The field boxes, which have been in front of the Fenway Park, Boston, grandstand since the world's series of 1912, have been removed. This allows considerable more space for the catchers to chase foul flies.

Cincinnati fans are predicting that Ray Fisher, opposing National league batsman this year, will win at least twenty games. Pat Moran says that Fisher still is a first class pitcher and will be worked on an average of twice a week.

Connie Mack has a first infield in Burns, Dagan, Shannon and Thomas, with Grover to fill in if any of the regulars are injured.

No player who has come back to baseball from the service of the nation is more welcome than Walter Maranyville. As long as the Rabbit was in the navy there was a gap in the Boston array which could not be filled to the satisfaction of the fans, not only in Boston, but on the entire circuit, for the little fellow is one of the greatest and most picturesque figures in the national pastime. He is not yet quite in shape, it is true, and lacks much of his usual "pop," but it is certain that he will soon be back in his stride.

Kid McCoy "Born" 32 Years Ago.

Kid McCoy, who succeeded Bob Fitzsimmons as middleweight champion of the world, was born thirty-two years ago today. It was on the night of May 15, 1887, that a melodrama was produced by a barnstorming company in the "society house" of the little city of Rushville, Ind., and among those present was a fourteen-year-old lad named Norman Selby, the son of a country merchant. One of the principal characters in the play was a bold, bad man, a highwayman or train robber or something like that, who was set down in the program as Kid McCoy. Young Selby watched the play with breathless interest, and the villain of the melodrama so appealed to his youthful imagination that he determined to emulate the exploits of that vicious character. The next day he told his playmates that hereafter his name was Kid McCoy, and the youngsters, having respect for Selby's prowess with his fists, granted his desire.

So Kid McCoy was born, and the name has stuck through all his busy career as a pugilist, wine agent, automobile dealer, hotel keeper and the score or more other pursuits the Kid has followed. Although he is now in his forty-sixth year, having really been born in 1873, Selby "came back" about seven years ago and did more than make good in the ring in Paris.

McCoy ran away from home shortly after he had adopted the name of the melodrama villain and ever since he has been continually on the move. He usually had the money where-with to gratify his desire to rove, but in his youth there were times when he had to ride the freights and was probably referred to as a hobo by such persons as he appealed to for a handout. He had been given a fair education by his parents, who wanted him to become a minister of the gospel, and in his wanderings over the earth he has acquired all the polish of a man of the world. Tall, slender and graceful, with a pleasing countenance, the Kid when clad in evening dress, looks the thorough gentleman and bears no resemblance to the conventional type of pugilist. He is now said to be living in a villa at Nice, in southern France, and has acquired the French language. McCoy has long entertained literary ambitions and has even written poetry, some of which has been good enough to pass muster with the magazine editors.

Gov't Gets Leaflets Which Caused Mutiny

Washington, May 14.—A mass of bolshevik propaganda, believed responsible for undermining the morale of American troops in Russia has been received at the war department and will be published.

The propaganda was taken by army authorities from letters forwarded by soldiers to their relatives in the United States.

Much of the propaganda was directed at British troops. All pamphlets declare that allied troops are in Russia as a part of the conspiracy to restore a czar to power. One leaflet, under the heading "All-Lies," declared that allied troops are in Russia against the will of the people and that, "except a few hungry peasants immediately around Archangel, the Russian people wish to be let alone to work out their own destiny."

Knowledge of the nature of the bolshevik propaganda is expected to be valuable to the war department. It has been hard to fight the propaganda because of the difficulty of finding the nature of the attacks. The propaganda was circulated only where bolshevik agents were certain they could make an impression.

Of the bolshevik leaflets two are signed "Lenin, president of the Council of People's Commissaries," and "Tchitcherine, people's commissary of foreign affairs."

The first is headed: "Do you realize what you are doing, fellow workers?" and continues:

"Do you thoroughly realize what you are doing when you advance against us?"

"You are asked why you have been brought here?"

"You are not only 'do and die,' you also have a right to 'reason why.'"

"You have not come here to fight for liberty. You have come here to crush it. You have not come here to establish the rule of the people. You have come here to overthrow it."

"You know that Russia was up till last year, ruled by the most brutal, tyrannical and corrupt autocracy known to history. You have known of the terrible struggle we have had against our tyrants, of the imprisonment, of the hangings, of the deportation to the mines of Siberia."

"Come to Restore Czar."

"You British fellow workers sympathized with us then, and often helped us."

"Did you not rejoice when we overthrew czarism? You did. Yet you have come here to restore it. That is why you have come here."

