TO OUR SUBSCRIBERS
 Owing to the delay in receiving a carload of paper, we will have to request that our readers be content with a few issues of four pages.—Editor.

IS IT ANY WONDER?
 Many there are in Montana, North Dakota and Washington who, for years, have read the Saturday Evening Post as religiously as a good preacher reads his Bible; and many there were and many there are who still read the publication because of its former reputation for unbiased articles on matters of public moment and for the excellence of the fiction published between its covers.

But the Saturday Evening Post lives up to its traditional reputation no longer. The mold of big business has fastened its golden fangs on the pages of that weekly and, today, instead of unbiased comment, we find its pages filled with column after column of corruptionist propaganda—propaganda against the liberty-loving among the Russian people, propaganda against the working men and working women of the United States—all aimed to create public opinion in favor of the monarchistic doctrine of modern business that "whatever we want is right, whatever you want is wrong."

And the Saturday Evening Post now has stooped to the lowest form of duplicity against its readers. Not content with having prostituted the brilliant art of Will Egan and Sam Rhyne and using their humorous talents to ridicule the professions of the workers, we now find that weekly besmirching such writers as Emerson Hough, who, in the latest issue, under the guise of an historical essay on the "old trails," attacks the farmers of North Dakota for seeking to overthrow the leeches who had ridden on their backs for decades; attacks the workers of Butte for seeking a living wage and the right to better working conditions; attacks the union men and women of Seattle, for daring to oppose their industrial bosses.

And what seems more strange to the liberty-loving and law-abiding citizens of Butte, we find Mr. Hough, still under the sugar-coated guise of his historical story of the old west in Montana, exalting the murderers, who, violating the most sacred tenet of the constitution of the government Mr. Hough sets himself up as the defender of, lynched Frank Little in Butte.

The opening paragraph of Mr. Hough's thinly disguised effort at anti-labor, anti-farmer propaganda we find as follows:

Two very simple and direct young men, agents of a certain country called America, once upon a time started west across this continent on the greatest exploring expedition the world has ever known. They passed their first winter on the trail in what is now known as North Dakota. At that time the North Dakota legislature was not in session and the Nonpartisan league was not yet organized. At Butte, Montana, where Butte later was to be, they noted no I. W. W. as they passed by in high summer of the following year. At the mouth of the Columbia river, in a state named after a certain union once well known—to wit, G. Washington—there were at that time no radical socialists and no plotters against the foundations of their government. Had these things then been in existence it is possible that Meriwether Lewis, a bold though melancholy man who feared nothing in the world, might have turned to his red-headed and sanguine friend, William Clark, and said: "Will, what's the use?"

The purest bunk! Composition and a simile that to those who have read and admired Mr. Hough's wonderfully descriptive articles on our national parks and various phases of the west as it was, tend us to believe that the gathering years have spared neither his mental nor his literary powers.

And, then again, we find this:

Lewis and Clark, great individualists and great soldiers, who found us an immeasurably valuable empire at an expense of $2,500, could never—from any horizon within their power—have foreseen the day when America could surrender even in part to the proposition that all men are alike and that they exist as masses in which one unit is precisely equal to each other unit. Had these two fighting men known that they were asked to find a country for I. W. W.'s, bolsheviks and state socialists, in all likelihood they would have declined the job.

Shades of Lewis and Clark! Here we have the spectacle of a magazine writer, presumably engaged in using his talents to "defend" the government and the constitution upon which it is founded, from the onslaughts of a chimerical "enemy," which exists only in the brains of those who make swollen profits by grinding down the workers, and those, who, like Mr. Hough, earn tainted money through selling their talents to such leeches, by bewailing "the day when America could surrender, even in part, to the proposition that all men are alike and that they exist as masses in which one unit is precisely equal to each other unit."

That certainly is not the argument of any but a doddering old man, a writer whose sensibilities have, perhaps, been dulled by age, and whose moral honesty has been dulled by offers of money in exchange for what little ability as a writer remains.

Think of it! Emerson Hough attempting to defend the United States government by flouting one of its fundamental principles—the declaration that all men are created equal.

Perhaps, Mr. Hough does not know it, but his statements in the quotation above would have been sufficient in most every state but Montana, North Dakota and Washington—where the copper barons, the lumber barons and the rest of the barons never have believed in the United States constitution—to have caused his arrest during the war for sedition.

