RAMPOU CAFE OPENING TOMORROW AT NOON

Furniture Shipment Delayed in Transit. Opening Postponed.

Butte's new high class cafe, Ram-pou's, will not open as was announced yesterday by the manager, Ed Rampon. Due to a delay in the arrival of furniture the opening will not come until tomorrow at noon.

"We are greatly disappointed in this delay," said Mr. Rampon, "but we want everything to be ready when we do open. For that reason we have put the opening date at next Tuesday to give ample time to take care of the many details required to be attended to."

In the meantime a large force of workmen is busily engaged in putting on the finishing touches which will make the Rampon one of the most elegant cafes in the northwest.

Mr. Rampon will be prepared for a big rush beginning with the opening date and he will conduct the cafe on the highest possible standard so as to merit the patronage of Butte's best trade, he asserts.

W. Perhaps that was a little too strong. They are more like populists. Probably I said they were like the I. W. W., but I really think I had the populists in mind."

"Does your boy enjoy being home?"

"I hope so," replied Hiram Rube, "although I have to keep after mother about the table. You see, my boy issued to army fare, and my folks has been Hooverized."

Just as the kaiser prophesied, German ships are landing troops in New York.

Jack Johnson "Broke" Is Report From Paris

Paris, Feb. 24.—Jack Johnson is "broke" in Spain. The ex-champion is fighting ten-round bouts with various fighters, and is lucky to get 1,000 pesetas in purses.

A few days ago Johnson fought an interned German U-boat sailor, whom he nicknamed Bill Flint of Brooklyn, at Madrid. In the first round the sailor poked Jack in the midriff, worrying the negro. But in the second round the German walked straight into Jack's stiff arm, turned around three times, and dropped for the count.

The hotel at Barcelona where Johnson stayed during the time he was running bullfights is holding his personal property for debt.

Butte Curlers Are After Added Honors

Butte curlers are well under way in their own little private bospital and the play for the Goodale and Leys cups is going merrily on at the ice sheets of the Butte Curling club, the condition of the rinks being better than at any time for a month or more.

The play will be continuous until the conclusion of the bospital and the cups definitely awarded to the winning rinks. There is no little interest in the play to date and so far the quality of the curling has been excellent.

The Goodale Cup. The play to date in the Goodale cup has resulted as follows: Perham, 14; Frink, 8. J. A. McMillan, 11; Gillis, 5. Mutch, 12; D. McMillan, 11. J. A. McMillan, 13; McGregor, 10. Perham, 14; Mutch, 5.

The Leys Cup. The play for the Leys cup has resulted as follows: Frink, 13; Perham, 8. Gillis, 12; D. McMillan, 11. McGregor, 12; Mouthrop, 4.

SEATTLE STRIKE

members of local 104 Boilermakers' union, a vote of confidence was given the officials, and on a vote being taken to continue the strike, only three in that vast gathering voted to return to work, so one can see how much effect the attempts to disrupt are having.

The machinists, the blacksmiths, and, in fact, every union connected with the Metal Trades council, are just as determined as the Boilermakers to fight the matter to a finish and from every indication the workers will win.

The general strike that was held here has had its effect regardless of the report of the capitalist press to the contrary, and every effort is being made by the chamber of commerce and other capitalistic organizations in the city to impair the solidarity of the workers; but every move they make only tends to strengthen the position of labor, for the great majority have come to realize the powerful weapon they own. It was one grand object lesson.

Ole Hanson and his comic opera army furnished the humorous side of the strike.

He had Spanish-American war veterans dressed in the uniform of their time. He had returned soldiers and sailors with their uniforms. He had gunmen and thugs, old and young; he had kids from the merchant marine who did not look to be any more than 18 years of age; he had fat men and lean men, mounted on draft horses, dry horses, race horses and mules. He had machine guns mounted on trucks and poked through the windows of tall buildings and, in fact, he had the city supplied with more arms and ammunition than the continental army used in the 11 years they fought to make this a so-called free country.

Unfortunately for Ole's reputation, he never had a chance to even make one little charge with his army for the workers only looked on with amusement. Ole is now confined to his bed, it is said, as a result of a nervous breakdown; but I am of the opinion he is suffering with a severe case of disappointment.

Ole has made the claim during his campaign here that he assisted the Heinze forces when they were at the zenith of their power in securing the eight-hour day for the miners of Butte.

It is to laugh. The only political activities that Ole Hanson engaged in were to ride around in a band wagon and sing in a quartette a song entitled, "We'll Down the Kerosene Boys."

This will be interesting information for that quaint humorist, Larry Doe Bull of the Daily Sliner, who has treated Ole to a few write-ups in his funny column.

Boys in Butte who are contemplating a change to Seattle to work in the shipyards should pay no attention to reports they may see in the capitalist press concerning the opening of the shipyards, until they verify such reports.

A very high compliment was paid to the Butte Bulletin by Max Eastman, at one of his meetings here. On being asked by one of the audience his opinion of the Butte Bulletin, he replied that it was the best edited socialist paper in the United States.

asked him how she was going to support them under existing conditions, and he replied, "God knows."

"Yes, I made substantially those statements," he said.

"Where did you get your information concerning the Nonpartisan league?" asked the interviewer.

"Why, from the newspapers."

"Do you believe the newspapers have fairly and accurately represented the movement?" he was asked.

"I have no reason to question their statements," he replied.

"Do you deny that the farmers of the northwest labored under great economic injustices and had legitimate grievances, particularly in the matter of markets?" Mr. Taft was asked.

"No, I don't doubt it in the least," he answered with great candor. "I feel sure they had. That seems to be generally admitted."

"Well, then, what remedy would you suggest to right those grievances?" the reporter asked.

"I can't tell you," returned Mr. Taft, shrugging his shoulders. "Certainly I have nothing to suggest off-hand. But I know that public ownership is not the right method."

"Men who have studied the problem for 26 years and who probably have a more intimate knowledge of these peculiar conditions than you have, think it is," answered the reporter. "Since you have no remedy of your own to propose how are you so sure that theirs is the wrong one?"

"Let me tell you something," an-

Didn't Know of Court Decision

Switching the conversation suddenly, Mr. Taft declared: "I have no sympathy with Townley's attitude on the war."

"What was Townley's attitude?"

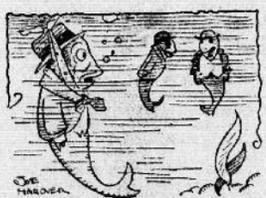

"Why, he was disloyal," replied Mr. Taft, looking rather wide-eyed with wonder that any one should ask such a question. "He's under indictment now, isn't he?" he continued.

Mr. Taft was then told, evidently for the first time, that the supreme court of Minnesota had dismissed the disloyalty indictment against Mr. Townley and had ruled that the league pamphlet, taken as the basis for the indictment, was patriotic rather than seditious.

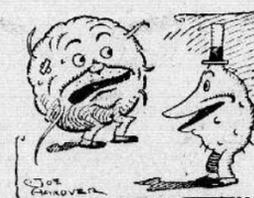

"I did not know that," he admitted.

More Like Populists. "You still persist that the movement is analogous to the I. W. W.," the league man asked.

"Well, I might disclaim the I. W.
