

MEMPHIS APPEAL

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1875.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

We understand that another effort will be made to-morrow in the convention called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for mayor, to abrogate the two-thirds rule. The effort will not doubt fail. For nearly forty years this rule has been scrupulously observed by the Democratic party, and having long triumphed under its operation there can be nothing gained by discarding it. The Democracy of Shelby county have invariably adopted the two-thirds rule. Our State and district conventions never resort to the majority rule in selecting candidates. The first resolution passed by the district convention that nominated Mr. Kiddle for congress, at Charleston, a few days since, required two-thirds of all the votes cast necessary to a choice. Having no political aspirations, no candidate for mayor, and no other desire but to promote the public good and to secure the harmony of the party, we insist on the adoption of the two-thirds rule to-morrow. Like most long established precedents, the two-thirds rule is the offspring of common sense, and the fact that its wisdom has so often been emphasized by party conventions, and that it has been maintained as a cardinal feature in the organization of the only party in American politics whose existence has not proven ephemeral, is at least cogent, if not conclusive in its defense. The logic of the two-thirds rule is palpable; candidates or measures having the prestige of two-thirds of a convention almost necessarily embody and symbolize the best attainable expression of the will of the people. The next most desirable result is to obtain such action as will most closely approximate unanimity. The voice of a mere majority is little better, as a pledge of harmony in a party, than that of a plurality. A two-thirds majority, in nineteen cases out of twenty, heals antagonisms and inspires confidence and enthusiasm. A meager majority, so often attainable by accident, and so easily and tamably given by pretext, if not by justification, for boistering and revolt. The choice of a two-thirds majority is nearly always accepted. He who cannot secure two-thirds of his party in a nominating convention cannot harmonize his party, as this hostility shows that there are insuperable objections. Of course, combinations and bargains are often the means by which a two-thirds majority is obtained; but how much more frequently are these agencies which give a meager majority in a nominating convention. The operations of the two-thirds rule in our elections last year secured the nomination of good men, and it ought to be observed in the convention to-morrow. Its obligation would be an innovation upon a time-honored custom of the Democratic party, and create great dissatisfaction.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

MEMPHIS APPEAL

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1875.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

We understand that another effort will be made to-morrow in the convention called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for mayor, to abrogate the two-thirds rule. The effort will not doubt fail. For nearly forty years this rule has been scrupulously observed by the Democratic party, and having long triumphed under its operation there can be nothing gained by discarding it. The Democracy of Shelby county have invariably adopted the two-thirds rule. Our State and district conventions never resort to the majority rule in selecting candidates. The first resolution passed by the district convention that nominated Mr. Kiddle for congress, at Charleston, a few days since, required two-thirds of all the votes cast necessary to a choice. Having no political aspirations, no candidate for mayor, and no other desire but to promote the public good and to secure the harmony of the party, we insist on the adoption of the two-thirds rule to-morrow. Like most long established precedents, the two-thirds rule is the offspring of common sense, and the fact that its wisdom has so often been emphasized by party conventions, and that it has been maintained as a cardinal feature in the organization of the only party in American politics whose existence has not proven ephemeral, is at least cogent, if not conclusive in its defense. The logic of the two-thirds rule is palpable; candidates or measures having the prestige of two-thirds of a convention almost necessarily embody and symbolize the best attainable expression of the will of the people. The next most desirable result is to obtain such action as will most closely approximate unanimity. The voice of a mere majority is little better, as a pledge of harmony in a party, than that of a plurality. A two-thirds majority, in nineteen cases out of twenty, heals antagonisms and inspires confidence and enthusiasm. A meager majority, so often attainable by accident, and so easily and tamably given by pretext, if not by justification, for boistering and revolt. The choice of a two-thirds majority is nearly always accepted. He who cannot secure two-thirds of his party in a nominating convention cannot harmonize his party, as this hostility shows that there are insuperable objections. Of course, combinations and bargains are often the means by which a two-thirds majority is obtained; but how much more frequently are these agencies which give a meager majority in a nominating convention. The operations of the two-thirds rule in our elections last year secured the nomination of good men, and it ought to be observed in the convention to-morrow. Its obligation would be an innovation upon a time-honored custom of the Democratic party, and create great dissatisfaction.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

MEMPHIS APPEAL

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1875.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