But to resume: After his name preamble, Mr. Hough then launches into several pages of more or less interestingly written stuff, in which he glorifies some of the old traders for peddling booze to the Indians, and then killing the victims of their "firewater" in cold blood, when drunkenness brought on quarrelsomeness.

And in winding up his narrative we find Mr. Hough guilty of this:

Which is your country? What would red-headed Will Clark and dour Meriwether Lewis have said to the May day bomb outrages of this current year of grace? What would my old long-haired hunter friends among the Blackfeet have said could they have seen I. W. W.'s following the coffin of a man who was lynched because he went farther in voting treason than certain Americans could stand? What would the old captains of the fur trade say to state socialism in that country, where they plucked their pack trains before state lines were known?

We find it hard to determine what Lewis and Clark would have said under the bomb outrages, since in their day there were no powerful employers' associations and the customs of the times did not permit the corporations to plant bombs and blow up a few houses as a means of discrediting the workers.

And could Mr. Hough's old hunter friends of the Blackfeet have seen the solemn funeral procession of the martyred Frank Little winding its way through Butte's streets, they would have stood with all the stoicism of their race and pondered deeply on the vanquished civilization that Mr. Hough and his friends of the early days were endeavoring to foist on the "savages." They would have pondered deeply as to the form of government which permitted a group of murderers to drag from his bed and hang a man for exercising the right of free speech granted him by the constitution, simply because his remarks were directed against the crooks and corruptionists—seditionists and traitors to the country, all.

And as to the far leaders of the old days and their ideas of "state socialism," there can be but one theory. They were the forerunners of the profiteers of today. They would undoubtedly have thought "damn!"

Surely, the attitude of the Saturday Evening Post in throwing upon its columns to such thinly-coated literary mills of poison against the workers in their efforts to improve the condition of the country and make everyone—including the corporations and Mr. Hough—live up to the laws of the land as laid down in the constitution seem queer when contrasted with this choice bit in the same number of the same issue in Col. Henry Wallis's resume of the reasons for the present unrest:

But as time passed and voters increased, the popular imagination multiplied the temptations and opportunities for gain, making the enterprising, the adventurous and the corrupt to reconstitute patriotism into an asset and to organize public action into a bill of lading. Thus politics as a trade, parties as trademarks, and politicians, like harlots, riding their vocations.

Now and again an honest and a brave man who aims at better things appears. In the event that fortune favors him and he attains high station, he finds himself surrounded and thwarted by men less upright, less able and less courageous, who, however capable of discovering right from wrong and willing to do their duty, yet wear the party color, owe fealty to the party machine, are sometimes the very slaves of the party boss. In the larger towns we hear of the city hall ring; or in the counties, of the courthouse ring. We rarely anywhere encounter clean, responsible administration and pure, disinterested, patriotic public service.

The taxpayers are robbed before their eyes daily and at noonday. The evil grows greater as we near the centers of population. But there is scarcely a village or a hamlet where graft does not grow like weeds, the voters as gullible and helpless as the infatuated victims of lunko tricks ingeniously contrived by professional crooks to separate the fool and his money. Is self-government a failure?

Is it any wonder the people turn to bolshevism—so long as bolshevism seems to promise a surcease from the conditions which Colonel Watterston describes? Is it any wonder the people turn hither and thither, joining first one labor union, then another; finding that the men to whom they turn in their hour of need—such men as Sam Gompers, for instance—no, betray them? Is it any wonder that the great masses of the people of the United States, driven to a serfdom that nearly equals that of Czarist Russia, look to the new republic of Russia as a light out of darkness that may show them the way to their own salvation? Is it any wonder?

 army stores at the exceptionally low prices.

In last Friday's issue of the Bulletin, this paper advanced the suggestion to Mayor Stodden that he order a quantity of the army's surplus stores on the consignment plan and sell at actual cost in an effort to force down the profiteers' prices. At the time it was stated that while the plan would mean only temporary relief from the deprivations of the food-rising robbers, it at least would help to ameliorate the pitiable condition in some of the workers' families, in the city by permitting them to buy sufficient food for a number of full meals at least, at reasonable prices.

Neither the Miner, the Standard nor any other newspaper in the state, so far as the public of Butte has been able to ascertain, had the nerve to suggest that army surplus stores be shipped in here and sold in competition with the profiteers. The Bulletin, the advocate of the common people, standing alone in the campaign.

