press has an easy task in this behalf, since in nearly all instances only the ablest and strongest men are evoked from retirement by their friends, to fill positions in public life. It would surely be a very stupid and unbecomingly petty body of gentlemen who would win a candidate from private pursuits simply that his character and intelligence might be scanned, ridiculed, contemned and disgraced.

The names of very many of the best of the city and county are appended to a paper published in another place, in which John Overton is asked to become a candidate for the Legislature. The signers of the request mean just what they say. Most of them know John Overton from his neighbor. There is not one who does not concede to him the virtue of modesty, unwavering devotion to truth, perfect integrity and excellent practical common sense. He is a man of all virtues, neither affecting simplicity nor courtesies of address. He pursues day by day, the even tenor of his way, and even in his youth the fame that was accorded to him by his neighbors and friends is to his credit and gratification.

Of incorruptible honesty. His excellent good sense is illustrated in the simplicity of his character, and he owes nothing of his worth to extraneous aids. He is a man of all virtues, neither affecting simplicity nor courtesies of address. He pursues day by day, the even tenor of his way, and even in his youth the fame that was accorded to him by his neighbors and friends is to his credit and gratification.

to be seen. The Secretary of State may be assigned to William E. Ward, the State Superintendent of Instruction may be T. B. Earle, of Washington County; Treasurer, John D. Owens, of Madison; Associate Justice Supreme Court, William Byrnes, of Independence County; Congressman-at-Large, A. H. Garland, or Colonel Robert C. Newton, of Pulaski.

COLONEL JOHN S. KEER. The Overton Gazette says that "our talented and accomplished friend, Colonel John S. Keer, is a candidate for the State Senate in the Memphis district. We hope he will be elected, for he is just the man who would be of great service to the entire State. Colonel Keer is an able lawyer, a splendid debater and gentleman of great culture. Capable, honest, and fearless in the discharge of his duty—a man of rare good judgment—the Memphis district will honor itself by sending Colonel John S. Keer to the State Senate."

A VERY sane correspondent writes: "Please correct and insert." We have no body employed for the purpose of making corrections, and a letter so carelessly written that it cannot be read, however valuable its contents, is lost to us. Moreover, the effusion devoted to such much space. Two pages of falsehoods, ordinarily, every fact that deserves publicity.

TO-MORROW at Cuba, in the Big Creek district, Colonel Doyle, Colonel John S. Keer, Jack Looey, Hugh Green, J. M. Criss, A. B. Haynes and others will address the people. A barbecue is being given by the candidates now aspiring to public positions by their friends.

COLONEL MCCOMB has agreed to iron and equip the Brookhaven and Natchez road, and for the very same reason—ever stronger in this case—should not be left to the Oxford and Memphis branch road, if the people will grade and cross the line.

HENRY WILSON is claimed by Grant's supporters as a self-made man, to which a contemporary responds: "That is not true. The Legislature of Massachusetts made Henry Wilson by changing Jeremiah Colburn's name."
