NORDICA THE SONGBIRD A PRODIGIOUS WORKER

Earned Great Fees, But First She Ever Received Was Paid For Silence.

Apart from her artistic achievements, Mme. Nordica, for many years one of the most popular soprano vocalists on the operatic and concert stage, whose recent death was so widely deplored on both sides of the Atlantic, enjoyed the distinction of being the greatest woman wage-earner in the world. On one occasion she received a fee of $500 ($300) for one concert of one hour's duration at Washington, while it was her custom for several years prior to her death to sing at a hundred concerts during a period of 23 weeks—an average of nearly four concerts per week—for which she received the total sum of $35,000, of which she received the total sum of $35,000, of which she received the total sum of $35,000.

Curiously enough—and Mme. Nordica herself often told the story—the first fee she ever received was not for singing, but for consenting not to sing. As a little girl at her home in Farmington, Mass., she used to love to try her voice at all times, and much to the annoyance of her elder sisters, would persist in joining in with them whenever they sang duets together. So, in order to silence the future diva, they resorted to bribery and gave her some money on condition that she promised to keep quiet.

It was Mme. Nordica's greatest delight, however, to spend a portion of the huge fees she earned in providing for her old servants and pet animals. As a matter of fact, part of her estate at Hempstead, on Long Island, was given over to the use of her old servants, who lived in the greatest comfort.

No singer ever worked harder than Mme. Nordica, who thought nothing of traveling three or four thousand miles in three or four months, and singing at times every night in the week.

"You have gained fame and fortune," her friends would sometimes remark to her. "Why do you go on singing?"

To such inquiries Mme. Nordica would say that art is to every artist the breath of life, and it was that passionate devotion to her art which chained her to the stage and concert platform, when she might have been enjoying well-earned repose in one of her country homes.

To young aspirants for operatic honors who sought her advice, Mme. Nordica was always kind. But, as she once remarked, "If you are a singer at all, you have always been one. All great singers will tell you that they have sung from their earliest childhood. If you have any future as a singer, you must have done something before you are 16."

THE DRAMA

GRACE GEORGE. COMING TO THE ADELPHI IN A NEW PLAY

THEATRICAL BAEDER

ADELPHI—"The Revolt," by Edward Locke, starring Helen Ware. Should a wife take the same liberties as her husband? She should not! A sermon for derelict benedict.

BROAD—"Drugged," melodrama by Owen Davis, with John Mason as railroad magnate with a penitentiary past. As like real life as the novels of Hall Corelli and Marie Calne. Shows why you shouldn't accuse another man of murder if you've done the deed yourself.

CHESTNUT STREET OPERA HOUSE—"Cordelia," moving-picture drama, by Gabrielle D'Annunzio, of the third century B. C. A truly marvelous feat on the reel, with a convincing volcanic eruption.

FORREST—"Ziegfeld Follies," a potpourri of songs, jokes and spectacular effects; entertaining without consuming brain-phosphorus.

GARRICK—"Adele," French operetta, with captivating music. Reversals in love, with a husband falling in love with his wife.

KEITH'S—Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle—their dances are the music of motion.

WALNUT—"Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," by Kate Douglas Wiggin. Return of this popular, simple and appealing play.

FLASHES FROM "STARS"

A few weeks ago Miss Margaret Anglin, who will shortly appear at the Broad Street Theatre, visited the studio of a well-known New York photographer. The young woman in charge of the ladies' department was a stranger in the studio and unfamiliar with theatrical celebrities. She was instructed to take the name of each visitor before they posed, as well as the name of the company and management. When Miss Anglin arrived she was ushered to the dressing room. "Name, please," said the young woman. "Margaret Anglin," answered the actress. "Would you please mind spelling it?" said the young woman. Miss Anglin did. "The name of your manager?" queried the young man. "My own," replied Miss Anglin. "And the name of the company?" continued the young woman. "My own company, please," said Miss Anglin, highly amused. The pictures were made. When the bill came to Miss Anglin's office it was made out to "Margaret Anglin, My Own Company, Please, care Manager MY OWN." "What is fame," sighed Miss Anglin, "when one is unknown to photographers' clerks?"

One night last week Daniel Frohman attended a performance of "Cordelia Blossom" at the Gaiety Theatre, New York. Upon leaving the theatre during the first intermission he did not