COMPANY REFUSAL
 ination against employees for political or other activities.

The length of the contract period is also a bone of contention as the rising cost of living makes it impossible to even approximate prices a month in advance.

The wage offered by the company is also too low, in the opinion of rank and file of the Metal Trades, crafts, the $6.50 figure offered by the company being no advance over the wage received last year, while living costs have risen tremendously.

In the proposition submitted by the company the closed-shop clause was rather conspicuously worded; as yesterday's conference Mr. Kelly stated that this had not been intentional, but would not agree to any other objections raised by the Metal Trades representatives.

Mr. Kelly also stated that in the event the contract was signed now, August 5, 1919, the company would not be bound to pay the wage until July 1 as promised, but would take effect only on day agreement was reached.

Although strike action was postponed until Friday, the men representing the Metal Trades in yesterday's conference expressed but little hope of a settlement before Friday that would make a strike unnecessary.

The refusal of the company to agree to sections of the contract which the Metal Trades had worked for over two years was characterized as arbitrary by officers of the council and is generally interpreted as showing that the companies have decided to declare war on the Metal Trades.

The electrical workers, the first to meet since the conference, last night elected a strike committee to handle their affairs if a strike is necessary.

Other Metal Trades unions will take similar action tonight.

PRESIDENT SEES NEED
 coal famine has added itself to the complications which congress faces in the railroads and high cost of living problems. Senators Hitchcock and Pomeroy declared the fuel problem was rapidly becoming grave.

"It must if possible, be settled before autumn, coal men in Ohio and West Virginia informed me," said Pomeroy. "They cannot get cars. One man wrote me that the entire output of his mines for this year has been contracted for. He has plenty of labor but is unable to get cars. If this situation does not change the miners will be out of work, mills will be closed, business will stagnate and terrible suffering will result."

Hitchcock says he fears that the coal problem is only one of a number of domestic problems that will soon add themselves to the worries of congress. He predicted a strong movement for the nationalization of the mines and railroads, such as has developed in England.

CHARGE STATUTORY OFFENSE.
 As an aftermath of the alleged attack on two young women from Great Falls at the "Hog Ranch" roadhouse last week, information charging attempts to commit a statutory offense were filed yesterday against Joe Kelly and Mary Fitzpatrick, the latter the proprietress of the roadhouse.

It was alleged that Kelly made an assault on Iona Baker after luring her to the roadhouse, during which alleged assault Kelly received the worst of the encounter.

Third, at Chalons-sur-Marne, on July 15, 1918, the fighting 95th Regiment of New York, flanked by the 125th, refused to obey orders from the french commander to fall back to the second trenches, in the face of the onrushing massed formation of the Germans, fighting fury, rolled back the Hun, and saved Chalons (the road to Paris) thus saving civilization.

 Wendell Phillips once gave a happy and illuminating description of the capitalist politician. Said he: "A politician is a man who lives by whispering at Washington what he wouldn't for all the world have known at home, and whispering at home what he wouldn't for all the world have known at Washington, and who is politically dead the moment he is equally well known in both places."

"The capitalist politician to succeed at the game must be a hypocrite and coward. If he goes to congress as a republican, democrat or progressive, he is supposed to represent ALL THE PEOPLE in his district, when, as a matter of fact, this is absolutely impossible as long as there is an upper and lower class, an exploiting and exploited class, in society. If he is for the exploiters, he is against the exploited, and vice versa, and as he can take sides with neither openly, he takes sides secretly with the strong against the weak, the cunning against the ignorant, and then loudly shouts his own praises from the stump, and with many a striking attitude and fierce gesticulation warns his sold-out victims against the awful things that will happen to them if they should be so unfortunate as to be no longer misrepresented and sold out by him in congress."

Around this site lawsuits of two centuries have raged, and claimants and heirs spent fruitless fortunes. Annetje Jans came to "New Amsterdam" from Holland in 1630, with her husband. She was a splendid type of the sturdy, capable Dutch woman, and has received in Holland the same education as men. After five years of fruitless success up the Hudson, the governor of New York gave her husband one of the eight farms on Manhattan Island, then a colony of 200 fur traders. After her husband's death, Annetje Jans made sure of her title to this property. In 1654 the governor confirmed the grant of land. She died in 1665, leaving this farm to her heirs. But, when Trinity corporation was incorporated at the end of the 17th century, the English government gave to the corporation a lease of Annetje Jans' farm for seven years. In 1705 Queen Anne granted Annetje Jans' farm in perpetuity.

