taught fighting and demanded that spirit from his men. (To be continued.)
