HOW CHIEF DETECTIVE

will be interfered and expostulated with the officer who released the soldier, but continued to accuse him of being a "slacker." Toole told of how officers present who were ex-servicemen had remonstrated with Morrissey who continued to accuse the men in uniform of being "slackers."

Morrissey Draws Gun.

It was at this point, said Toole, when Torpey entered the circle and remonstrated with Morrissey for his actions. Morrissey thereupon severely rated Torpey and became so abusive that the young man attempted to brush Morrissey aside, when Morrissey fell on his back in the corridor.

As Morrissey fell to the floor, he described the former city attorney, he reached into his pocket and drew a gun. Toole said he and some other person rushed to Morrissey and Toole grasped the officer by the wrist of the hand in which he was holding the gun, while Torpey moved away. Attorney Toole said he could not be sure whether Morrissey was intoxicated at the time or not, since he was not competent, he said, to judge when the officer was drunk or when sober.

Torpey was called and told a story similar to that of Toole with the addition of details of the incidents leading up to the fracas. He said Morrissey had been continually baiting a returned soldier named Fenlon who was one of the watchers appointed by Mayor Maloney. He described how, when Morrissey was placing Fenlon under arrest without cause, the then city attorney had interfered and caused Morrissey to release his prisoner.

Invited Into Alley.

Torpey told of how another ex-serviceman named Murphy, who was present, had become incensed at the actions of Morrissey and had invited the officer "out in the alley." Murphy was "hail shot," said Torpey, but Morrissey "was worse than that." After Murphy had invited Morrissey into the alley, said Torpey, the gunman then ceased his vituperation toward Murphy and started in to assail another man named Harrison. Later, he said, Morrissey caught him (Torpey) by the neck and it was then that the witness pushed the alleged woozy chief of detectives over.

John L. Harrison testified substantially the same as the other witnesses as to incidents in the city hall fracas.

How Dick Treats Women.

Illuminating evidences of Morrissey's treatment of respectable women was brought out when Mrs. William Seymour told on the stand how Morrissey had brutally ejected her from the polling place in precinct 4-B on the evening of the primary election.

Mrs. Seymour testified she was a watcher and checker at the polling place when Morrissey entered and in a loud voice demanded to know who was raising a disturbance there. There had been no disturbance, she said, and no one answered. Then she said, the city's head "dick" tapped her on the shoulder and ordered her out of the place. "He called to the judges to put me out," said the witness and when they did not do so, exclaimed: "By God, I'll put her out!"

Morrissey then brutally grasped her and lifting her from her feet threw her out the door, she said.

Mrs. William Beakey substantiated the testimony given by Mrs. Seymour.

More Brutality Shown.

When the hearing was resumed at 10 o'clock this morning, Carrie Rask was called as a witness.

She stated that she is the proprietor of the rooming house known as the Boston block. About 10 months ago Morrissey and four other plain clothes men came to her place and arrested a man in one of her front rooms, she said. She was occupied in her room at the rear but was attracted by cries for help. She rushed to the front room and saw the man who was being arrested standing with his hands in the air and blood running down his face while Edward Morrissey beat him over the head with the butt of a gun. The man was crying for aid, saying, "Don't let him kill me!" she testified.

The four other officers, she declared, did not interrupt Morrissey's fun, but stood quietly by. Mrs. Rask however, butted in and told Morrissey to take the man along if he was under arrest but not to kill him in her house.

Hand Finger; Quit.

Morrissey, Mrs. Rask testified, struck the man over the head twice after she arrived, but quit when he hurt his hand on the trigger, cutting a nail in his finger which bled freely.

Attorney Meyer in his cross-examination of this witness tried to show that the man who was beaten had once been in the penitentiary—evidently thinking that it is a proper pastime for a police officer to beat anyone over the head who has ever been in the penitentiary and that other officers who happen to be bystanders should not interfere.

However, it was not proven that the young man who was beat up in this instance had ever been in the pen.

Says Dragged Wife.

The next witness called was Miss Ethel Bailey, the young lady who roomed next door to the Morrisseys; last March and beheld him dragging his wife around his backyard by the hair of her head.

The appearance of Miss Bailey created consternation in the legal army which has rallied to the defense of the notorious gunman. Attorney Jones leaped to his feet and pictured the terrible hardship that would be wrought upon all concerned by going again into an investigation of the circumstances surrounding the sudden death of Mrs. Morrissey last March. "It would mean that we would be here all summer," contended Mr. Jones, sweltering in the close air of the council chamber. "If we open this thing up again, we will be obliged to listen all over again to the 96 witnesses who testified at the coroner's jury—and to

The "One Big Union" Convention

The following is the constitution of the One Big Union of Canada:

"Modern Industrial Society is divided into two classes, those who possess and do not produce, and those who produce and do not possess. Alongside this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between the two classes a continual struggle takes place. As with buyers and sellers of any commodity there exists a struggle on the one hand of the buyer to buy as cheaply as possible and on the other, of the seller to sell for as much as possible, so with the buyers and sellers of labor power. In the struggle over the purchase and sale of labor power the buyers are always masters—the sellers always workers. From this fact arises the inevitable class struggle.

