erate the approaching return of "good times." With a people that can deny themselves to save, and with a country that abounds in natural resources, the result is sure, and recuperation is making vast strides toward the desired consummation.

THE NEW YORK TRIBUNE says that unless the Republicans cut loose "from the administration," so completely that they may as well be "dead," they are scarcely likely to find "the returns satisfactory." If they "throw it" to the party from over "the other side," they are scarcely likely to find "the returns satisfactory."

GOVERNOR JEWELL, as a recompense for President Grant's ill treatment of him, was given a very flattering reception at New Haven and Hartford, on the twentieth. The people turned out, irrespective of party, to testify, as their spokesman, Hon. Henry C. Robinson said, "to the fact that he had faithfully carried out his promise to conduct his department at Washington on business principles, and to applaud his resistance of entreaties and threats of bad men and his efforts in the cause of peace, reform, and the good of the nation."

A DISPATCH to the Chicago Times says it is positively known that the Republican State committee of Indiana has telegraphed to Ex-Commissioner Pratt, and tendered him the Republican nomination for governor of that State. At any rate he was asked on Saturday whether he would accept the nomination for governor, in the case of the removal of Orth could be procured.

THE Springfield (Mass.) Republican makes this confession in regard to the "reform": "There was no taking of trust in his case. Under a Grant, in a cabinet containing a Belknap and a Robeson, he had made his name the synonym of reform. He had shown himself a man of no common quality of public honesty—the ugly sort that hurls thieves and makes enemies and brings strong passages to Governor Tilden's door, and the name of the signers of the address in speeches made at the time, confessed, that it plainly pointed to two men in either party as reformers in fact as well as in name—Tilden and Bird; and that since the Republican party threw over the one, and so signified its opposition to reform, there is nothing left the honest men of the country to do but support Tilden, the only real reformer, and the only statesman who has a record that affords a substantial basis for a belief that he has the courage and ability to enforce the reforms needed to accomplish the purification of the government."

THE Herald Washington correspondent thinks that Governor Tilden has so far delayed his letter of acceptance awaiting the adjournment of congress, in order to cover the acts of the session. Whether this be or not, we have no means of knowing, since the governor keeps his own counsel; but of one thing we are certain, and that is that it will cover everything important to be covered.

returning board, but declined to serve, believing that if he was elected the balance of the ticket was in. In that election he was elected by a large majority, from the Republicans, which his friends claim he can get again. Whoever is the party manager, and the support of the party, the State central committee is constantly receiving information from the parishes of colored Conservatives, and the number of colored Conservatives is one numbering three hundred.
