Butte in process of formation. The pages of the Miner forshadow that the Davis-Daly Copper company, Butte-Superior Mining company and other vast mineral holdings are to be merged into one giant company by Hayden-Stone company, brokers, of Boston and New York. This is in line with many other unfounded articles which have appeared in this sheet for the last six months.

ported to the plasterers' union and are being tabulated for possible legal action. Boss plasterers "scabbing" on the craft, during the strike are said to be getting all the materials they order without interruption, showing that there is no shortage, as alleged in some instances by the material firms when refusing materials to union contractors.

Paper Houses Blamed.
In the strike of pressmen, press assistants and bookbinders against the job printing shops of the city, a conspiracy on the part of paper companies to withhold material from the 16 shops which have agreed to the union demands is alleged by the union committee. The American Paper company, Mutual Paper company and other large dealers are named as heading the conspiracy in league with the Employing Printers' association, whose members are proprietors of shops which have refused to recognize the union scale and are closed by the strike.

its smelter. With unlimited capital, it drifted along for eight or nine years into a reorganization (which is the polite term used when millionaires go through bankruptcy). It never paid a dividend. The name of the reorganization was the Pitts-mont Copper company. This continued for several years and never paid a dividend.

The management learned that it must get land closer to the Butte district before it could succeed. It consolidated with a producer under the name of East Butte Mining company. This has drifted along for eight years, and secured a very valuable smelting contract from the Davis-Daly Copper company. After securing this contract it managed to pay last November to the owners of stock in the second reorganization $1 per share.

The North Butte Mining company followed the ignis fatuus of finding copper mines on the flat. It is generally reputed to have spent several hundred thousand dollars on its development to the east.

Three months ago the Miner published a flash head line similar to its giant "merger" put forth this morning, that the North-Butte Mining company had found a mighty deposit of ore to the east of the Tuolumne and the stock rose $5 a share on the strength of this report, and doubtless the gentleman who published the report in the Miner profited by his false report. A week or two later the management of the North-Butte mining company officially denied the report.

One need scarcely mention that the Amazon-Butte company spent $300,000 in attempting to make a mine on the flat and failed. That the Ina-Montana company spent $150,000 in a similar attempt and failed.

The Farrell Copper company and the Alliance Copper company each attempted it and failed. The Reins Copper company, directly between the Butte Main Range and the Colusa-Leonard, which companies went into the Tuolumne, spent approximately $900,000—worked for four years, sunk 1,500 feet, and failed to make a paying mine.

After all of these failures it has become assured in the minds of all reasonable men that the Tuolumne Copper Mining company can never pay a legitimate dividend; that the only chance for its stockholders to make money is through manipulations of the market.

It is far safer for a working man to place his earnings on a faro table where he at least sees the cards dealt and can detect cheating of the dealer, than to attempt to increase his earnings by investing in Tuolumne stock, which has a little inside ring or holding company called the "Silver Low Securities company," and the dealing is done in Boston.

Concerning the mammoth merger, to show how ridiculous any such plan is, one need only mention that the Butte-Superior is a zinc producing company, and has suffered severely through years of litigation, and the Davis-Daly company is a copper mining company that is just coming into its own. Its tonnage has doubled in the last two months.

It is believed to have the largest share of copper ore in the northwest, and its net earnings are said to be approximately $140,000 in August. The publishing of such exciting takes, as "mammoth mergers," is merely to let the recent mining editor of the Miner, now turned stock broker, amass the little savings of working men (and women). A comparison might be drawn between some of these companies: Tuolumne stock for 2,500,000 shares with no ore in sight, selling at $2, totals $5,000,000. Davis-Daly stock for 520,000 shares, earning $140,000 per month, selling at $10, totals $5,000,000. The next report on the front page of the Miner may spring a merger between Tuolumne and the Kimberley diamond mines.
