

THE NEW STATE FAILURE.
The new state convention has adjourned, and Jackson again enjoys its wonted quiet and repose. It labored like a mountain and brought forth a none. Like the king of France's army, it marched up the hill and then down again, never more to be heard of. We shall not have a new state this "load of poles." Of the forty-three counties which it was proposed should form the new state, only twenty-three were represented. Kentucky had a few scattering delegates, but none of her senators were represented as they would have been if the hearts of her people were in the movement. Ten only of the eighteen counties of Mississippi were represented, and thirteen of the eighteen of Tennessee. Even though we should give the delegates present credit for being direct representatives of the people of their counties, and we don't believe they all were—even then they could be regarded as representing half the whole number concerned. It will thus be seen that the new movement is a failure. The people do not favor it. Indeed, they are opposed to it. They know it would cost them not less than five million dollars to set the machinery of the new government going. Having already a heavier tax burden than they ought to be called on to bear, they don't want any more, and won't if they can help themselves. As they can in this instance, by refusing consent to the new state movement, they will, instead of voting for, vote against it. We repeat, then, the new state movement is dead. The appeal has given it and its aiders and abettors plenty of sea-room, and has assisted them in securing public attention by the presentation of the most favorable and plausible statistics, but all would not do, the people are against it. That is enough. It has been wrecked, and has gone down to the land, where so many wild political schemes have preceded it. The new state movement is dead.

NEW YORK NEWS.
The Price of Coal—Butterfield's Defeat—Another Custom-House Swindle—British Identity—The Modes to be Shot, Etc.
New York, July 30.—Edward Barok & Co., importers of glassware, whose books were examined by the custom officers, and against whom a writ has been issued to recover for alleged violations of the revenue laws, assert that all the violations of law were committed by one person, who was charged with the business here during the absence of the firm in Europe, that while he altered the charges on the goods, he kept proper entries in the books of the firm, and that when a sufficient number of statements had been placed in the hands of a good case against the firm, he voluntarily retired from their employ, having previously arranged with the custom officer to get one-fourth of the amount recovered from the firm by compromise or conviction.
