WEDDINGS

HOUSTON-D'AURIA.

The wedding of Miss Gemma Alkazoff d'Auria and Dr. Percy Hazen Houston will take place tonight at 8 o'clock, at the home of the bride, Miss d'Auria, the daughter of Captain and Mrs. Luit d'Auria, of 208 St. Mark's square, and a granddaughter of Brigadier General Robert, who is the author of Robert's "Rules of Order on Parliamentary Law." Doctor Houston is professor of literature in the University of Texas.

Miss d'Auria, who will be given in marriage by her father, will wear a gown of soft white satin, made with a bouance and overskirt of duchess lace. The bodice is finished at the neck and sleeves with duchess lace, and is ornamented with pearls. Her veil will be made of tulle, edged with pearls, and will be arranged over her hair under a tiny cap of duchess lace, which will be fastened with diamonds and pearls. She will carry a bouquet of lilies of the valley and bride roses.

Miss Helen Robert d'Auria, a sister of the bride, will act as maid of honor; she will wear a stunning frock of pale blue taffeta, heavily embroidered in pearls, and will carry two roses.

The little flower girls will be Miss Priscilla Alden Redgrave and Miss Corinne Best Pennoyer; they will wear white net frocks, and will carry small baskets of white and pink rosebuds. Doctor Houston will be attended by Dr. W. H. Clinton Redgrave, Jr., as best man.

The ceremony, which will be performed by the Rev. Dr. George Hooper Forgas, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will be followed by a large reception, after which the bride and bridegroom will leave for a wedding trip. They will live in Austin, Texas. The bride of today has achieved great merit as a dancer of the athletic. She appeared last winter in several dances at a number of charitable affairs.

Guests will attend the wedding from New York, Baltimore and Boston. Notable among them will be Brigadier General Robert and Commander Redgrave, T. S. N., the former grandfather and the latter an uncle of the bride.

The ceremony will take place at 7 o'clock, after which the young couple will leave on a short tour.

HOFFMAN-FAHR

The wedding of Miss Nellie Pore Fahre, daughter of Mr. William Cheney Pore, of 21 E. 15th avenue, Northboro, to Dr. Hjalmar Crawford Hoffman will take place this evening at 8 o'clock at the residence, 287 Chestnut street. The ceremony will be a very quiet affair and will be witnessed only by the immediate families of the bride and bridegroom.

Miss Fahre, who will be given in marriage by her father, Mr. William Cheney Pore, will wear a gown of soft white chiffon, which is elaborately draped over an underdress of satin. The bodice of the gown is finished with soft folds of rare lace at the open neck and sleeves. Miss Fahre will not wear a veil or any ornament in her hair.

Miss Helen Fahre, a sister of the bride, will act as flower girl and will be daintily gowned in white. Dr. Hoffman will have for best man his brother, H. Wilson Hoffman, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. George Clarke Teck, of Baltimore.

THE DRAMA

THEATRICAL BAEBECKER

HELEN WARE

Will appear in "The Revolt," at the Adelphi next week.

MURDER AND MYSTERY A CRIMINAL HISTORY

John Mason in Tense Melodrama That Makes One Content With Being Humble and Honest and Free of a Past.

Put an Apache in evening clothes and he will still remain an Apache. The same thing applies to Patagonians, white Eskimos and Mexican bandits. Clothes do not make the man, nor Bellevue-Stratford settings alter inherent table manners. Elegantly staged, luxuriously upholstered, presented by an excellent cast, Owen Davis' play, "Drugged," which opened at the Broad Street Theatre last night, with John Mason in the title role, nevertheless remains unadulterated melodrama of the old-fashioned established type, a bit more polished, more technically and tersely constructed, but thrilling, horrifying and hair-raising as of old. Despite the rather sneering superiority with which this sort of melodrama is usually regarded, "Drugged" is a play which meets every requirement for an evening's engrossing entertainment, and while life is not thus any more than it is like the romances of Robert Chambers and Marie Corelli, as a play "Drugged" is admirably, even admirably, handled, and successful in its designed purpose. Suspense is succeeded by suspense, thrill follows thrill, and by the end of the third act you will find yourself gripping the arms of your seat, leaning forward breathlessly and experiencing goose-cumps around your hair-follicles, if you are not bald. The close of that third act is climactic, gripping, the apogee of gory and gruesome situations.

Young John Dexter, acted by Frank Thomas, is eliciting out a telegraphic message in code to beautiful Sylvia Cresson, Nan Campbell, the curtain rises upon the magnificent interior of the home of the great John Dexter, railroad magnate, candidate to Congress, respected citizen. Young Dexter uses the telegraphic device to tell Sylvia he loves her, and, as one desires, they fall into each other's arms. An auspicious opening. Enter John Dexter, consummately portrayed by John Mason, who approves of the match, although with obvious restraint. Next enters Mrs. Dexter, tall, slim, with touches of tragic green in her costume, who stalks across the room like a haunted Electra. We see Mrs. Dexter's face as she glances wildly and heavily rimmed. She trembles violently. When she hears of the betrothal she insists upon speaking to the girl alone—she was the girl's mother's dearest friend; she loves her son. By these cryptic statements we know there's a skeleton dangling somewhere about in that tapestried, well-lit establishment, Amelia Gardner, as the morphia-obsessed wife, terrified by her husband's hidden past, creates the necessary psychic atmosphere of tragedy and brooding disaster. Despite her warnings, the girl decides she will continue to love and to marry Jack whatever takes, whereupon we like that girl.

