AT THE COUNTRY CLUBS

Tennis and Golf Tournaments at Various Clubs Lure Devotees of These Sports.

Any one interested in suburban club affairs might be inclined to think that a spirit of rivalry pervades the club atmosphere, judging from the numerous attractions scheduled.

At Manheim, the home of the Germantown Cricket Club, the ladies' annual lawn tennis tournament for singles, doubles and mixed doubles will begin Monday, September 28. This event never fails to draw large crowds of spectators, including devotees of the Manheim contestants as well as enthusiastic rooters from all the surrounding cricket and country clubs. The tennis committee includes Miss Hannah P. Wright, Mrs. Mantle Fielding, Mrs. William P. Newhall, Miss Mary Merrick.

Last week there was a golf tournament at the Philadelphia Cricket Club, St. Martin's, and on next Tuesday the Berthelton golf tournament will open at the Huntingdon Valley Club, in which most of the prominent nearby golf players will take part.

"Blindness of Virtue"

The beautiful young daughter of an English vicar is brought up in ignorance regarding the facts of facts. She knows nothing about eugenics or a lack of eugenics. The girl and a youth, with whom she falls in love, are drawn back from the proverbial abyss "in time." This is the theme of the "Blindness of Virtue," by Cosmo Hamilton, well played by a company of English actors at the Orpheum.

"The Conspiracy"

A young woman kills the leader of a band of white slaves and is sought by the police. She is engaged as stenographer by a shrewd, whimsical writer of detective yarns, who writes a tale about the crime committed by the girl and brings her to confess to him. However, he saves her, and virtue triumphs. A thrilling detective drama, successful in New York and revived, with excellent acting, at the American.

"An Aerial Honeymoon"

The tricks of the stage are infinite. In the new production by the Brothers Byrne, of "Eight Balls" fame, an aeroplane voyage literally lifts beholders from their seats. There is a collision between two motor cars and the demolition of a Swiss inn by a runaway express train. A rough-and-tumble, fun-making entertainment.

Rebecca

The delightful Rebecca, of Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," quite captivates from the romantic settings on the stage of the Walnut. Marguerite Henry plays Rebecca with winning charm. A sweet, appealing story of boyhood and girlhood.

New Victor Herbert Comedy

"The Debutante," a new comedy by Harry B. and Robert B. Smith, with a musical score by Victor Herbert, had its premiere at the new Nixon Theatre in Atlantic City last night. Hazel Dawn appeared as the star. The supporting company includes Zoe Barnett, Sylvia Jason, Maude Odell, Will West, William Danforth, Stewart Baird and Robert G. Pitkin.

Broadway

Down at the Broadway Theatre, in South Philadelphia, the headliner this week, Seymour Brown's "The Bachelor's Dinner," proves screamingly funny. Sixteen persons are in the company, and each stands out as an expert in a particular line.

SHALL A WIFE DARE WHAT A HUSBAND DOES?

Problem of Men's Neglect and Deception of Wives Theme of "The Revolt." A Play That "Gets Across."

A waiting wife—a wife waiting late in the night for the husband to return—who, loving, deludes herself into believing her husband's excuses and untruths, and who, caring for the home and a child, is stunted by a meagre allowance, makes over old dresses and bears negligence patiently. A wife tortured with suspicions, harrowed with jealousy, still devoted and meek and silent. A pathetic figure—a too common figure in life. Her counterpart is to be found in the little frame dwellings of every town, in the drab roomeries of every hive, like city apartment house.

It has remained for Edward Locke to present this pitiable human drama in such a popular way as to express and bring home the injustice of the double standard of morals in the marriage relation in "The Revolt," which opened at the Adelphi last night. One might say it remained, through the vehicle of Mr. Locke's play, for Helen Ware to present the heart tragedy of too many wives.

"The Revolt" as a play has excellent qualities. It transplants complications and phases of actual life to the stage. It carries its appeal convincingly. It is a play that must seriously do good. While it throws before its audience, in the second act, the meretricious elegance and luxury of vicious living, as maintained by self-righteous, self-justifying men, "The Revolt" is clean and salutary. It is an American play, dealing with familiar domestic conditions. It is as effective a play on its theme as was the antiseptic, much-exploited drama of Brieux on another.

Anna Stephens, the wife, has waited for her husband night after night for seven years. There was only a honeymoon year of happiness. John, the husband, acted by Alphonse Ethier, spends his evenings as many husbands do, and while he tells his wife he works at the office, mingles in the company of a certain kind of emancipated women. To them he gives his money. A tribute must be paid to Miss Ware as an actress. Unaffected by the tricks of the stage, intellectual in her interpretation, her acting has the simplicity of really great talent. One is never conscious of the actress, you see only the wife. Such a portrayal is art.

Assured of her husband's infidelity by her scheming, villainous, whisky-addicted step-mother, who urges her to the life which, if it costs her money, brings money to women, Anna confronts John with evidence of his misdoings in a letter received from a woman. The long pent-up passion of years bursts forth, and Anna rushes forth to the life of freedom enjoyed by the husband, while her precipitate flight after midnight in the morning from the dingy flat in Brooklyn to the "swell" apartment of Flora La Rose, formerly Lina Schmidt, her old school chum, on Riverside drive, raises a doubt as to its plausibility, it is supposedly excused by the claim of dramatic exigencies. Most women would wait till morning and, if they loved their child as prodigiously as Anna did, would take their child with them.

In striking contrast to the mean home of the decent wife, the second act flaunts the allurements and horrors of the luxurious home of the abandoned woman. Beth Franklyn, as La Rose, is shockingly true to life, we just almost hate to make her acquaintance in public. A night, or rather very early morning, revel takes place, and Anna Stephens, radiant in a gown of Parisian gown of rose satin and spangled silver, is wooed by an intoxicated admirer. She drinks champagne, smokes, smokes cigarettes, finally breaks down and weeps. There is a struggle, for the indomitable honesty and purity of Anna's nature recoil from the abyss. At the crucial hour Anna is rescued by one of the anonymous visitors, and is about to flee when a telephone message informs her of the serious illness of her child.

Over the bed of the child, believed to be dying, the husband, confronted with the folly of
