MISS HELEN KESTER WILL BECOME BRIDE TODAY

Married to William Hooton Roberts, Jr., at Christ Church Chapel, Nineteenth and Pine Streets, This Afternoon.

The wedding of Miss Helen Boyd Kester, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Kester, of 242 Spruce street, to William Hooton Roberts, Jr., will take place this afternoon at Christ Church Chapel, on Pine street near Nineteenth, at 4 o'clock.

Miss Kester will be given in marriage by her father. She will wear a gown of soft white satin, which is made with a court train of the same, over which is draped an exquisite veil of chantilly lace from the shoulders to the end of the long train. This piece of lace is an old family heirloom. Her veil will be made of tulle and will be fastened at the hair with orange blossoms. Orange blossoms will be used also to attach the tulle veil over the lace at the end of the train. She will carry a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Margaret Kester, a sister of the bride, will act as maid of honor. In order to fully carry out the idea of an autumn wedding the maid of honor's costume will be a symphony of brown and gold. Her frock will be of old gold charmeuse with a gold lace tunic and a grille of old blue. The hat will be of brown velvet trimmed with gold lace and a shaded gold and brown rose. She will carry golden dahlias. The bridesmaids will be Miss Margaret Stokes Roberts and Miss Elizabeth West Roberts, sisters of the bridegroom; Miss Mary Boyd and Miss Elizabeth Thompson. They will wear gowns of old blue and griddles of old gold Pompadour satin. Their hats will be of a lighter shade of brown than that of the maid of honor. They will carry autumn dahlias.

Mr. Roberts will be attended by his cousin, Francis C. Stokes, as best man, and his ushers will be Leonard C. Ritts, Herbert M. Lowry, Sydney S. Morris and Kenneth A. Rhoad. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. J. H. L. Nisbett, rector of the church, and will be followed by a small reception at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kester. Mrs. Kester, the mother of the bride, will wear a smart gown of black velvet, over which is draped a tunic of white lace edged with marten fur. Her hat will be of black velvet, trimmed with old gold roses and lace.

THE DRAMA

THEATRICAL BAEDEKER

ACADEMY OF MUSIC—"Cabella," moving picture drama, by Gabrielle D'Annunzio, of the third century B. C. A truly marvelous feat on the reel, with a convincing volcanic eruption. ADELPHI—"The Revolt," by Edward Locke, starring Helen Ware. Driven desperate, a neglected wife seeks the gaiety enjoyed as a preface to her husband, but comes home one day too late. BROAD—"Lady Windermere's Fan." Revival of Oscar Wilde's satire by Margaret Anglin. Review tomorrow. CHESTNUT STREET OPERA HOUSE—"Pilate's Daughter," miracle play, by Francis L. Kenzel. Review tomorrow. GARRICK—"Nearly Married," farce comedy, by Edgar Selwyn, starring Bruce Melton. Review tomorrow. KRITHS—Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, in original dances. WALNUT—"Bringing Up Father," musical comedy, based on George McManus' cartoons, by Gus Hill. Review tomorrow.

she dedicated a home for actresses in a cypress grove near Rome as her gift to the profession. "To save the theatre the theatre must be destroyed," and Duse once, "the actors and actresses must all die of the plague. They poison the air; they make art impossible. It is not drama they play, but pieces for the theatre. We should return to the Greeks, and play in the open air; the drama dies of stalls and boxes and evening dress, and people who come to the theatre to digest their dinner."

William Gillette, Blanche Bates and Marie Doro, Charles Frohman's triple dramatic star combination, will appear at the Broad in "Diplomacy" later in the season. Mr. Gillette's appearance is the first since his last appearance in his own play, "Secret Service," "Sherlock Holmes" and "The Private Secretary," at the Empire Theatre, New York, four years ago. Miss Bates has not appeared here since the commencement of her Western tour in the A. E. W. Mason play, "The Witness for the Defense." Miss Doro returns to this country after a year's absence in London, where she acted Lora in the London production of "Diplomacy." The English members of the "Diplomacy" cast arrived on the Lusitania Friday.

The Retort Courteous

Mr. Chamberlain once said that the most courteous retort he ever heard of dated from the time when elections were far more rough-and-tumble than they are now. Thackeray was one of the candidates, and his opponent in the street and stopped to talk. After a few minutes' conversation the opponent prepared to depart, saying as he moved off: "Well, may the best man win!" "Oh, I hope not," replied Thackeray, courteously.—Pearson's Weekly.

FLASHES FROM "STARS"

"It is an open question," says William Collier, "whether the married man had best take the blame upon himself after a quarrel with his wife and endeavor to smooth matters over peaceably or not. Sometimes the wife is so snippy and indifferent after the poor man's efforts that he regrets having taken this course. I know a young couple of the stage to whom just this sort of thing happened.

"They had been quarreling, and the young husband, regretting it and being anxious to 'make up,' brought a little gift for the wife.

"Edna," he said, 'come here. Aren't you curious to know what is in this package?'

"Oh, not very," replied Edna, belligerently, as she glanced at the package in question. 'I rather think I can endure the strain.'

"Well," he said, coaxingly, trying to win her to good humor, 'it's something for the one I love best in all the world. Now, guess?'

"Indeed?" sniffed Edna, as she started to leave the room. 'I suppose, then, it's that pair of new trousers you said you needed.'

Liane Carrera, Anna Held's daughter, advises parental disobedience—sometimes. "My mother insisted last spring I go with her to Paris. I refused," said Miss Carrera, "and mother didn't like it a bit. Well, the last I heard from her was a letter dated August 12. She wrote it was terrible over there. They have taken her automobile. All the hotels and shops are closed, the schools are made into hospitals and there is no money in the banks. She herself cannot cash a check, and they only allow 5 per cent. of deposits. She also says there is no way of getting out of Paris, all the trains being used by the Government. So I suppose that as soon as she can get away she will come over here. For my own sake, if I were not so worried for my mother, and if I were sure she was safe, I would sacrifice five lambs to the gods, because they gave me the wonderful inspiration of being my mother's disobedient daughter. If I had been a nice little girl I would be in Paris now, and perhaps may have starved to death."

Johnny Dove, who deserted vaudeville to play here in the "Ziegfeld Follies" as Honest Bill, has gained at least half his reputation on the manner in which he shakes his feet. Last season at the time of the Ohio flood, when starting with the A. G. Field Minstrels, he was called upon to do a turn at a benefit for the flood sufferers.

"My little act," modestly relates Mr. Dove, "followed the Divine Sarah Bernhardt and preceded the kirtled John Drew. While rehearsing my music Mr. Drew came on the stage with 15 people to rehearse his act. I had never met him and had only observed his stately demeanor as a member of the audience at his plays, and I felt sure that I was honoring him, knowing that dancing shoes, in St. Louisville vaudeville, are termed 'sketch disturbers.'"

"But quite to my surprise Mr. Drew was very much interested, and confessed that he had a large porch built on his home in Nottingham, L. I., with a special dancing floor. There he and his valet, an old minister man, would rattle off 10 or 20 steps every morning for exercise. Considering Mr. Drew's worldwide reputation for imperturbability and calm, I like to see the picture of Mr. Drew at his morning exercise of jogging and raxing. 'Imagine him!'"

Eleanor Duse is to retire permanently from the stage. She gives up, so report has it, because she cannot find suitable plays, though her age has also been a factor in her retiring retirement. She is now 55. She has been on the stage since she was 14 years old. Recently
