BRITAIN FEARS TRUTH ABOUT IRELAND

United States Labor Official Enters Protest Against Action of British Government.

(By the Federated Press.)
Washington, Dec. 21.—The American Commission on Conditions in Ireland, which resumed hearings here on Wednesday, has called to William P. Adamson, M. P., and Arthur Henderson, M. P., both members of the British labor delegation which has just returned from an investigation of conditions in Ireland, inviting them or other members of the delegation to come to Washington to testify at the Irish inquiry.

Mr. Henderson had called the commission a few days ago, stating: "I hope and believe that closer relations between the forward-looking citizens of England and the United States will result from the endeavors of the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland."

The witnesses scheduled to be heard this week are Laurence Ginnell, former member of the British parliament from County Westmeath, Ireland, and now a member of Dail Einninn, and Miss Ruth Russell of Chicago, who was recently in Ireland for the Chicago Daily News.

Other witnesses expected to arrive soon are Miss Ellen C. Wilkinson and Mrs. Annot Erskine Robinson, representing the British branch of the Women's International League, who were members of a delegation of English women who recently made a first-hand survey of Irish conditions.

Protesting against the refusal of the British embassy to vize the passports of the members of the American commission to visit England and Ireland, James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor and a member of the commission, sent the following cablegram to William P. Adamson, chairman of the Labor party in the house of commons:

"One hundred and fifty Americans of all shades of opinion, constituting the American Commission on Conditions in Ireland, chose five of their number to visit England and Ireland to ascertain for American public opinion in behalf of world peace the facts as to the struggle between the Irish people and the British government. . . . The American government has issued ready to four of these men the necessary passports, and had the other application under consideration, when the British government refused vizes for any of the passports. In consequence, the trip cannot be made.

"I wish to enter, through you as the head of the British Labor party, a protest to the English people against this autocratic action of the British government in suppressing truth and free speech from the liberty-loving people of two democracies, and to ask if such action aimed at unprejudiced Americans seeking only to serve the ends of international understanding and world peace has the sanction of the British Labor party."

The five members chosen by the commission are: Oliver P. Newman, former commissioner of the District of Columbia and a major in the late war; Arthur Gulason, distinguished journalist and economist; Rev. Norman Thomas, Presbyterian clergyman and editor; William MacDonald, educator and author, and James H. Maurer, president of the Pennsylvania State Federation of Labor.

BUTTE BRIEFS

Motion for new trial was filed by attorneys Canning and Gogan Monday for Assad Jahrey who was convicted of murder in the first degree recently for the killing of Hugh Gibson at the latter's home, 2337 Harvard avenue, Sept. 29. ## WILSON BRITISH AGENT, SAYS PLUTE

Pacific Coast Is to Become Center of World's Trade, in Opinion of Vanderlip.

By HELEN AUGUR.

Staff Correspondent Federated Press.
New York, Dec. 21.—"America's look toward the Pacific coast. Three-quarters of the world's population faces it. It is destined to become a great trading sea joining the greatest republican nations in the world—America, China, Russia with Japan the only cloud between."

Washington, Baker Vanderlip has come back from Russia to tell the American people to forget Europe, exhausted by wars, torn by rivalries, take out your eyes and look at the Pacific—rest your eyes on the great stretches of untamed Siberia, dwell on the rich peninsula of Kamchatka, spilling little islands down toward Japan and stretching out a magnificent bay toward Alaska, whom time has parted by a narrow strait.

Solve the question which is nagging at Alaska, the Philippines and Australia—the question whether imperial Japan or a new Pacific alliance is going to dominate their future. Solve the problem besetting the Pacific coast business men who are looking for new worlds to conquer. Accept the Kamchatka commission, take the salmon which are dying by the millions, and the coal, and the oil, the terrific Japan with American warships driven by Siberian oil. Americanize the Pacific.

This is the use of the business man and the engineer. Dericks, not dreams, says Vanderlip. Competition, not communism.

Vanderlip found he could talk business with Lenin. He could do nothing to do with the people who are running the British government, nor the American. But in the Kremlin realism ruled, and brains. "Lenin's all brains—the most astute man in the world," he said.

Lenin may have his own plans for the Pacific. There is nothing in those plans to prevent adventurous American capital from exploiting Kamchatka and rubbing elbows with Japan for the next 50 years. Four hundred square miles in eastern Siberia, thousands of miles from Moscow, where an experiment is being worked out, concern Russia very little and may be expected to concern Japan and America a great deal. Lenin has his own ideas of the future.

Vanderlip made a speech before the Council of Peoples' Commissioners on September 13. That speech marked an epoch. "The most important parts have been detected," Vanderlip said with a quiet smile. Still, this is what he said about Wilson:

"It is one of the fundamental principles of the American constitution not to interfere with the form of government adopted by any nation. Unfortunately we have a president, Mr. Wilson, who by political adroitness, secured to himself powers during the great war which made him temporarily an autocrat. A new plan from carrying into execution plans inspired by Great Britain. At present he can do nothing but write diplomatic notes. We must bear with him until March 4.

"British propaganda has been, and is, endeavoring to poison the minds of the American public as to conditions in Soviet Russia, for the reason that Great Britain sees the handwriting on the wall: the rising tide of a great nation, destined in the near future to take its place as a constructive, intellectual force which may rock the British empire from its foundation. . . . (Deleted.)

