

Daily Appeal. ATLANTA, GA. MONDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBER 14

THE SITUATION ABOVE. We have but little additional to add to our communication by telegraph, for publication, contents unaltered, and we are forced to rely upon the reports brought by passengers, etc., many of which are rumors so variable in their purport that it is difficult to sift out anything like a reliable summary of the condition of affairs.

Another winter campaign is just before us. And from all we know or can see at present, our troops bid fair to be more fully provided for, in the way of comfortable clothing, than they have ever yet been. This must necessarily be the case unless a few cargoes of clothing, blankets, etc., can be run in from Europe. We presume, as a matter of course, that the Government will use its best endeavors in this direction. The friends and relatives of the soldiers at home will not doubt do all in their power also, but there seems no reason to compare with what they have hitherto been.

In view of the probability of failure or inability on the part of the Government to make adequate provision in this respect, it becomes absolutely imperative upon the army, assisted by the people, to put itself in a position where it may be permitted to go into winter quarters. This can be done by driving the Rebels and the Government out of East Tennessee and beyond the mountains beyond the winter months shall be left to rot. In this event, the army will be in no position to harass or defeat the cold season, and our troops will be enabled to make themselves comfortable with the scanty supply of clothing with which they may be provided.

Active operations during the rigors of December, January and February cannot be thought of in the absence of adequate clothing, and yet our army will necessarily be forced to do this if the money should be permitted to obtain a permanent foothold this side of the mountains and the Tennessee river. This is an endeavoring to do, and we fear will do, at Chattanooga, unless the most active and energetic measures are brought to bear against him while the milder months of autumn are with us. We have the satisfaction of knowing that a magnificent outfit of clothing, or, in a few days will be, in our hands, and the country has a right to look for some speedy, positive and favorable results from its operations during the next thirty days. A heavy responsibility rests upon it, or at least with those who command it, for we feel persuaded that, if permitted, the men will do their part of the work nobly and effectively. They have the double incentive of a holy cause as well as comfortable winter quarters to fight for.

In the meantime, let the people, men, women and children, at home, be active and energetic in providing for their comfort and welfare. The most serious and critical hour of the war is upon us and it behooves every citizen, for the time being, to forget private business and private interests, and devote his whole time and energies to his country.

DECISIVE WORK WANTED. A battle on the Tennessee river line seems to be inevitable; indeed, to us of the South it is necessary to fight it, and fight it valiantly, or our position is untenable. And no other thought but that victory will prove upon the Confederate banner when the conflict does come, is entertained. But more than a local victory on the battle field, must be obtained. If no greater results are obtained, the enemy defeated, public opinion will be satisfied with nothing short of his annihilation. This victory must be unrepentant. A barren one, like many that have been won, will be less than a defeat. The general mind of the Confederacy expects that our army, our victories, will not rest on the arms and mounds of Tennessee and Kentucky hills, but will be won on the battle field of the war, and then we shall begin to see the day of independence commencing above the horizon. Let our commanders remember those words. They have the means at their disposal, to accomplish all we have indicated, and it is expected of them by the whole country.

MEETING OF EAST TENNESSEANS. The religious citizens and also the paroled exiles from East Tennessee will assemble tomorrow (Tuesday) at the conference of the Conference, to consult with each other in regard to matters affecting their section of the State of Tennessee.

MEASURES DURING WORKS. The location of the extensive machine and manufacturing shops of Messrs. V. Weber, & Co., at Macon, Ga., has added greatly to the means of the Confederacy for producing many articles of prime necessity, of which the supply is at present limited. Three driven from their location, and introduced in the possession of their business, these gentlemen exhibit an energy and determination of purpose that is commendable. See their card, published elsewhere.

THE FOLLOWING are the members of Congress elected from Tennessee, as shown by the returns at the office of the Secretary of State: First District—J. B. Hoak. Second District—W. G. Swan. Third District—A. S. Colyer. Fourth District—John F. Murray. Fifth District—E. A. Kothe. Sixth District—H. B. Hays. Seventh District—James H. Hays. Eighth District—Thomas Mason. Ninth District—J. D. Atkins. Tenth District—John V. Wright. Eleventh District—David M. Curtis.

THE REBELS STATE. The medical department of the army made a demand for all the boxes of supplies in Memphis, to be given up for hospital. The demand was promptly acceded to, and the cases and boxes of the churches were all removed, and the department suddenly discovered that they did not need them after all. The fact that they were not needed, is a strong argument in favor of the building.

THE MEMPHIS. The bill tonight in the Senate, and the extravagance of "Beauy and the Best." An arrangement has been proposed to purchase a reputation of the outrageous content that has been witnessed on several occasions, need not be feared. This must be the case of the large and fashionable audience that have nightly crowded the building.

QUICK WORK. It will be seen by a special taken from the Cincinnati Commercial, dated September 3, that the repairs to the railroad bridge at this place were completed, and trains crossed the Tennessee river on that day. We have a report to add, that the repairs were made in a remarkably short time.

IMPORTANT FROM EUROPE. Rebel Iron Rams at Liverpool.—On the 11th inst. from London, a steamer arrived with the following news: The steamship City of New York, Captain Kennedy, from New York on the 6th inst. has news highly interesting. A Quaker writer states that a memorial has been forwarded to the Government in London, asking for the detention under the foreign enticement law, of the iron rams.

The Herald has the following extracts regarding our prisoners: From the London Post, Aug. 22. The frigate Atlanta, from the Confederate States, arrived at Liverpool to repair damage. From the Liverpool Post, Aug. 21. One or two items of merchandise, which were rather valuable, were found in the Atlanta, which were reported in the London Post, and several vessels on the stocks in French yards, built on the Alabama model, are said to be for the Southern States.

A dispatch from London, of the 27th August, says: The Confederate frigate Atlanta, which was captured at Liverpool, has been taken to the stocks in the yard of Messrs. Laird, Robert & Co., in Liverpool. It is a fine vessel, and is well adapted for service. The Atlanta was captured on the 19th inst. by the British frigate Albatross, under the command of Captain Mervin. The Atlanta was taken to the stocks in the yard of Messrs. Laird, Robert & Co., in Liverpool. It is a fine vessel, and is well adapted for service.

Kind Words. How precious, yet how cheap, are kind words. Their diffusion enriches the donor and gladdens the recipient. Yet how many despise them, and neglect to utter them, and how many receive them with scorn. Such moral benefits are to be found in all classes of society—persons of high rank and low, of the most illustrious and of the most obscure. When they speak, it is with a cheer, a smile, a glow of joy, of course, has a purpose in uttering words with such special regard to the recipient. Especially is this true of the young men of the army. They are generally distinguished by a self-command and a disposition to look forward. They feel their duty, and they feel that they are in a position to do it. They are generally distinguished by a self-command and a disposition to look forward. To the Voters of Cobb, Fulton and Clayton Counties. I had thought and probably have said, that I could not be induced to be a candidate for any civil office during the war, but feeling myself called to serve in the army, and but little hope to return to the field under another month, I yield my assent. When I entered the service I determined that nothing but Providence's cause should take me out of it. I have no objection to my name being put forward as a candidate for any civil office during the war, but feeling myself called to serve in the army, and but little hope to return to the field under another month, I yield my assent.
