Neither the Croix de Guerre nor the Distinguished Service Cross could mean as much to her as the little circlet of precious metal set with an exquisite diamond placed upon her finger.

The engagement ring is her "decoration" and it must consist of an exquisite diamond of wondrous lustre and brilliance, set in an artistic mounting of platinum or gold.

Let us assist you in selecting her "decoration." Here you will receive the utmost in quality, the utmost in quality—the fairest value.

AT THE ANSONIA.

"Tangled Threads" is a photodrama of unusual value and in it Miss Bessie Barriscale is seen at her height. She is a player of unlimited ability and immediate charm, never failing to enthrall an audience with her perfect expressions of emotion.

The story is a rather pathetic one dealing with a wife whose husband was a little unfaithful, and who, to bring him back, conspired with a "friend" to play upon that most deadly monster, jealousy. The friend in his infatuation for her carries the game too far and the monster is loosed to slay. Her husband divorces her and takes the little son with him.

She becomes a nurse in a children's hospital and spends her beautiful gift, mother-love, upon the little stricken bodies and wounded souls, until finally she is called in a special case—her own child. She goes to him and fills the aching void in his little heart and he is soon convalescent.

It is the old story of the dominant male who considers it his privilege to wander from the side of his life-comrade, but should she not, in spite of this, be absolutely rigid in her loyalty, he considers himself out-raged and insulted and usually the cause in our perverted social order she is his self makes her pay dearly for her little derelictions.

This picture is a study of one of the great sex problems presented by bourgeois society and should arouse some thought which will be valuable in building the new order of things.

Chester Gillette's orchestra gave the usual artistic musical interpretation to the picture. The rendition of Rossini's "La Gazza Ladra" overture was as perfect as any lover of music could desire.

G. F. KELLEY MEETS WITH ENGINEERS

C. F. Kelley, vice president of the Anaconda Copper Mining company, held a conference at 10 o'clock this morning with delegates from the Butte Engineers, the Great Falls smeltermen and smeltermen from Anaconda—five representatives from each body.

Mr. Snell acted as chairman of the engineers. Whiteley, Whitney and Boulevard were also of the committee.

They report that Mr. Kelley's attitude, while gracious and conciliatory, was non-committal. They say that he expressed the opinion that workers ought not to be compelled to accept less wages than they are at present getting, but that an increase was not a matter which could properly be discussed. Mr. Kelley they said, seemed to feel that the cost of living, however, need have little to do with the price of labor—that the price of copper and not the price of meat ought to determine the amount of money a man should have in his pocket wherewith to buy the meat which his stomach craves. The conference brought no tangible results.

Mr. Kelley will listen to the executive committee of the Metall Trades this afternoon—also, no doubt in a gracious and, non-committal manner.

MERRIGAN IS PUT IN JAIL FOR KILLING

Prisoner Returns From California to Face Trial Account of Death of James Ferry.

Admitting that he struck the blow which later resulted in the death of James Ferry, Nov. 21, 1912, according to Sheriff O'Rourke, but maintaining that he can produce evidence to justify his action, Daniel V. Merrigan arrived at the Silver Bow county jail last night from Nevada City, Cal., where he was captured recently.

The fight which resulted in the death of Ferry occurred Nov. 21, 1912, in front of the Midget saloon at Broadway and Main streets. After the fight Ferry staggered across the street to the sidewalk in front of the First National bank, where he was found to be bleeding to death from a severe knife wound. He was rushed to the city emergency hospital, where he died.

Merrigan disappeared immediately after the fight and for more than six years nothing over was heard of him. Recently, however, the local authorities were advised that Merrigan had been identified by descriptions sent out from Butte in 1912, and that he was under arrest at the California town.

First News Stories by Airship on R-34

The following news stories are the first ever transported across the Atlantic by airship, arriving on the dirigible R-34. Before he boarded the airship at East Fortune, Scotland, Lieutenant Lansdowne, the American observer, took charge of an envelope addressed to the United Press at New York, containing the following stories and several photographs:

FIRST REGULAR NEWS.
London, June 29.—(By airship across the Atlantic.)—Copy and pictures in this envelope are the first regular news ever sent across the Atlantic by mail. Through the courtesy of the United States Navy and the British air ministry, they were placed aboard the R-34 a few hours before she set off from Scotland. Lieutenant Commander Lansdowne, the only American aboard, personally took charge of the envelope. A United Press representative carried it from the London United Press bureau and delivered it to Lansdowne at the British air station.

The incident forecasts a new epoch in practical journalism and represents the first application of a new method of news dissemination which in a few years, will be one of accepted practices of newspaperdom on both sides of the Atlantic.

PREDICTS REGULAR SERVICE.
London, June 29.—(By airship across the Atlantic.)—An aerial mail from England to America which I believe within two or three years will grow into a frequent and dependable trans-oceanic traffic, began with the voyage of the R-34 to Long Island. "Howard E. Coffin, of the BOY'S GUARDIAN STARTS SUIT ON B. A. & P.

Through Attorney Freebourn, Railroad Company Sued for $38,000 Damages to Ely Jerich.

An action was commenced yesterday by Ely Jerich, as the guardian ad litem of Ely Jerich, against the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific Railroad company, for $38,000 damages alleged to have been sustained by Ely Jerich, a lad of seven years, when his right hand came in contact with a bare and highly charged wire connecting the trolley wire and a switch, mounted on a wooden pole.

The complaint sets forth that the pole, with its fastenings, was a dangerous thing, peculiarly attractive and alluring to children of a tender age, that the defendant knew this, or in the exercise of ordinary care, should have guarded or enclosed it so that small children could not play on or about it, and that the defendant failed to do so and to enclose the pole.

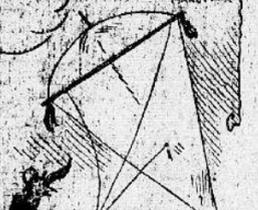

The electric current passed from the right hand of the boy through the body, and out at both feet. The hand and arm have been permanently crippled and both feet were severely burned.

The Butte, Anaconda & Pacific Railroad company belongs to the Anaconda Copper Mining company.

Harrison J. Freebourn is attorney for the plaintiff.