"It may be your intention, but it is not the intention of your government. It is the intention of the czarist officers who are attached to your general staff."

"When you obey their orders, you are carrying out their objects. They are not democrats. They are militarists and monarchists. They have a supreme contempt for the people, and believe that they alone have the right to rule. They hate our revolution and want to crush it."

"There is no doubt that they want to suppress the revolution and restore the reign of the czar."

"Is this fighting for democracy?"

"Come to Murder Liberty."

"Is that what you joined the army for?"

"Realize what you are doing. You have come to murder liberty, and not to defend it. Just think of the shame of it—Englishmen helping to crush a people who have succeeded in making themselves free! We can not believe you will do it."

"It would be the most shameful act in history."

"English fellow workers, don't do it."

This leaflet bears the printer's date of August 10, last, and was of an edition of 100,000. The next leaflet is headed "All-Lies," in order to convey an appeal to the allies, as well as the charge, "All-Lies" to the reader. The leaflet continues:

"In order to obtain the consent of the workers of Britain to the unwarrented act of aggression against you, your government gives the following as its reason for landing troops in our country:

"Seek to Crush Revolution."

"That they have come to stamp out anarchy and restore order. It is not true."

"Your government and the French government are themselves responsible for what disorder there is in Russia. Ever since our revolution the agents of the French and British governments have been conferring with the counter revolutionaries, giving them moral encouragement and financial assistance for the purpose of undermining the power of our workingmen's government, and to bring about its downfall.

"Your government and the French government are co-operating with the Czecho-Slovaks, who have blocked the access to our food supplies. The serious food shortage in our country is aggravating the state of disorganization."

Blame Allies for Disorder.

"If there is disorder, your governments are responsible for it. Remember, when a capitalist government enters a country where there has been a revolution for the purpose of restoring order, it always means that they intend to crush the revolution. This is what the German government did in Poland, in the Ukraine, in the Baltic provinces and in Finland. That is what your government wants to do in Russia."

"They do not want to restore order. They want to restore the czar."

"That they have come to help the Russian people. It is not true."

"In the first place, it is helping to bring war among a people already exhausted by war. We do not want war. We want peace. We want to be left alone, to consolidate the gains of our revolution, to reorganize economic and social life in such a manner as to secure to the workers the credit of their labor. Your government is not helping to do this. It has sent you here to prevent us doing it. Your government is co-operating with the Czecho-Slovaks, who are suppressing the workers wherever they go."

"Have you the workers obtained an eight-hour day. It has now been abolished. All working class organizations, trade unions and such like are suppressed. Wherever the Czecho-Slovaks go they suppress our local workmen's councils and establish in their stead an oligarchy of speculators, capitalists and ex-czarist officers. Your government will urge you to do the same in north and central Russia."

One Way to Help.

"If your government wanted to help the Russian people it would recognize the soviet government and assist us to organize our railways and industries. We, in fact, invited your government to enter into business relations with us that would have been to our mutual advantage. But your government made no reply."

"That the allied invasion of Russia is welcomed by the Russian people. It is not true."

"Who is welcoming you? A few starving peasants whom your government bribes with a promise of food. These poor people are not glad to see you. They are only eager for the food they hope you will bring. Who else is welcoming you? The ex-lords of Russia, who are expecting you to restore to them the land, harvests and mines which are now the property of the whole Russian people."

"The capitalists, who want you to overthrow our workingmen's government and compel us to become their wage slaves again. The Technoviks, the ex-officials of the czarist government, who want you to restore them their soft jobs, to resume their old game of bribery and corruption, for which Russia in the past was notorious. Yes, this crowd, with their hangings-on, are very pleased to see you here. They will flatter you and make a fuss over you, all the while they have a supreme contempt for you, for you are only workmen, whom they are using as their tools."

"A third leaflet disclosed what was reputed to be a widespread plot instigated by the allied governments to overthrow the Russian revolution."

The statement told of British efforts for a rebellion at the time of the landing of British troops; of payments of money for various purposes, including arrest of Lenin and Trotsky; of plots to make famine more acute by dynamiting bridge and food trains, forcing the populace to revolt from hunger."

Excuses for establishing the dictatorship were to be found, the propaganda said, between Russia and Germany, which represented the soviets as selling Russia's independence to Germany.