We understand that another effort will be made to-morrow in the convention called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for mayor, to abrogate the two-thirds rule. The effort will not doubt fail. For nearly forty years this rule has been scrupulously observed by the Democratic party, and having long triumphed under its operation there can be nothing gained by discarding it. The Democracy of Shelby county have invariably adopted the two-thirds rule. Our State and district conventions never resort to the majority rule in selecting candidates. The first resolution passed by the district convention that nominated Mr. Kiddle for congress, at Charleston, a few days since, required two-thirds of all the votes cast necessary to a choice. Having no political aspirations, no candidate for mayor, and no other desire but to promote the public good and to secure the harmony of the party, we insist on the adoption of the two-thirds rule to-morrow. Like most long established precedents, the two-thirds rule is the offspring of common sense, and the fact that its wisdom has so often been emphasized by party conventions, and that it has been maintained as a cardinal feature in the organization of the only party in American politics whose existence has not proven ephemeral, is at least cogent, if not conclusive in its defense. The logic of the two-thirds rule is palpable; candidates or measures having the prestige of two-thirds of a convention almost necessarily embody and symbolize the best attainable expression of the will of the people. The next most desirable result is to obtain such action as will most closely approximate unanimity. The voice of a mere majority is little better, as a pledge of harmony in a party, than that of a plurality. A two-thirds majority, in nineteen cases out of twenty, heals antagonisms and inspires confidence and enthusiasm. A meager majority, so often attainable by accident, and so easily and tamably given by pretext, if not by justification, for boistering and revolt. The choice of a two-thirds majority is nearly always accepted. He who cannot secure two-thirds of his party in a nominating convention cannot harmonize his party, as this hostility shows that there are insuperable objections. Of course, combinations and bargains are often the means by which a two-thirds majority is obtained; but how much more frequently are these agencies which give a meager majority in a nominating convention. The operations of the two-thirds rule in our elections last year secured the nomination of good men, and it ought to be observed in the convention to-morrow. Its obligation would be an innovation upon a time-honored custom of the Democratic party, and create great dissatisfaction.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

MEMPHIS APPEAL

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1875.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

We understand that another effort will be made to-morrow in the convention called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for mayor, to abrogate the two-thirds rule. The effort will not doubt fail. For nearly forty years this rule has been scrupulously observed by the Democratic party, and having long triumphed under its operation there can be nothing gained by discarding it. The Democracy of Shelby county have invariably adopted the two-thirds rule. Our State and district conventions never resort to the majority rule in selecting candidates. The first resolution passed by the district convention that nominated Mr. Kiddle for congress, at Charleston, a few days since, required two-thirds of all the votes cast necessary to a choice. Having no political aspirations, no candidate for mayor, and no other desire but to promote the public good and to secure the harmony of the party, we insist on the adoption of the two-thirds rule to-morrow. Like most long established precedents, the two-thirds rule is the offspring of common sense, and the fact that its wisdom has so often been emphasized by party conventions, and that it has been maintained as a cardinal feature in the organization of the only party in American politics whose existence has not proven ephemeral, is at least cogent, if not conclusive in its defense. The logic of the two-thirds rule is palpable; candidates or measures having the prestige of two-thirds of a convention almost necessarily embody and symbolize the best attainable expression of the will of the people. The next most desirable result is to obtain such action as will most closely approximate unanimity. The voice of a mere majority is little better, as a pledge of harmony in a party, than that of a plurality. A two-thirds majority, in nineteen cases out of twenty, heals antagonisms and inspires confidence and enthusiasm. A meager majority, so often attainable by accident, and so easily and tamably given by pretext, if not by justification, for boistering and revolt. The choice of a two-thirds majority is nearly always accepted. He who cannot secure two-thirds of his party in a nominating convention cannot harmonize his party, as this hostility shows that there are insuperable objections. Of course, combinations and bargains are often the means by which a two-thirds majority is obtained; but how much more frequently are these agencies which give a meager majority in a nominating convention. The operations of the two-thirds rule in our elections last year secured the nomination of good men, and it ought to be observed in the convention to-morrow. Its obligation would be an innovation upon a time-honored custom of the Democratic party, and create great dissatisfaction.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

Holiday Goods! Holiday Goods!

DRY GOODS FOR THE HOLIDAYS! AT LOW PRICES

B. LOWENSTEIN & BROS.

GREATER INDUCEMENTS! TO INTENDING PURCHASERS than ever placed before them in Memphis in the way of CHEAP GOODS. We will sell

BLACK GROS GRAIN SILKS

AT 90c, 95c, $1, $1 10, $1 20, $1 30, $1 45, $1 65, $1 95, $2 20, $2 45, $2 70, $2 95.

