WRITING IT RIGHT

By MARGARET ROHE.

By MARGARET ROHE.
(Written for the United Press.)
Which billet doux, I ask you now, shows that she loves you better. One with the goo stuff writ by hand. Or a typewritten letter?

New York, March 7.—Nowadays when the modern maid takes her pen in hand, it's usually a typewriter. She has found she can gush and go and protest and promise quite as effectively, typed as legibly and three times as convincingly by machine. Besides, it does save such a lot of valuable time for her shopping, needle-making, bridging and Red Crossing. Not nearly so many serio-comic lovers' quarrels and complications arise therefrom, either. In the old days, when Percy or Clarence mistook all sorts of wild things from the under-standable nothings of her chirography, it was frightfully upsetting. Many a crossed love was caused by an uncorrected T, and an undotted i occasioned many a moist eye.

Lovers really owe an awful lot to the typewriter. Ofttimes, as like as not, they even owe for it. It is not only a complete love letter writer, however, that the typewriter is now the thing. For all sorts of personal correspondence the 1919 maid, wife or widowed has pressed, or rather pounded, it into service. She uses the smartest stationary in severe grey, cream, or white, expensive of texture and large of size, with great square envelopes to match. A legible monogram or initial is enclosed in a color which the typewriter ribbon must shade up to. Oh, it is all very chic and efficient, and best of all, easily read, this newest typewritten first class female mail.

Don't for a moment think, though, that we are to be free for ever more from the fine flowing Spencerian or heavy black backhand script adorned with episodes of yore. They still clutter up the 1919 mail bags with all the assorted accompanying paraphernalia of perfumed sealing wax gobs, weird monograms, violent tints and exciting shapes.

True to type, if the 1919 female can't be true to the typewriter, she reverts to the other extreme and goes in for the quill pen and sealing wax accessories of the Victorian era complete letter writer. There are no half-way measures for her.

Have you a little "enerier" in your home? If you are just back from Paris it's a sure bet you have. Of course, all we post graduates of "How to Parlez Vous in Five Lessons" know that an "enerier" is simply French for inkstand. But there's nothing simple about the revived vogue of Parisian encriers that all of us are bringing home. No, indeed, they are as complete and complicated with all the comforts of home as a latest model limousine, with hot and cold running ink, one candle power light, and a place for everything and everything in its place for fascinating correspondence.

The encriers are of china with gilt metal finishings, and the most attractive are copies, if not actually imitations, fitted according to size with one or two inkwells. They are equipped besides with a stick of sealing wax, a small candle and a flaming quill pen, all in a matching tint, a seal whose handle is of the same china as the encriers, a pencil and a depression full of gold dust for drying the quill after use.

The whole effect is so antiquely artistic and charmingly convenient that it tempts to a mad attack of writer's cramp. Especially as most fetching stationary in enchanting colors, smartly monogrammed as the seal is engraved in an accompanying adjunct of the encrier.

It certainly is a far cry from the typewritten form to the encrier form of correspondence, but you may rest assured if you just choose one or the other you are sure to write right.

BLACKLISTING THE BUTTE ENGINEERS

Seattle Union Takes Action Regarding the Alleged Reactionary Local Union of Strikebreakers.

The following resolutions have been received by the Bulletin from Seattle:

"We, the members of local 40, International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, of Seattle, Wash., having learned of the action of the engineers of Butte, who by a vote taken Saturday, Feb. 15, 1919, decided to serve the mining corporations instead of the militant miners and others who were on strike in protest against a reduction of wages of one dollar ($1.00) per day, and this reduction taking place so soon after many of the miners' sons and brothers had made the supreme sacrifice on the fields of France, in order that this world might be free from autocratic control—it is with mingled feelings of contempt and disgust that we view the entire career of the Engineers' union of Butte, whose past actions on every occasion seem to have been synonymous with scabbery, and their so-called union a convenient stepping stone for its selfish members (who appear to be without conception of the mission of the working class) into positions of ease and luxury in the service of the enemies of organized labor.

The charge has been frequently made that in all the struggles of the miners for an organization that would be more responsive to their demands for better working conditions and absolutely free from corporation control, the Engineers have always served the corporate interests, and this subservience to corporation control has resulted in the most infamous blacklist (better known as the RUSTLING CARD method of obtaining employment) that ever existed in the United States. Inasmuch as the Butte engineers are not directly affiliated with us, but have a charter from the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, formerly the Western Federation of Miners, and that makes our protest against such strike-breaking tactics somewhat feeble, be it

Resolved, by Steam and Operative Engineers, Local 40, of Seattle, that, before any member of the Engineers' union of Butte, known as No. 83, I. U. M. & S. W., be admitted into our membership, a most rigorous investigation be conducted to the end that we may not be contaminated by such treacherous forces of organized labor, and by it further

Resolved, that the miners of Butte and all other workers who, by going on strike, showed their willingness to resist a reduction in wages, and whose protest would have been more rigorous were it not for the traitorous conduct of the Engineers, we extend our hearty greetings, and we disavow the hope that you are not demoralized, but will continue your efforts until organized labor relegate from their ranks the frauds and fakery and thereby be the more better prepared to march forward into full possession of our own; and be it further

Resolved, that copies of this resolution be sent to the Central Labor Council and Metal Trades Council and the Butte Bulletin.

FRANCE REORGANIZING JAPANESE AIR SERVICE

(By United Press.)

Tokio, Feb. 6. — (By Mail.) — Seventeen officers and 20 men of the French air force, headed by Colonel Faure, have arrived in Japan to supervise the reorganization of the Japanese air service. The mission comes in fulfillment of a promise made by the French government to the Japanese war ministry during the war that such assistance would be given as soon as possible after the cessation of hostilities.

The French government is sending 140 airplanes to Japan to be used in the reorganization work. It is expected that the visiting aviators will be here three months. They have been given a very hearty reception by Japanese officials, and French flags are crossed with Rising Suns throughout Tokio in their honor.

The officers are all veterans of the air, and each wears several decorations and ribbons indicating his service for France and for the allies. One of the members of the mission, Lieut. Georges Richardson, fought with the United States marines last year, having been assigned to duty as a liaison officer. Commandant Lefevre, who owned a Zeppelin on its return from a bombing expedition to London, is a member. Some of the officers have seen service on all battle fronts.

It is customary to speak of "the old order of things." And are we now to talk of "the new order of things?"

Billy Sunday says hell is for rent. Maybe the devil has departed every one who didn't think exactly as he did.
