NECESSITY FOR ORGANIZATION IS SEEN

Inland Empire Teachers' Association Meet in Spokane and Pass Resolutions to Force a Living Wage.

The convention of the Inland Empire Teachers' association recently held at Spokane, Wash., proved that the members of the teaching fraternity are waking up to the necessity for organization. The three themes uppermost, cropping out in all discussions and papers, were betterment of the instructional or teaching force, revision of the curriculum in conformity with conditions and demands, and more adequate compensation for teachers. All reports indicated a falling off of teachers, the only remedy seeming to be a considerable increase in pay. The papers read showed that the new idea of greater economic freedom that is abroad in the land has made its impression on the instructors.

The following extract from a resolution adopted at the meeting shows that not only are the teachers intending to force wages that make it unnecessary for them to lower their living standards, but that there is a deep resentment against the autocratic methods practiced by many school boards, methods that make the teacher a mere automaton, a tool of the local political machines.

"That we protest against the present inadequate salaries of teachers, particularly those of the classroom teacher. The great shortage of professionally trained teachers, together with the alarmingly large number of well-trained teachers leaving the profession for more lucrative though less essential fields of endeavor, is a matter of grave concern and demands the immediate and intelligent attention of those responsible for the support and administration of our public schools. Every person worthy to train our future citizenship is worthy of sufficient salary to provide for present living in keeping with the teacher's social status and for an opportunity to make provision for the time when active service is no longer possible. We believe that under present conditions one thousand dollars should be deemed the absolute minimum wage for any teacher, rural or urban. We believe further that the time has come for a more definite participation in the administrative work of our schools by those who actually do the work of teaching."

Speaking before the Spokane Ad club, Dr. George D. Strayer dwelt on the same theme, saying: "There must also be more regard paid to the instructor. The right people must be kept in the field of teaching. This cannot be done if proper remuneration is not given. I want to see a minimum wage of $1,500 per year for this line of work. We will never see America as the nation it should be until America's wealth is put back of America's children. Then we shall make a success of democracy."

Miss Sallie Hill, president of the National League of Grade Teachers, sarcastically compared the salaries paid in the teachers' profession to those paid dog-catchers. She stated that the dog-catcher at Los Angeles gets $1,000 the first year, $1,200 the second year and an increase in pay annually thereafter. About 20 dogs a month are looked after. The grade teacher in Los Angeles gets $800 the first year and at the end of the tenth year she gets the same pay as the dog-catcher gets the second year. The Denver dog-catcher gets $1,200 the first year.

BOYS FOLLOW CRANE. Boys of the Harrison Avenue Congregational church today went on a picnic trip to the nearby hills. The hike was led by the Rev. B. E. Crane, pastor. A number of boys of the Floral Park Sunday school participated in the outing.

PHONOGRAPH TOLD SOME PEACE SECRETS

By LOWELL MELLETT (United Press Staff Correspondent.) Paris.—(By Mail).—Some of the suppressed stories of the peace-making are worth the telling.

There was the time, for example, that M. Pichon, French secretary for foreign affairs, told the assembled correspondents on a Sunday in the very Quai d'Orsay room where the big ten had its daily meeting, that the league of nations could not be embodied in the preliminary pact.

Pichon's statement, given out for publication, was strangely missing from all the Paris press next morning. Inquiry revealed that three or four deputy chiefs of the various delegations had spent a busy night rushing by auto from one peace sanctuary to another until a program of suppression had been arranged and they rushing from one French authority to another until all corners of the censorship had been riveted down upon the Pichon interview.

Then there was the period when the French press turned the representatives of the American and British press green by the remarkable accuracy of its accounts of the big ten, and sometimes big four, conversations. As printed, nobody was quoted, but it became known that the language which the reporters presented as their own was simply that of some of the parties to the conversations, stripped of quotation marks. After a particularly flagrant case of this kind the issue was brought to a head by General Bliss rising to remark that if military matters could not be discussed in these intimate and supposedly secret conclaves without somebody peddling the text of the talks to the newspapers, he for one would have to cease talking.

Next day and thereafter the phonographic records of the conversations were missing from the Paris papers. While the air was filled with rumors of disagreement between Wilson and Clemenceau, it remained for L'Esclair, Paris daily, to raise the curtain on the loggheaded situation between Lloyd George and the French premier. A long white space in a regular edition of L'Esclair revealed the devastating hand of the censor. Immediately preceding the white space was something like this: "The following has been given us by a British correspondent whose journal is favorable to Lloyd George: 'Lloyd George today told the British correspondents that if he were Scheidemann...'"

Then the blank space. Brief inquiry served to reveal that the completed sentence would have read: "He wouldn't sign the peace the French want."

Lloyd George thereupon abandoned his conferences with the British correspondents. SOLDIER SURPRISES MOTHER. After a year's service in the army, Frank Deakey, son of Mrs. William H. Deakey, 508 South Hill alley, returned home this morning. Private Deakey was with the heavy artillery in France and was also a member of the Third army of occupation in German territory. His arrival home today was a source of joyful surprise to his mother, who had not expected him so soon.

JWELED NIGHTIES NOW

(By United Press.) London, April 15.—(By Mail).—My lady's return to femininity includes the banishment of pajamas from her wardrobe.

The "nightie" has become a marvellous creation. In a wardrobe full of luxurious lingerie it takes first place. West end stores are exhibiting splendid and wonderful designs. One has a skirt of vivid orange silk, a bodice almost like the decollete of an evening gown in fashion of gold-thread embroidery and black net, with sleeves of the same material, and the nightie is finished at the waist with a sash of gold ribbon.

So elaborate is the up-to-date woman's sleeping wardrobe, she could easily convert it for wear over a fluff petticoat during the daytime. Nighties vie with each other in being unique. One store shows a creation in sky-blue silk, the bodice of which is embroidered with a majestic white swan sailing along by a large white water lily. Another store competes by exhibiting a lingerie set of yellow silk, embroidered with a huge spreading spider's web with the spider inset. The spider's body is represented by a large shining green stone, giving a jeweled effect.

GERMANY WON'T FIGHT BOLSHIEV

(By United Press.) Berlin, April 18.—(By Mail).—Germany will not fight the Russian bolshevik, other than to repel invasions and to defend her own borders, according to present indications.

The Germans have enough of feeling to drive the bolshevik back into Russia, and are eager to make peace with Lenin. Rumors that persist about Berlin and cannot be satisfactorily denied are that the German foreign office is more than ready to sign a peace with the bolshevik, but does not do so now for fear it will be misinterpreted by the entente. Further rumors say that Count Rantzau has made a secret agreement with the bolshevik to call off hostilities, but is waiting until the peace of Paris is signed, before he can publicly endorse terms with Lenin.

War minister Noske has announced publicly that the German armies will not march against the bolshevik. By an agreement between the great headquarters of the army, the war office and Noske, the army under Hindenburg in Prussia will stand on the east Prussian border and will hold the "massing" and Poles off, but will not budge a step in offensive warfare. The reported German of-tenitive of late March was merely to free a German railway line endangered by the Russians.

Simultaneously with this announcement came the address of Lenin before the Moscow soviet congress, calling the bolshevik to realize that nothing was to be gained by marching against the Germans, and asking the congress to call off hostilities. The congress by a large majority supported Lenin's pacific plan.

In Berlin it is thought Count Rantzau has arranged the bolshevik peace, if such a truce exists, through the radicals, who have always favored making peace and living in friendship with the bolshevik. The radicals have suddenly come to favor Rantzau, who is a staunch pacifist, as are the radicals from Hamme down. At any rate, the war between the Germans and the bolshevik is off, by mutual agreement.