COLORED SILKS!

In all the DARK CLOTH SHADES, as well as in the lightest and most delicate tints.

DRESS GOODS! DRESS GOODS!

Ordered expressly for the Holiday Trade, at prices unprecedentedly low.

FURS! FURS! FURS!

In endless variety and at prices to suit the times.

BLANKETS, COVERLETS,

Prints, Bleached and Brown Shirtings and Sheetings, Tickings, Plaids, Checks, Cassimeres, Jeans, Linsey, Wool Flannels, Canton Flannels, Waterproof Cloaks, Boots, Shoes and Hats.

B. LOWENSTEIN & BROS.

242, 244 AND 246 MAIN STREET, COR. JEFFERSON.

AMES, BEATTIE & CO., FURNITURE CARPETS,

Wholesale and Retail at Lowest Prices.

B. J. SEMMES & CO.

297 MAIN STREET, IMPORTERS OF BASS ALE, HAVANA & DOMESTIC CIGARS

OLD SCOTCH WHISKIES,

Which we are offering at lower prices than the compound market. Always on hand.

A FULL LINE OF LOW-GRADE WHISKIES, Etc.

PEARCE, SUGGS & CO., WHOLESALE GROCERS, COTTON FACTORS

Commission Merchants. 255 Front St., Memphis, Tenn.

DRS. A. WESSON & SONS, SURGEON DENTISTS,

No. 248 Main Street, Memphis, Tenn.

Homes for All.

SUBSCRIBE TO THE SECOND SERIES OF STOCK

WORKINGMEN'S Building and Loan Association.

47 Broad St., New York.

T. B. FARNSWORTH, YOUNG & HALSEY, ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW,

Office—300 Front St. Irring Block - - - Memphis, Tenn.

Phelan & Murphy

FIRE AND MARINE

U.S. AGENTS

NO. 5 MADISON ST. MEMPHIS, TENN.

REPRESENTING—Royal Canadian Fire Ins. Co. of Montreal

CANADIAN, $6,000,000.

FIRE ASSOCIATION, PHILADELPHIA, ASSETS, $3,100,000.

GLOBE, - - - - OF CHICAGO, ASSETS, $774,562.

FRANKLIN, - - - OF ST. LOUIS, ASSETS, $284,990.

FRANKLAND, - - OF KNOXVILLE, CAPITAL, $100,000.

COTTON FACTORS

COCHRAN, GROBE & CO.

320 FRONT STREET, MEMPHIS, TENN.

THE DAILY APPEAL

25 Cents Per Week

PATENTS

ADVICE FREE

WILCOX & GIBBS

SEWING MACHINES

LOUISVILLE & NASHVILLE GREAT SOUTHERN RAILROAD

Express train leaves daily except

T. B. MCOU, ATTORNEY AT LAW,

Room No. 21, Planters Ins. Building,

FLAHERTY & SULLIVAN,

317 and 319 Second Street,

MARRIAGE GUIDE

AND BOOK OF NATURE

PEOPLES Insurance Comp'y

OF MEMPHIS, TENN.

OFFICE—16 MADISON ST.

CAPITAL, $400,000.00.

MARCUS JONES,

DEALER IN WALL PAPER and WINDOW SHADES

ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE

THE LIBRARY AND OFFICE FURNITURE

of the late John Somerville, deceased, will be sold, at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, at the auction

room of W. H. H. & Co., 20 Second Street,

Memphis, Tennessee, within lawful hours,

on the 6th day of January, 1876,

by the undersigned, H. C. WALKER, Adm'r.

MEMPHIS APPEAL

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 15, 1875.

THE TWO-THIRDS RULE.

