HENRY FORD WINS HIS CASE

Jury in Million Dollar Libel Suit Awards Owner of "Tin Lizzie" Factory Six Cents.

(Special United Press Wire.)
At Cleveon, Mich., Aug. 15.—After more than 10 hours deliberation, a jury of farmers awarded Henry Ford six cents last night as a result of his million-dollar libel suit against the Chicago Tribune. Attorneys for both sides said they were satisfied.

History of the Case.

The Ford-Tribune case was one of the most novel in legal history. It dated back to early 1916 when the Chicago Tribune published the now famous "Ford Is An Anarchist" editorial, based on certain Ford signed advertisements against preparedness.

Ford demanded retraction. The newspaper refused, declaring in a letter that although Ford might not be a bomb throwing anarchist, he was against the government.

Suit was filed shortly afterward in United States district court, northeastern district of Illinois, before Judge K. M. Landis.

Answer was filed and Ford demanded to the answer. The demurrer was under consideration when Ford dismissed the suit.

Shortly afterward a new suit was filed in the circuit court of Wayne county, (Detroit) thus bringing into the case Solomon Bros., Detroit news dealers, who sold the Tribune, as co-defendants.

Two weeks ago (this was written July 26, and of eleven weeks the trial started here after a change of venue had been granted the Tribune, which contended a fair trial would not be possible at Detroit, Ford's home town.

Through the weeks attorneys thrashed over the evidence with but little to break the monotony until Ford himself took the stand a few weeks ago. He remained for seven days of vexatious questioning.

During this time he admitted advertisements fighting what he termed "over preparedness" were written for him by his "peace secretary," Theodore De Lavigne and only signed by Ford.

Attorney Stevenson of the Tribune by much questioning brought him to the admission that he knew little about history and politics even though "he attempted to educate the people to his preparedness plans, and was candidate for United States senatorial nomination recently."

Ford admitted he never had heard of John Andre, said he thought Benedict Arnold was a writer and that a mobile army was a large army. He knew, however, the intricacies of mechanics and was much more at ease when the questioning drifted to subjects relating to his life study.

The manufacturer on the stand was not the self-content, unobtrusive worker he is at his plant. Closely he was nervous, unacquainted with his surroundings, too willing to answer questions that the trial might be speeded even at cost to himself. Failure to wait for the guiding advice of his attorney got him in many a tangle. He would sit slumped slightly forward, his chin cupped in his hand, his brow wrinkled, his right hand twitching, turning thumb rubbing over fingers, crossing and recrossing his feet, seeming deeply engrossed in his inquiries and that gentleman's efforts were caught many times mentally tinkering with some mechanical subject.

His last two days on the stand saw a stiffening against the Tribune attorney's attack. He was more cautious, he succeeded in warding off many blows which before fell.

Few people, if any, have more than a general idea of what the trial cost. One mathematically inclined newspaper man who has been at the "ringside" throughout, said $500,000 was spent by both litigants in actual court work. He did not include money spent by Ford in maintaining information and press bureaus. Seventeen lawyers active were engaged in the courtroom seven retained by Ford, eight by the Tribune and two retained by Solomon Bros., co-defendants. Elmer G. Stevenson, senior Tribune counsel, was understood to receive between $300 and $400 a day. This was not doubted by uninterested legal men. It also was estimated a lawyer in the courtroom received less than $50 a day.

That the million-dollar controversy will be taken to the supreme court of Michigan for final adjudication was a reasonable deduction.

Had the case proceeded in U. S. district court, the appeal, if taken would have seen the case re-fought in circuit court of appeals at Chicago.

WAGES OF SHIPYARD WORKERS INCREASED

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—A tentative agreement increasing the wages of all Pacific coast shipyard workers 8 cents an hour, establishing the eight-hour day and Saturday half-holiday and changing certain working conditions, has been drawn up by the conference of metal trades international officers and shipyard employers now in progress here, it was announced.

The agreement provides for a minimum of $7.94 for skilled mechanics and $4.89 for laborers. Patternmakers who had been getting $7. are raised to $7.64.

FOREST FIRES DESTROY MUCH VALUABLE TIMBER

Lowstown, Maine, Aug. 15.—Forest fires are raging along a 40-mile front on Locksaw creek, and are fanned by high winds, with 250 fire fighters hunting safely, powerless to fight the flames. The fires burned over 2,000 acres of valuable white pine in a few hours last night. New fires are reported from Gospee creek, Mallard, Lightning creeks and in the Nez Perce reserve.

PEOPLE'S PATIENCE

maintain high prices. In one instance, as was reported at the time in the Bulletin, many cases of canned oysters, which had been kept in storage in a local packing company warehouse during the period of the war, in direct violation of the food administration regulations against hoarding, were first hauled to the incinerator and were later seized by the city health administration after they had been transferred to the wagon of a small peddler.

Months of discontent over the failure of the authorities to make good on actions against the local profiteers are constant wherever groups of people gather, and concerted action by the people themselves to force down prices in their own fashion, if the authorities continue their policy of hoarding and speculation, is predicted.

and, if pushed on after that, would have seen the windup in the United States supreme court. As it is the supreme court of Michigan is practically the court of last resort unless some question is raised under the federal constitution.

IMPORTANT ACTION

mechanics are traveling and none are coming to Butte.

As the notification of the trouble here cannot have reached many points as yet, this is taken to indicate that employment is rather plentiful; no concerted effort on the part of the companies to recruit strike-breakers has apparently yet been made and it is anticipated that they would meet with some difficulty in getting a sufficient number of competent mechanics to replace the strikers, in view of the fact that higher wages are being paid elsewhere on fair jobs.

It is probable that the metal trades unions will take united action against the firms responsible for sending out the horde of bill-collectors that covered the city yesterday as the sentiment was strongly expressed by many of the metal trades men that persecution of the strikers by this method would not be tolerated.

At the mass meeting to be held this afternoon, it is probable that this matter will be taken up and discussed and a plan of action outlined.

While no new developments are looked for at the meeting this afternoon, it is possible that the assistance of other crafts working on the bill may be solicited.

The organizations working under contract for the mining companies at the present time includes the engineers, carpenters, ropemen and the teamsters.

The miners are not working under contract and have already expressed themselves as willing to assist the metal trades.

It is possible that the members of other organizations will be asked not to handle material prepared by strike-breakers and not to work with men taking the places of the metal tradesmen.

The meeting was called for 3 p. m. and was largely attended.

SPECIAL MEETING.
The Metal Mine Workers' unit of the One Big Union will meet tonight at 8 o'clock, at 101 South Idaho street.

GREAT FALLS LABOR UNION VOTES TO STRIKE

Great Falls, Aug. 15.—By a vote of 261 to 35, members of the federal labor union last night decided to go on strike next Monday, in an effort to compel recognition of their demand for an increase of 50 cents a day. The federal labor union is largely composed of city laborers, and two weeks ago presented a petition to the council for a 50-cent increase, but action was deferred until Mayor Louis Newman returned from Helena, where he was then attending the state legislature.

At the council meeting last Tuesday the mayor asked the city employees to take recognition of the fact that in his opinion high prices have reached their apex, and announced that he would postpone making a recommendation relative to the petition of city employees.

City laborers affected by the strike order are the boulevard, street and other outside workmen. The schedule now in effect is $4.50 per day, the amount fixed by the council at the time the annual budget was completed.