Paris, May 15.—The "big four" has consulted experts regarding military and naval terms of the Austrian peace treaty. Since the former dual monarchy is already without effective military and naval forces, today's conference, it is believed, will be confined to correlating and assembling of details preparatory to the drafting of this section of the terms. Articles covering disposition of former Austrian-Hungarian territory and fixing boundaries of the new states, will constitute a vital portion of the pact. As soon as these are completed, it is believed the document will be ready for presentation to the Austrian delegates.

JUDGE UPHOLDS EIGHT-HOUR LAW

Refuses Injunction to Coal Companies Who Seek to Evade Laws By Shrewd Business Tricks.

By C. W. VONIER.

Fargo, N. D., April 26.—(By Mail.) Corporations which seek to evade just laws by shrewd business tricks were scathingly rebuked before Federal Judge Amidon, in denying a petition of the Benlah Coal Mining company for a temporary injunction to restrain enforcement of the North Dakota law fixing an eight-hour day for coal miners of the state.

The company planned an elaborate scheme to sidestep the provisions of the law, just before it went into effect. It formed a partnership of 42 employees, who "leased" the mine from the company for a term of two years, contracting to supply coal to the corporation at the rate of 100 tons a day at $1.5 a mine car. The "partners" in the mine were given weekly, daily or monthly payments, or in the case of actual miners, were paid in proportion to the coal mined. The "partnership" agreement also specified that none but "partners" were to be employed in the mine.

In order to take the matter out of the hands of the state court and place it before a federal judge, who would have no connection with the nonpartisan league and who could hope for nothing politically from the league by reason of his life appointment to the office, the company inserted a charge that the enforcement violated their constitutional rights.

Judge Exposes Trick.

The partnership agreement of the company and the men, it was declared by Judge Amidon, was clearly an effort to evade the law. It was made a little more than a week before the law became effective, and was put into effect at once.

The Benlah Mining company, which is a Minnesota corporation, in attempting to stop enforcement of the law, when threatened by the state mining inspector, said that it was impossible to operate except at a loss, under the law. In order to enforce the statute, the North Dakota mining inspector threatened criminal prosecutions, and if necessary the closing of the mine, as provided in the law.

The Decision.

In his decision, Judge Amidon said:

"A comparison between the dates of the lease and the contract of partnership with the date when the law took effect, makes reasonably clear that the plaintiff's business plan is a mere subterfuge to escape the provisions of the state law. Courts of equity do not exist to further such schemes. The plaintiff is asking that the enforcement of a state law by criminal execution shall be restrained by an injunction. To declare a law unconstitutional is a high exercise of judicial power, and to restrain ordinary criminal prosecutions for the violation of a criminal law is an exercise of even more unusual powers. A plaintiff who seeks such relief must present a case of the most substantial merits and support the same by convincing proof. The bill exhibits no such case."

"Reports from Paris indicate that an eight-hour day is to be made the law of the civilized world. The owner of a coal mine who says that it cannot be carried on except at a loss, on the basis of an eight-hour day, is probably mistaken. If he is not, there is something the matter with the management of his business. He should look to that instead of resorting to the courts. Such laws cannot be evaded by mere cleverness of business forms, such as the plaintiff has here devised."

"The application for a temporary injunction will, therefore, be denied."

Halifax, May 15.—While flying from Halifax to Newfoundland, seaplane NC-4 alighted on the water, made some necessary repairs, again took the air and continued her flight.

Aviation experts regard the feat as of highest importance, because it demonstrates that the trans-Atlantic flight will be able if necessary, to descend and make repairs and resume their voyage without assistance.

Various unconfirmed reports were circulated here today that the NC-4 had returned to this harbor. The spot where the seaplane landed for repairs was about 30 miles from Monroeville, near the coast. She was up again and well on her way to Newfoundland at 12:47 o'clock.

EIFFEL TOWER HAS BEEN DEMOBILIZED

(By United Press.)

Paris. — (By Mail.)—Eiffel tower has been "demobilized."

After 51 months of active service the 330 meter tower, that every visitor to Paris has marveled at and those who have never visited the French capital have seen represented on postcards, has been returned to "civil life" and from now on anybody who wishes to do so may ascend to its top for the customary fee.

With the outbreak of war Eiffel tower was closed to the public. It was even in times of peace a wireless station and now it became the wireless center of France. It was militarized. Soldiers in uniform manned the wireless plant, the elevators, the search-light on top and civilians were kept at a distance.

In the meantime, Eiffel was talking across the seas to America, the French colonies and the rest of the world, telling the progress of the war. For a long time Eiffel was the only means of communication between France and Rumania and throughout Russia's participation in the hostilities, Eiffel was one of the best "soldiers" in all the allied signal service.

Now the tower has returned to civil life.