 What is meant by "Care Weight"? The art of cutting and polishing diamonds was unknown till 1456, when it was discovered by Louis Berquin, of Bruges. In speaking of the size of diamonds the term carat is used. This is the name of a bean, which was used in its dried state by the natives of Africa in weighing gold and in India in weighing diamonds. Though the bean is not used for this purpose now, the name is retained, and the carat is nearly four grains Troy.

Bozeman Trades and Labor Council
 Bozeman, Mont., Aug. 2, 1919.
 To All Members of Organized Labor, Greetings:

This will notify you that the Bozeman Round-up company has been placed upon the unfair list of the Bozeman Trades and Labor Council. This company is promoting the Round-up to be held in Bozeman, Mont., Aug. 12th to 14th, and have refused to recognize the unions of Bozeman in the construction of their buildings, seats, etc., and have about 75 non-union men in their employ. Those scabs are making preparations for the big Round-up and we cordially invite all scabs in the state to attend. This is as far as our invitation extends, so you are not invited.

We ask you to kindly notify as many local unions as possible of the conditions here, and especially notify the musicians. Thanking you in advance for your consideration in this matter, we remain,

BAIL IS WANTED WITHOUT FAIL FOR THE MEN WHO ARE IN JAIL

Remember!

Hundreds of workers are literally rotting in the jails of this country because of their activity in the cause of Labor. Many of these victims of the world-wide class war are awaiting trial—and have been waiting for many weary months for the speedy trial guaranteed them by the United States Constitution. Others were tried and sentenced to terms ranging from one to twenty years during the period of war hysteria, and appeals in their cases are now being taken from King Capital drunk to King Capital sober.

Some of the prisoners have escaped by death, others are dying, many have contracted tuberculosis and other loathsome diseases, and all are suffering untold agony from close confinement in the fetid atmosphere, from insanitary and unhealthy surroundings, from poor and insufficient food, and from inhuman treatment accorded them by brutalized guards. Past attempts to secure bail for all of these workers in jail have not been attended with great success because of the lack of system. Individuals sought to secure bail for their personal friends, and failing to get the necessary amount they returned what had been collected, thus making their entire efforts fruitless. This was the condition facing the delegates from all the western district organizations of the Industrial Workers of the World when they met in conference on July 3 and 4 in Seattle. The delegates solved the problem by an unfailing means—Organization.

A Bail and Bond Committee was elected to systematize the work of collecting bail and a nation-wide drive has been started to secure the loan of cash, Liberty Bonds and property sufficient to gain the release of all class war prisoners. With practically no advertising Six Thousand Dollars were raised in the first five days. More than Two Hundred Thousand Dollars are needed to release those now being held for their Labor activity.

Sums of Five Dollars and up are accepted as loans, and all cash, Liberty Bonds or property is tabulated in triplicate, one copy going to the person making the loan, another being retained by the Bail and Bond Committee, and the third being filed with the Trades Union Savings and Loan Association of Seattle, with whom all funds, bonds and property schedules will be banked.

Only those who have been proved loyal and trustworthy are being sent out as collectors. Everything possible has been done to safeguard this bail and bond fund, from the selection of the committee to the choice of the bank. A portion of the fund is being set aside to return loans on demand in case persons who have made them are forced to leave the country or have other reasons for making a withdrawal.

Bail will be used to release specified persons where that is desired, but otherwise the release will take place by a blind drawing of names, thus insuring fairness to all prisoners. By common consent the men in Wichita, Kansas, jail will first be released, as they have been held the longest and jail conditions are worse there than anywhere else in the entire country. This bail has nearly all been subscribed, and the men will be made accredited collectors when released, and their speedy release will help to set others at liberty.

No necessity exists for argument. Your duty is clear. If your ears are not deaf to a call from your class, if you feel that an injury to one is an injury to all, if there burns within you the faintest spark of humanity, you will see that the men do not remain behind the bars an unnecessary minute because you withheld your support.