"As industry develops and ownership becomes concentrated more and more into fewer hands, as the control of the economic forces of society become more and more the sole property of imperialistic finance, it becomes apparent that the workers, in order to sell their labor power with any degree of success, must extend their forms of organization in accordance with changing industrial methods. Compelled to organize for self defense, they are then compelled to educate themselves in preparation for the social change which economic developments will produce whether we seek it or not.

The One Big Union therefore seeks to organize the wage worker, not according to craft, but according to industry, according to class and class needs. We, therefore, call upon all workers to organize irrespective of nationality, sex or craft into a workers' organization, so that all may be enabled to more successfully carry on the everyday fight over wages, hours, etc., and prepare ourselves for the day when production for profit shall be replaced by production for use.

"Workers of the World Unite."

This historical document will be helpful to the convention of the One Big Union on July 6th at Butte.

The Metal Mine Workers of America local, Butte, elected their delegates last night to the One Big Union convention.

The arrangement committee reports that if it is at all possible an executive member of the One Big Union of Canada will be in the convention and will address mass meetings that will be arranged during the days of the convention sessions.

The dance committee on the One Big Union convention dance to be given at the Palladium hall on the 7th of July are looking to all the progressive minds of the city to help in making the dance a success in order to provide financial backing to the One Big Union move.

Reports are in that the convention will be very well attended and that numerous plans will be submitted for getting the workers together in a One Big Union.

12 feet or more away. She could not smell Morrissey's breath and did not see him stagger. She could not be sure that he was drunk. She only thought he was because he was dragging Mrs. Morrissey around by the hair and talking like he was drunk.

This concluded Miss Bailey's testimony, since, by agreement of counsel she was allowed to give no more.

Prosecution Rests.

The prosecution then rested about 11 o'clock. Morrissey asked for a few minutes recess in which to summon witnesses.

After the recess, three witnesses for Morrissey were sworn—Peter Green, night jailer at the city hall when John Boyle, the Pipestone rancher, was assaulted by Morrissey, Mr. Casey and Aronson.

Jailer Green testified that John Boyle was brought down the steps of the jail by Ed Morrissey about 1 o'clock in the morning in a drunken condition, that he walked down with Morrissey and was not thrown down, as John Boyle himself testified. Green said that Morrissey told him to lock Boyle up and stick a charge of disturbance against him. Green said that he did so. He said that he found $24 on Boyle and kept out $25 for a bond to appear at 10 o'clock. He said he kept Boyle two or three hours, then turned him out. He said that Boyle was not struck by Morrissey or by anyone and that he was released without any injuries to his person whatever, that his hip was not out and his face was not bleeding—as Mr. Boyle had claimed.

Upon cross-examination by Attorney Wittenburg, Green admitted that he stood 10 feet within the jailer's office when Boyle came down the stairs and couldn't see how he came down, whether he was thrown down by Morrissey or whether he walked down.

The docket of the police court was produced before the commission in order to show that the charge of disturbance—as Mr. Boyle was not prosecuted—the record showing that he was dismissed for lack of prosecution was offered as evidence. It substantiated Mr. Boyle's statement.

When Green was dismissed the commission adjourned for lunch.

ans that President De Valera address a mass meeting of citizens here.

In view of the fact that the Irish president is a world figure, both through his leadership of the revolution which caused the establishment of the republic in Ireland despite all efforts of the English government to suppress it and from the further fact that his arrival in this country followed his daring running of the English blockade placed on all Irishmen of republican tendencies, it is anticipated that De Valera's visit to Butte will be the occasion of one of the largest gatherings in this city in history.

"We are extremely anxious to hear Professor De Valera," said Judge Jeremiah Lynch, who, with James E. Murray, is directing the efforts to bring the leader to Butte. "Not only is he, just now, very much in the public eye because of the interest being displayed all over the United States in the Irish question, but his utterances of recent months stamp him as a leader of the first magnitude. Temperate, far-seeing and practical, he has already won the confidence of thousands of Americans, regardless of their beliefs or previous opinions on the Irish question. An audience of 40,000 people listened to him in Boston Sunday and when he speaks at Madison Square garden it is predicted that the attendance will break all records. Butte will give him a welcome that he won't forget if we can induce him to come west."

MAN KILLED IN OCTOBER NOW IDENTIFIED

St. Paul Girl Investigates and Finds Body That of Her Missing Brother. Services Today.

The body of the unknown man killed in a railroad accident at Silver Bow last October, which was buried in Mountain View cemetery, has been identified as that of Coleman Conolly, 46, a resident of Butte for several years prior to his death. The identification was made by Miss Mary Conolly of St. Paul, a sister of the unfortunate man.

Coming to Butte Miss Conolly began an investigation that convinced her the man who was killed was her brother. The coffin was disinterred yesterday, was properly identified and removed to Walsh's undertaking parlors, where services were held this morning preparatory to the shipment of the body to St. Paul. It was ascertained that the deceased was a member of the St. Paul chapter of the Ancient Order of Hibernians.