We understand that another effort will be made to-morrow in the convention called for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for mayor, to abrogate the two-thirds rule. The effort will not doubt fail. For nearly forty years this rule has been scrupulously observed by the Democratic party, and having long triumphed under its operation there can be nothing gained by discarding it. The Democracy of Shelby county have invariably adopted the two-thirds rule. Our State and district conventions never resort to the majority rule in selecting candidates. The first resolution passed by the district convention that nominated Mr. Kiddle for congress, at Charleston, a few days since, required two-thirds of all the votes cast necessary to a choice. Having no political aspirations, no candidate for mayor, and no other desire but to promote the public good and to secure the harmony of the party, we insist on the adoption of the two-thirds rule to-morrow. Like most long established precedents, the two-thirds rule is the offspring of common sense, and the fact that its wisdom has so often been emphasized by party conventions, and that it has been maintained as a cardinal feature in the organization of the only party in American politics whose existence has not proven ephemeral, is at least cogent, if not conclusive in its defense. The logic of the two-thirds rule is palpable; candidates or measures having the prestige of two-thirds of a convention almost necessarily embody and symbolize the best attainable expression of the will of the people. The next most desirable result is to obtain such action as will most closely approximate unanimity. The voice of a mere majority is little better, as a pledge of harmony in a party, than that of a plurality. A two-thirds majority, in nineteen cases out of twenty, heals antagonisms and inspires confidence and enthusiasm. A meager majority, so often attainable by accident, and so easily and tamably given by pretext, if not by justification, for boistering and revolt. The choice of a two-thirds majority is nearly always accepted. He who cannot secure two-thirds of his party in a nominating convention cannot harmonize his party, as this hostility shows that there are insuperable objections. Of course, combinations and bargains are often the means by which a two-thirds majority is obtained; but how much more frequently are these agencies which give a meager majority in a nominating convention. The operations of the two-thirds rule in our elections last year secured the nomination of good men, and it ought to be observed in the convention to-morrow. Its obligation would be an innovation upon a time-honored custom of the Democratic party, and create great dissatisfaction.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

THE CONVENTION TOMORROW.

We publish this morning's list of delegates elected to the nominating convention which convenes at the Exposition building to-morrow. In looking over the list the reader will recognize many of our best citizens. It is to be hoped the delegates, one and all, will put aside all minor considerations, and set themselves at work to secure a candidate for mayor who, when elected, will do something toward exciting the interest of more than ordinary ability is required, or ruin is inevitable. The Democratic party, which meets in convention to-morrow, has within its ranks just such men as the crisis demands, and if the delegates elected yesterday will not betray the confidence imposed in them, they will present a candidate upon whom all can unite. A man never stained by the dishonor of peculation in office. The result of the pending election for mayor depends solely and entirely on the action of the convention to-morrow. If it should nominate a true Democrat of known ability, popularity and unimpeachable integrity—a man not only above reproach as a Democrat, but as a citizen, his election in the city would be the nomination of an objectionable man would entail defeat and leave the city in the hands of the men who have ruled the city for six years and cared nothing about its finances, only so far as it enabled them to speculate in city bonds or securities. We appeal to the delegates elected in the name of the Democratic party and the great interests of Memphis to nominate a man against whom no objections can be raised, and who will unite all the opposition to Radicalism and all good citizens who are anxious to see Memphis extricated from her financial troubles so long neglected by incompetent officials.

PUBLIC SALE

OF THE MEMPHIS NAVY-YARD

80 LOTS & SUBDIVISIONS

WEDNESDAY, JAN. 12, 1876.

IN OBEEDIENCE TO A DECREE OF THE CHANCERY COURT OF THE STATE OF TENNESSEE, in and for the County of Shelby, do I, the undersigned, Sheriff of said County, hereby give notice that I will sell at public auction, on Wednesday, January 12, 1876, at 11 o'clock a.m., the following described premises, to-wit: A certain lot of land, situated in the city of Memphis, Tennessee, and bounded as follows: On the north by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; on the east by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; on the south by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; and on the west by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased. The premises are situated in the city of Memphis, Tennessee, and are bounded as follows: On the north by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; on the east by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; on the south by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; and on the west by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased. The premises are situated in the city of Memphis, Tennessee, and are bounded as follows: On the north by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; on the east by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; on the south by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased; and on the west by the lot of land owned by the late John A. Adams, deceased.

ELECTION OF DIRECTORS.

UNION AND PLANTERS BANK OF MEMPHIS, TENN., DECEMBER 15, 1875.

STOCKHOLDERS are hereby notified that an election will be held on Monday, January 11, 1876, for the purpose of electing fifteen directors for the year 1876.

There are some Cotton Merchants who in their young days must have ridden the mule to mill with corn in one end of the sack and rocks or sand in the other. Those merchants say this NEW THING—

THE COTTON CLEARER

AT THE MEMPHIS COTTON GINS,

Injure the Cotton. Now, I will pay

$100

For one ounce of Cotton that can produce the Cleaner has Injured. On the other hand, I can produce cottons who have quit

the above class of merchants