THEY ARE WILLING TO GIVE THEIR LIVES FOR YOU! ARE YOU WILLING TO LOAN YOUR DOLLARS TO THEM?
 Send all cash, checks and bonds to John L. Engdahl, Secretary of Bail and Bond Committee, Box W, Ballard Station, Seattle.
 Property schedules should be filed with Attorney Ralph S. Pierce, Room 607 Central Building, Seattle.

 The most valuable plot on the round earth is Trinity church, and its churchyard, at the head of Wall street, New York. It was Annetje Jans' farm in the early 17th century. Around this site lawsuits of two centuries have raged, and claimants and heirs spent fruitless fortunes. Annetje Jans came to "New Amsterdam" from Holland in 1630, with her husband. She was a splendid type of the sturdy, capable Dutch woman, and has received in Holland the same education as men. After five years of fruitless success up the Hudson, the governor of New York gave her husband one of the eight farms on Manhattan Island, then a colony of 200 fur traders. After her husband's death, Annetje Jans made sure of her title to this property. In 1654 the governor confirmed the grant of land. She died in 1665, leaving this farm to her heirs. But, when Trinity corporation was incorporated at the end of the 17th century, the English government gave to the corporation a lease of Annetje Jans' farm for seven years. In 1705 Queen Anne granted Annetje Jans' farm in perpetuity.

Morsels From A Sage's Scrap Book
 What is meant by "Care Weight"? The art of cutting and polishing diamonds was unknown till 1456, when it was discovered by Louis Berquin, of Bruges. In speaking of the size of diamonds the term carat is used. This is the name of a bean, which was used in its dried state by the natives of Africa in weighing gold and in India in weighing diamonds. Though the bean is not used for this purpose now, the name is retained, and the carat is nearly four grains Troy.

Bozeman Trades and Labor Council
 Bozeman, Mont., Aug. 2, 1919.
 To All Members of Organized Labor, Greetings:

This will notify you that the Bozeman Round-up company has been placed upon the unfair list of the Bozeman Trades and Labor Council. This company is promoting the Round-up to be held in Bozeman, Mont., Aug. 12th to 14th, and have refused to recognize the unions of Bozeman in the construction of their buildings, seats, etc., and have about 75 non-union men in their employ. Those scabs are making preparations for the big Round-up and we cordially invite all scabs in the state to attend. This is as far as our invitation extends, so you are not invited.

We ask you to kindly notify as many local unions as possible of the conditions here, and especially notify the musicians. Thanking you in advance for your consideration in this matter, we remain,

Fraternally,
 BOZEMAN TRADES AND LABOR COUNCIL,
 C. E. ELY, President,
 A. D. SECOR, Secretary.

Today's Anniversary.
 St. Memmius, first bishop and apostle of Chalons-sur-Marne.

St. Memmius, first bishop and apostle of Chalons-sur-Marne, in Gaul, (today called France) died on August 5, 289. Chalons-sur-Marne is a hamlet in Germany. The emperor gave a piece of gold to every soldier of his legions, for the head of every man. Near Chalons-sur-Marne the emperor established bridge heads on the Rhine. Third, at Chalons-sur-Marne, on July 15, 1918, the fighting 95th Regiment of New York, flanked by the 125th, refused to obey orders from the french commander to fall back to the second trenches, in the face of the onrushing massed formation of the Germans, fighting fury, rolled back the Hun, and saved Chalons (the road to Paris) thus saving civilization.

Debs' Daily Message
 Wendell Phillips once gave a happy and illuminating description of the capitalist politician. Said he: "A politician is a man who lives by whispering at Washington what he wouldn't for all the world have known at home, and whispering at home what he wouldn't for all the world have known at Washington, and who is politically dead the moment he is equally well known in both places."

"The capitalist politician to succeed at the game must be a hypocrite and coward. If he goes to congress as a republican, democrat or progressive, he is supposed to represent ALL THE PEOPLE in his district, when, as a matter of fact, this is absolutely impossible as long as there is an upper and lower class, an exploiting and exploited class, in society. If he is for the exploiters, he is against the exploited, and vice versa, and as he can take sides with neither openly, he takes sides secretly with the strong against the weak, the cunning against the ignorant, and then loudly shouts his own praises from the stump, and with many a striking attitude and fierce gesticulation warns his sold-out victims against the awful things that will happen to them if they should be so unfortunate as to be no longer misrepresented and sold out by him in congress."