CONSIDER MIDDLE CLASS IN DOWNTOWN PLANS

Occupants of Two-story Houses Not to Suffer Through Plans for Development in South Philadelphia.

It is the intention of the Bureau of Surveys, in its comprehensive plans for the development of South Philadelphia, to consider first of all the comfort and convenience of the middle class population. This fact was brought out yesterday at a hearing upon plans for the improvement of that section of the city, held in the Bureau of Surveys, City Hall. When the plans for the repaving, widening and extension of streets and the opening of new streets were outlined to numerous property owners from South Philadelphia, it was apparent they would have little to say, save that ever persons forced to occupy tenement houses.

Mrs. Mary E. Newman, George J. Brown, Frederick Peine, Connelton James E. Lannon and several other property owners declared the plans should be so constructed that the residents of two-story houses would enjoy adequate yard space. In reply to these objections, Principal Assistant Engineer George E. Dabney, who presided, declared it was the intention of the bureau to consider the needs of the middle class population above all others.

The matter of a short route to Fairmount Park from Lehigh Island will be discussed at a hearing next month.

The question of repaving Gristed avenue, Chestnut Hill, caused great discussion between former Register of Wills Walter E. Rex, Merriam Thomas Troth and Henry S. Laughlin, a member of the firm of Jones & Laughlin. Mr. Rex and Mrs. Troth vigorously opposed the idea of repaving the street, upon the ground that it would set it down some three feet. Mr. Rex declared it would cause a cut to at least 20 feet and would cause him much personal inconvenience. Mr. Laughlin declared the street was badly in need of repaving and that the majority of the residents dwelling there were in favor of it. It was intimated that Mr. Rex had also been in favor of it until he was advised by engineers that it would be necessary to cause a deep cut in order to complete the work.

ADELPHI—"Help Wanted," comedy drama, bearing a "stop, look and listen" warning to young women venturing into the dangerous world of modern business.

BROAD—"Drugged," melodrama by Owen Davis, starring John Mason. Review below.

CHESTNUT STREET OPERA HOUSE—"Cabrera," one of the most spectacular moving-picture dramas ever presented, showing a cataclysmic volcanic eruption, the destruction of a city and the annihilation of a fleet of men.

FORREST—"Ziegfeld Follies," Mirth for the masses.

GARRICK—"Adele," French operetta, charmingly romantic, with entrancing music and irresistible Peggy Wood.

WALNUT—"Siberia," thrilling as it was 23 years ago, depicting the terrific adventures and cruel sufferings of two girls in Siberia.

MEDICAL PROFESSION IN NEW LOCAL COLONY

Several Hundred Physicians and Surgeons Move West of Shopping District, Increased Central Rents Cause.

A new medical centre of the country has developed in Chestnut, Spruce, Walnut and Pine streets, from Seventeenth street to 22d street.

In some blocks there are from 15 to 60 offices of physicians and surgeons, many of them sharing dwelling houses which have been converted for office use.

Among the physicians and surgeons who have moved into the new districts from other sections are Philadelphia practitioners who have world-wide reputations.

Nearly every block in Walnut and Spruce streets toward the western end, this side of the Schuylkill River, has offices of three or four physicians. In some ten or twelve names of physicians are on the doorplates.

Chestnut street has many offices of physicians, but it is not so crowded with them as Spruce, Walnut, and Pine streets. Chestnut street is too given to shops to become popular with the men of the medical profession, it is said.

More than 200 physicians and surgeons have offices on Chestnut, Spruce, Pine and Locust streets from Seventeenth to 22d street. They have been followed by the dentists and ophthalmologists and by the offices of surgical supply and medical companies.

Professional nurses, moving in the wake of the physicians, have rented rooms and established their directories in the new medical section.

Many physicians have purchased properties in the district, and it is evidently their opinion that offices of their profession have moved as far westward as they will go.

The Professional Building, on Chestnut street near Nineteenth street, houses nearly a hundred physicians and representatives of supply houses dealing in drugs and surgical instruments.

Physicians themselves explain the westward movement of their offices with the statement that central rents were increasing and that offices just outside the shopping district were more desirable than those in the centre of the city.

One reason advanced for the westward march of the physicians and business dependent on the medical profession is that physicians desire to locate within the neighborhood of the College for Physicians and Surgeons at 22d and Locust streets.

SUFFRAGISTS TO AID RED CROSS

Philadelphia's County Society Will Embark in Campaign.

The Philadelphia County Woman's Suffrage Society has embarked upon a campaign to aid the Red Cross cause. Francis E. Reeves, treasurer of the Red Cross, has authorized the society to receive contributions, and a booth will be opened at the Woman's Suffrage party shop at 174 Chestnut street.

Mrs. J. D. Thomas, president of the Philadelphia County Society, will be in charge of this booth. Contributions may be sent to Mrs. Thomas either at her home, 1125 Spruce street, or at the Chestnut street address.

The suffragists of this city are to have a booth at the Safety Carnival of the Home and School League, to be held during the latter part of this month in Convention Hall. Posters and pamphlets will be displayed showing that giving the vote to women would be a "safety" device applied to politics.

Prizes For School Children

Prizes for the best answers in a series of questions regarding the moral and physical welfare of boys and girls will be awarded to public school pupils at the Carnival of Safety to be given by the Home and School League of this city, beginning September 25. Dr. John H. Stecher, associate Superintendent of schools, has compiled a set of ten questions which have been sent to every primary and secondary school in the city. They are of such nature as to test the knowledge of pupils regarding means and methods of safeguarding boys and girls from things which endanger their health, lives, minds, morals and usefulness as citizens.

AMUSEMENTS.
