EARLY LOVE A FROST—BLIGHTS WOMEN'S LIVES

Don't Fall in Love or Marry Early, Advises Peggy Wood, Operetta Prima Donna at 22, Who Has Never, Never Been in Love.

A winsome maid, a demure, a pretty maid—a maid with cheeks as lustrous as the roseate shells of the sea, with provocative—oh, tantalizing—lips, laughing, dancing, mischievous eyes and riotously curling brown hair. A maid in slummy gray, pink roses in her bodice, wearing a comely gray bonnet with pink roses on it. Captivating, fascinating—only 22! And never in love!

"Really—truly," declared Peggy Wood, the star of "Adele," that charming French operetta playing at the Garrick. "I've never, never been in love. I don't want to fall in love. And I won't fall in love. There! You see, I have serious ideas on the matter of girls falling in love. It's a bad thing to do, a very, very bad thing! Why, the trouble with most women—the reason they never develop any personality, or assert themselves in life, or create a career—is just this: They let themselves fall in love too soon. Why, love to a very young girl is like a frost—it destroys all the promising buds of life."

Miss Wood is perhaps the youngest prima donna of musical comedy in this country, and, while only 22, has played in "Naughty Marietta," "The Lady and the Slipper," "The Maid Cap Duchess" and other successes. Miss Wood's daughter of Eugene Wood, the celebrated author of "Rock House," is as unique in her never having had a romance as she is beautiful, enchanting. It was in her dressing room last evening. She had just finished making up for her part. Not that she needed much make-up—indeed, no, for her complexion is clear as the dawn, radiant, rosy. Gently she patted her face with a powder puff, here and there. Out on the stage Wilhelmina Merkel was singing the opening number, outside of Miss Wood's dressing room, hanging with bouffant spangled things and redolent of subtle perfume, the "cast" moved to and fro. Miss Wood rose, and her maid—French-Algerian in Louisiana disguise—gave the finishing touches to her dress. Her aunt, Miss Wood's companion and chaperone, solicitously separated the curls of her hair.

"I'm a serious person," declared Miss Wood. "I believe in a future for women, in their doing great work in the world. I'm also a Socialist. A cry—whether of amusement or dismay—arose from the and lounging James Redmond, who plays the part of Robert Frierich, in love with "Adele." Mr. Redmond is an Englishman with Mona Lisa hands.

"It's true!" Miss Wood's eyes flashed. "I'm serious. Young women should absolutely not permit themselves to fall in love. They should let young men fall in love with them—ah, yes! That's great fun! It gives experience! Girls need experience! They should let all the young men fall in love with them, they can—tease them, play with them, but hold them off and study them. Ah, study them! Verily the proper study for womanhood is man!"

Peggy Wood made an inimitable gesture. "Peggy has always had these ideas ever since she was a child," interpolated her aunt. "I assure you she is quite serious. She has had many beaux—many, indeed! But she has kept herself quite remote."

"Surely!" exclaimed Miss Wood. "I let them do all the feeling and suffer emotional isn't that wise? It's what all girls should do! If I were advising girls I'd tell them to flirt and coquette and be just, well, absolutely as mischievous as can be! And ever study men! They can use the knowledge they acquire to advantage later. You see, I don't believe in early marriage, girls should wait until they are mature before they marry. And they should create their career first."

"What happens when a girl lets herself fall in love? She just gets engrossed in a man when she should be concentrating in her own development. She is carried away by a gamut of feelings, suffers and all that, and is squandered up. Then, too, her personality is crushed, obliterated. It is that of the man she loves. Consider women who marry early—the Spanish and German women, for example. What great women have emerged from Spain and Germany—very few; very few! I can think of none! What have the women done in these countries? Nothing! They are household drudges. They are dominated by an arrogant husband who uses what he pleases. As a class they have lost all personality. They are amiable, amiable, sensitive, compliant, pitiful."

"Yes, I'm a suffragist. I believe in the development of women and women's sharing in the work of the world. Falling in love early and early marriage cannot but blight a woman's future life. Young women should seek self-expression in work or some form of art. They should let romance go by until they have succeeded and established themselves. Then let them fall in love and marry if they want to. After all, love is an inspiring thing, and one's supreme expression in art comes after some great emotional experience. But I want to distinguish between the callow calf love of life's April and the intelligent and mature passion of hum!—after twenty-two!" Miss Wood was interrupted. A French maid entered.

"Georgia Caine's run out of her face enamel. May we borrow yours?" "Take it!" commented Miss Wood's dusky maid. "Strange how some folks seem to drink up face wash."

Miss Wood continued: "Supposing I should have already married. During the past years I've been developing. I've been four years on the stage. I've had to study hard, and I've improved as I worked. I expect to improve further. If I had married the man might have developed ahead of me—oh, that's quite possible! That would have been terrible. Yet, that's what invariably happens with too early marriages—then divorce! I believe in marriage being permanent. Yes, one great love in a lifetime—that only is worth while. It's worth waiting for. Women should steel their hearts to all romance until they are perfectly grown mentally—then let the irresistible come!"

"With the evolution of women and their demand for expression—manifested in one phase by the suffrage movement—women are becoming more intelligent in matters of romance. They're not going to give themselves to silly half-love affairs and let their hearts be dragged in the dust. Nor are they going to submerge their personalities in early marriage. We're getting away from the Spanish-German idea, thank heavens! Think of me presiding over a cook stove, the laundry, preparing weiner schnitzel for 'my man' and rearing a family of children! A typical complacent 'frau' independence—self-expression—an individual career in life! That is what all women should strive for! Live for! Wait for! And for this light love must go by."

"Which is most important, marriage or an artistic career? To me, an artistic career! Success in my work means more to me than marriage can, than being a mother can. I devote all my attention, my heart and my soul to my work, and the increasing mastery of my art is the most gratifying thing in life to me. "At my age I'd really be afraid to marry—afraid of how I'd regard the man, or he me, a few years later. Early marriage is dangerous—perilous! As for marriage later—I'm not even considering it! I've never been in love—I repeat I've no intention of marrying. And I don't want to marry! Of course," winsome "Adele" smiled bewitchingly, "it is proverbial that women change their minds!"

"Miss Wood!" it was the call boy.