"Alaska is open to attack from Japan and could easily be seized. (Deleted.)

"It is the desire of the Vanderlip syndicate to obtain islands adjacent to the provinces of Primorak and Kamchatka which are now occupied by the Russian government. . . . (Deleted.)

"We know that Japan could not go to war with the United States without a supply of crude oil. Coal-driven war vessels cannot compete with those burning oil. Submarines and airplanes cannot be driven without oil. Japan could only receive her oil from Russia or England. What Russia will do we know. What Great Britain will do, we know not."

CLOTHING BOSSES OUT TO CRUSH UNIONS

Amalgamated Clothing Workers Will Resist All Attempts to Restore the Sweatshop System.

(By the Federated Press.)

New York, Dec. 21.—(By Mail.)—Facing a total lock-out by the end of the week, the Amalgamated has sent 100 pickets this morning to the 20 shops which are trying to operate on the new piece-work basis.

Emphasizing the line-up between the clothing union and the employers' private guards are racing the sidewalk with the pickets, watching for "violence." No clash has been reported so far.

A very frank retort of the clothing manufacturers' determination to crush unionism in the industry, and substitute the old sweatshop basis, was a statement issued by the Clothing Manufacturers' association yesterday. Besides repeating the now-famous "seven demands" for piece-work, right to hire and fire, and right of employers to change contractors, the statement demands the "renunciation of socialism" by the Amalgamated, and the rejection of the theory of the impartial entrepreneur.

Formation of a plan of operations under the piece-work system did not materialize at the meeting, contrary to expectation. Instead, a poll of 200 manufacturers present was taken to see whether any had so far declared a lockout against the Amalgamated. The manufacturers all reported "not guilty," the owners of the 20 picketed shops saying that they had closed down because of "shortage of orders."

Harry A. Gordon, whose recent appointment as counsel for the association was hailed by Sidney Hillman, president of the Amalgamated, as a signal of war, announced that he was investigating evidence of graft in the clothing trade, and would ask for such an investigation as is now being conducted into the building industry.

Hillman stated that he would welcome such an investigation, and expressed the hope that it would be searching.

Answering the demand of the manufacturers that the Amalgamated alter its preamble, Hillman declared that the Market Committee of the association seemed to have gone out of its way to pose "terms which the Amalgamated could not and would not meet." "The manufacturers' plans for reducing clothing prices at the public's expense. The plan of the Amalgamated meant peace, continued production and a permanent reduction in clothing prices by the elimination of excessive profits and production of waste," he said.

HENRI BARBUSSE SEES STRUGGLE AHEAD

Noted French Author Says Issue Must Be Settled Right, in Interest of the Worker.

By MAX WORTH.
(European Staff Correspondent for the Federated Press.)
Paris, Dec. 21.—"What do you see ahead for the people of Europe?" I asked Henri Barbusse, author of "Under Fire," "The Inferno" and "Clarte," and leader of the Republican Association of Former Soldiers, the most radical veterans' organization in France.

Barbusse turned aside for a moment. His face grew longer and sadder than in its wont. Then: "I see a bloody struggle—a struggle between the Socialists and the capitalists for the control of European economic life. On the one side is Russia, with some assistance, perhaps. On the other, headed by France and Great Britain, are the capitalist states.

"The Premier is playing for time now. They are not yet prepared to take the steps that are necessary to win their point. They are deceiving the workers with some false hope to get them through the difficulties of this winter and perhaps the next. But there can be no end to the conflict until one side or the other has triumphed. It is a case of Socialism or capitalism. Which will dominate Europe?"

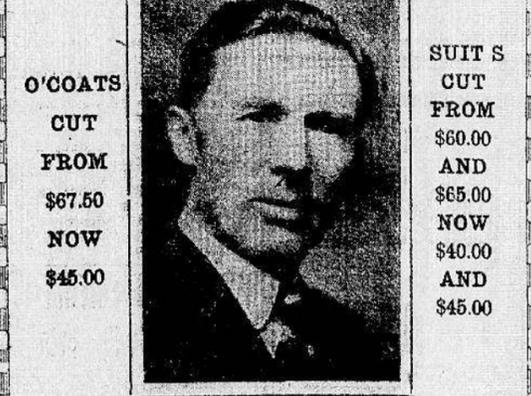

He spoke slowly, impressively. "Already the battle is on in all of the countries. In Russia, the workers are victorious. In all other countries in Europe they are making their fight for control. But the time has come when everyone must be on one side or the other. There is no longer any possibility of neutrality.

"What of Italy?" I asked him. "Italy? It is the most hopeful country in Europe outside of Russia. The workers are so strong that they are able to win constant concessions from the masters."

"Will there be an alliance between Russia and Germany?" "They can hardly come together. Their forms of property are too different. There is another thing far more likely—the union of central and western Europe against the common enemy of capitalism—the Bolshevism of Russia. Have you not noticed that already the capitalist papers of France are supporting the bankers of Germany against the Socialists of Russia? And to think that seventeen hundred thousand of the best men of France laid down their lives for that! Well, there was no other possible outcome. That is the system under which we live.

"No," he said, "the thing may be held off for a time, but in the near future, sooner or later, the issue must be settled; settled right; settled in the interest of those who do the world's work."
